ENDS IN CRASH

Throngs of Theatergoers Witness Scenes of Horror; No Cause of Catastrophe Found.

West Plains, Mo., April 14.—(United News)—The bodies of 39 persons lay in morgues here tonight—victims of a "Friday the 13th" dance. A tabulation made late today showed that all but ten of the dead had been identified.

Corpses in morgues tonight represented the major part of a group of mermymakers from over this entire district who had gathered to celebrate Friday the 13th with a dance.

As the orchestra started "Home, Sweet Home," the last dance of the evening, an explosion wrecked the hall, started a city block afire and deluged the dancers with burning gasoline and oil.

All night the workers fought the flames.

The toll mounted steadily today as the embers cooled sufficiently for firemen to enter the ruins. Groups of friends and relatives of the victims gathered weeping outside as the bodies were brought forth. The bodies were taken to morgues for identification. Some were burned beyond recognition.

So far as is known, none of the dancers escaped uninjured. Many received treatment for burns and other injuries and some were believed in a dangerous condition.

An investigation into the explosion was started today. The owner of the garage was killed and it could not be learned what caused the blast.

Miss Dimples Martin, housewife, called in to the hall for a cigarette at the piano and stepped up the last number on the evening's program "Home, Sweet Home." A terrific explosion came from the garage beneath the dancers' feet and the hall was converted into a twisted mass of wreckage.

Dusts flew through the air. There were heartbreaking screams and cries of agony.

The injured struggled and crawled through the darkness as best they could. Many were too injured to call and died in the fire. Some were killed outright by the flying debris or burned to death.

Quickly organized rescue crews pulled many from the wreckage and carried them to hospitals.

Property damage caused by the explosion amounted to approximately $250,000. There were several small fires and the entire incinerated the garage and dance hall and these were either blasted to bits or burned by the fire which followed the blast.

The garage was owned by J. N. Wiles, himself a victim of the blast.

Wiles had gone to the garage to sell gasoline to a motorist.

In reports he opened the door of his garage and immediately the explosion took place. When his body

OFFICIALS SEEKING FORMER SERGEANT

R. O. T. C. Loss May Reach $5,000; Responsibility for Shortage Has Not Yet Been Placed.

Probability that the Atlanta board of education will be forced to retire shortage estimated at $4,000 to $5,000 in government equipment issued to the R. O. T. C. unit at Tech High school loomed Saturday, when it was learned that an audit of ordnance and uniforms issued to the department is under way to ascertain the cause and nature of the shortage. A search has been instituted for J. L. Flynn, former army sergeant, and until a few weeks ago supply sergeant at the institution.

Sergeant Flynn began a two weeks' vacation on March 4, and has not reported back to duty. Officials recently began a check of the equipment with the result that a shortage estimated at first between $10,000 and $15,000, was discovered, and Raymond R. Ritchie, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of business affairs, began a careful audit of accounts.

Since that time, the shortage has Georgia Educators in Closing Session Also Seek Commission To Work Out Teachers' Salary Scale.

Adoption of resolutions recommending that the appropriation for public schools be increased by at least $1,000,000 for 1930-1931, that a commission work out a plan for a graduated salary schedule for teachers based on training and experience, and that a state supervisor of health and physical education be appointed to serve with the department of education, featured the closing session Saturday of the Georgia Education Association's sixty-third annual convention at the auditorium.

The commission which will be responsible for the graduated salary plan will be composed of the state superintendent, E. C. Finner, assistant secretary of interior, who testified for the government that Fall excluded him from the Teapot Dome lease negotiations.

Although he handled all other oil affairs for the department, Fall is expected to testify that the lease did not require competitive bidding, and that his work on the Elk Hills lease kept him busy to the exclusion of Teapot Dome.

MEXICANS ENJOY ROBBERLESS NIGHT ON FRIDAY, 13TH

Mexico City, April 14.—(AP)—The biggest news in the world today, in the judgment of the newspaper, El Sol, was the fact that nobody was killed in Mexico City on Friday night. The paper came out this afternoon with a front-page, eight-column, double-deck, black-faced streamer headline which said:

"For the first time in many years we have in Mexico City one night without robberies or crimes."

J. Lawrence McCord Suggests Beautification of Station Area by Renovation of Buildings.

Declaring that the city of Atlanta has spent approximately $707,988 to facilitate construction of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts in accordance with wishes of the railroads affected by erection of the projects; that conversion of the Union depot into a freight terminal where coal burning engines would continue to pollute the atmosphere to the detriment of property in that area would be a hardship on owners in the vicinity, and that the people of Atlanta should have an "understanding" with railroads in regard to the plan for use of the lines before consenting to the suggested abandonment of the depot as a passenger terminal, in order to protect property owners in the vicinity. Frank L. Neely, chairman of the Atlanta bond committee, told S. J. Johns, N. F., April 14.—(United News)—Tucked away in a little stretch of land above the sea in the Straits of Belle Isle, the three aviators of the German plane Bremen were preparing today to return to civilization by boat, airplane or dog sled.

Every possible agency of relief was being made ready to bring the Bremen's crew from Greenly island, where the plane landed yesterday—completing the first westward trans-Atlantic flight—to the mainland.

All Details Meager.

Only the most meager details have come from Captain Hermann Koehl, Baron Ehrenfried Gunther von Huenfeld and Colonel James E. Fitzmaurice regarding their flight, but what is already known is sufficient to understand the hazard of the undertaking. It explains, in part at least, why five men and two women were lost on similar adventures.

Messages direct from the Bremen's crew said their plane had been quite badly damaged.

The machine probably cannot be repaired for a few days, the messages said, precluding the possibility that the Bremen might resume its flight to New York today.

Land on Lake.

The plane, messages said, was lost in a fog Friday. For hours its crew tried to pick its way through the baron, the captain, and the Irish air force commander were helpless against the elements—such as probably spelled tragedy for three pilots in three separate trans-Atlantic flights.

They sought a landing. They took their chance in an ice-packed lake on Greenly island.

Skillful pilot that he is, Koehl made a safe landing on the lake, about 20 miles from the Labrador mainland.

Despite the terrific physical hardships of the trans-Atlantic crossing, which, according to estimates based on the crew's messages, must have taken more than 36 hours, and the nerve-wracking tension of such an undertaking, the fliers reported they were in excellent condition.

SPALDING HEADS BAR ASSOCIATION

Clarence S. Darrow, in Whimsical Speech, Denies All Responsibility for Success in Law.

Jack J. Spalding, one of Atlanta's most prominent lawyers, was elected president of the Atlanta Bar association for the ensuing year, and Clarence S. Darrow, nationally known attorney, gave a "heart-to-heart" talk to more than 250 members of the organization at its annual banquet Saturday night at the Biltmore hotel.

James A. Davis was named vice president of the body and William Mathews was elected secretary and treasurer. The executive committee of the association will be named at a later date, it was announced.

Tracing briefly in his own whimsical style his career, Mr. Darrow declared that his and all other successes are due entirely to elements outside the individual, and not to any force exerted from within the body.

Chicago Chamber Will Open Branch Office in Atlanta

Establishment in Atlanta of a branch office of the Chicago Association of Commerce, one of the outstanding trade bodies of the country, to serve as a distributing center throughout the southeast for information on the middle west and as a means of bringing the two sections into closer commercial relations, was announced Saturday by Colonel J. E. Miller, of the domestic and foreign trade section, Chicago Association of Commerce, who is in Atlanta to organize the office.

The office will be in charge of a staff of trade and commerce experts who will be in position to advise industrial heads in the south on trade conditions of the middle west. Colonel Miller added: "Since I have leased on the ground floor of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce building and will be ready to operate its service by May 1.

Better Trade Relations.

Colonel Miller, former army officer and noted industrial organizer for more than 20 years, expressed confidence that the movement would be the first step in establishing increased trade relations between the south and middle west that would be of value to the population of both sections. In an interview Saturday he made the following statement:

"By selection of this city and section as the logical location for this establishment, Chicago has recognized Atlanta as the 'gateway of the south' and, while other southern cities have been considered, it is significant that Atlanta has been chosen as the proper

Mrs. Martha T. Clark, widely experienced in the operation of tea rooms and here from Winter Haven, Fla., where she conducted her own tea room, now is hostess at Nunnally's 150 Peachtree street store in the Constitution Building.

In addition to conducting her own highly successful tea room in Winter Haven, Mrs. Clark, who is a native Atlanta, formerly was assistant manager of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, who is in Atlanta to organize the office.

The office will be in charge of a staff of trade and commerce experts who will be in position to advise industrial heads in the south on trade conditions of the middle west.

Large Chicago Plants.

Many of the largest Chicago institutions are well established in the south and many branches are being established here. The list of Chicago branches includes several of the largest local institutions of recent establishment, not only in Atlanta but in other southern cities. Also it should not be overlooked that Atlanta's best market for many of its products is found in the midwest.

The new adjustment of freight rates established after 40 years legal fight means just as much to the potential advantage of Atlanta and the southeast as to the midwest and Chicago. All of this means that we are just now beginning to realize the great advantage to be gained by a concerted effort at closer acquaintance and better understanding of new conditions and trade relations."

been more noticeable than in children handicapped by defective vision.

Examination of the eyes shows that all is needed for treatment for diseased eyes are glasses to correct errors resulting from eye strain and other troubles in many thousands of cases, and it is not even necessary to form special classes for these children, she said. Miss Hathaway pointed out that if teachers would observe the attitude of the child at his work and endeavor to determine whether he is suffering from eye strain or other disability, the serious economic waste involved in repeating classes would be reduced.

Miss Mary Dailey Davis, of the bureau of education, Washington, discussed the growth of the kindergarten and the increased recognition of its importance. She said that the number of kindergartens increased 19 per cent, or 1,430, and the number of children enrolled 10 per cent, or 35,410, in 1924 and 1925.

Welfare workers are turning to the kindergarten to solve the problem of mental poverty in children of dependent or underprivileged families, Miss Davis said. Children in such families undergo an actual deterioration in mental equipment between the ages of five and fourteen.

Dr. A. D. Browne, of Peabody college, Nashville, Tenn., was elected president of the Southern Physical Education association and Miss Nellie Paper, of Savannah, president of the Georgia Physical Education association.

At the closing sessions of this joint convention Saturday morning, other officers of the two associations elected Tuesday are: Southern association, Miss Leonora Ivey, of Griffin; vice president; John Sherman, of Montgomery, Ala., secretary for 1923 and president for 1929-31.

And Miss Caro Lane, of Milledgeville, treasurer; Georgia association: Z. D. Henderson, of Statesboro, first vice president; Rhett Turnipseed, of Gainesville, second vice president; Miss Dorothy Gordon, secretary, and Miss Mary E. Lunday, of Athens, treasurer.

Among those on the speaking program of the physical education associations were Commodore W. Longfellow, assistant director of first aid and life saving for the American Red Cross, Washington, and Dr. J. E. Edwards, president of the department of school health and physical education of the National Education association, New York.

RAIL EXTENSION PERMIT DENIED

Washington, April 14.—(AP)—Applications of the Piedmont & Northern railway for permission to extend its lines of railroad from Spartanburg, S. C., to Gastonia, N. C., and from Charlotte to Winston-Salem, N. C., were denied today by the interstate commerce commission.

The Piedmont & Northern construction proposals, the commission held, would result in the paralleling of existing railroads, chiefly the Southern, and would not be necessary to the agricultural and commercial and industrial development of the territory proposed to traverse.

"The construction of the applicant's railroad and its proposed and projected extension presents a rather extraordinary case of an existing line in the commission's decree."

The presumption against such paralleling as is now proposed cannot be overcome by such evidence as is here presented.

The investment proposed would not be justified by the net addition to the railway revenues of the country.

The competitive nature of the enterprise is aggravated by the association of the applicants with large interests which have the power to control or influence much traffic on other grounds than transportation service.

"There would be some advantage to both the applicants and to the communities served in joining the Piedmont & Northern to existing lines. Only a small part of the traffic handled on either is or would be destined to point on the other. They are being operated successfully and the existing railroad does not need further paralleling the Southern closer for a distance of 53 miles. Upon the facts presented we find that the present and future public convenience and necessity is not shown to require the construction by the applicants of the line proposed by them."

Commissioners Echols and McManamy and Braund dissented from the majority and voted to grant the application. Commissioner McManamy, in his dissenting opinion, declared that the Southern and other railroads which obtained to the Piedmont &

Northern extension were among the most prosperous railroad lines of the country and not in danger from the threatened competition.

A Baby for You

Are you denied the blessing of motherhood—the glory of a baby all your own? Do you and your husband yearn for a baby's arm and a baby's smile? Nature does not intend that any woman should be childless. When there is, it is usually due to some weakness or disorder of the organs of reproduction. When these organs are properly toned up, invigorated and helped to function properly, the blessings of motherhood may be realized.

Many women are now praising a remarkable new treatment called "the new birth," which has a decided advantage to both the applicants and to the communities served in joining the Piedmont & Northern to existing lines.

Only a small part of the traffic handled on either is or would be destined to point on the other. They are being operated successfully and the existing railroad does not need further paralleling the Southern closer for a distance of 53 miles. Upon the facts presented we find that the present and future public convenience and necessity is not shown to require the construction by the applicants of the line proposed by them."

Northern extension were among the most prosperous railroad lines of the country and not in danger from the threatened competition.

Prompt Pledge Payments Asked by Community Chest

With public contributions of little man development, the necessity for more than $90,000 as against the general consideration of the problem, the necessity of expending more than $114,000 since January 1 for the Com- thus developed and for prompt pay- munity Chest fund last fall was pointed in the financial statement of the Chest Saturday, as of March 31.

Made in accordance with a promise by the Chest organization to contributors for a regular accounting of expenditures, the statement expressed the danger of loss of effectiveness for the city's work of charity administration and perhaps unneeded suffering as result of delay in pledges.

The Chest has borrowed $20,000 in the three months to maintain the work of its 37 agencies, administrative expenses, $200.00 paid in interest and discount, and subscribers' checks amounting to $6.50 returned. This total expenditure of $114,806.48 developed an actual deficit of $177.97 as of March 31.

The report described the work of the 37 agencies as planned to cover every need of human welfare, salvage, and development of the community, with each agency assigned with a distinct field of service under general supervision and coordination to prevent overlapping and waste. An example of the human activities of the agencies accompanied the report in a statement of the work for March of the Home for Incurables, one of the best known agencies operating in connection with the Chest.

This home, sheltering men and women, young and old, who are aged, incurable, chronic invalids, or physically handicapped to the extent of helplessness, reported 44 cases under new cases and the loss of one inmate by death. The home operates generally, it was reported by Mrs. S. P. Elliott, superintendent, at maximum capacity.

Holiday Garden Club in making attractive the surroundings of the home, and of other organizations in alleviating the lot of the hopeless sufferers who are sheltered there was described by officials as adding to the effectiveness of the institution, which seeks to obtain for the inmates the means said to utilize every means available to do the utmost of work.

THE Steinway has been the personal instrument of almost every great pianist since Liszt. In the truest sense, therefore, it is "The Instrument of the Immortals." Yet it is primarily a piano for the home, and particularly for the home of limited income.

For the lifelong service which this great piano will give you—30, 40, or even 50 years and more—spells real economy. You will save in repair bills and replacements. Its wonderful singing tone will be always yours. There is a model and a price to suit every home, and the terms are very convenient.

Catalog and illustrated literature upon request.

A new Steinway piano can be bought from $900 up

Any Steinway piano may be purchased with a cash deposit of 10%, and the balance will be extended over a period of two years. Used pianos accepted in partial exchange. A few completely rebuilt Steinways are available at special prices.

'Be Kind to Animals' Week To Start in Atlanta Today

With every moving picture house in the city operating and with teachers in the schools lecturing on the subject, this week, beginning today and ending Saturday, April 21, has been proclaimed as national "Be Kind to Animals" Week.

Official proclamations were issued Saturday by Governor L. G. Hardman and Mayor L. N. Ragsdale in cooperation with the national program.

The various lectures and programs in the city during the week will be sponsored by the department of human education of the Fifth District Parent-Teacher association.

Governor Hardman's proclamation is as follows:

"Whereas, We are vastly dependent upon the inferior animals for our subsistence and well-being; and,

"Whereas, We owe great consideration and kindly attention to the creatures who serve submissively to our necessities; and,

"Whereas, The animals of Georgia demand and deserve millions of dollars to the state's resources; and,

"Whereas, It is economic wisdom, as well as human sentiment, to protect the lower animal kingdom; and,

"Whereas, This applies to wild game and domestic animals; and,

"Whereas, The week of April 15-21 has been designated as national "Be Kind to Animals" Week, and the city of Atlanta, municipal assistance and the aid of schools, churches, civic bodies and other agencies, will be given the effort to make the week a period of special protection for our helpless animals;

"Therefore, I, L. G. Hardman, governor of the state of Georgia, do proclaim the period of April 15-21 as "Be Kind to Animals" week in this state, and hope that the people of Georgia will be fully educated throughout Georgia and will implant lessons of thoughtfulness and helpfulness for the benefit of our helpless animals;

"Given under my hand and seal of the executive department. This the 6th day of April, 1928."

DEPOT REMOVAL UNDERSTANDING ASKED

Monday morning at Rich's tea room to protest the removal of the depot, and its conversion to another use which will react to reduce the value of surrounding property.

On the heels of these two moves, Wade H. Davis, president of the Atlanta Civic Association, sent a telegram for publication a letter from J. Lawrence McCord, member of the bond commission, in which it was suggested that steps be taken to reconstruct or renovate the buildings in the viaduct area along a pretentious development plan, which would be in keeping with no idea of construction of a great business district beautified along well-defined lines of architectural beauty.

Officers Should Know Plans.

Holding that if the railway tracks along the route to the abandoned passenger station are to be covered with plazas or with large office buildings, the public should be given a chance to know it in advance of the removal or that, at least, measures to abate the smoke nuisance should be taken in the form of electrification of engines which will do the switching. Mr. Neely stated in his communication to the mayor and to city council.

It is expected that the mayor will refer the letter to council Monday for consideration.

Mr. Neely's communication follows: "In addition to this and solely for the convenience of the approach to the

"The mayor and general council:

"The daily press carries news stories to effect that the corporation and the N. & S. L. railroad are asking for the elimination of the Union station for passenger service, and suggesting the use of said station for freight purposes.

"Everyone will accede to the fact that the elimination for all passenger service is in a public convenience and therefore desirable.

"I do feel, however, that before you, Mr. Ragsdale, and members of the general council, the public service commissioners who have charge of the state's properties, see to this change there should be a very definite understanding as to the future of this property now occupied by the Union station.

Railroads Treated Liberally.

"The railroads have been treated most liberally by the city in their viaduct construction contracts and they (the railroads) have donated over $300,000 to the city, and only

$307,675. This seems quite small when compared with the $1,500,000 that has been supplied from the city and from other sources.

"Lowering the railroad tracks and adjusting the old station to the new level has cost over $350,000. In addition to this cost, we are spending over $150,000 on opening up New Street and paving New and Wall street at the new level.

"In addition to this and solely for the convenience of the approach to the

Use of Property.

"In connection with the utilization of this property there are too possibilities, one, an open freight yard (which would certainly be a very convenient location for the Union station property into a freight terminal and use of the rights of way solely for freight purposes, because of the consequent damage to property in that vicinity.

"The author of the letter points out that he was one of the revivers of the viaduct project and invited those to whom he addressed the letter Saturday to join him in the move. He sets out that the railroads will be asked to join "me in an effort to prevent this proposed destruction of the property, trusting that the parties who have safeguarded the state's property in the past will make an appearance and join hands with us."

The letter was circulated to the following persons: George M. Brown,

E. P. McGuire, John M. Watson,

George W. Felker, Ed. Meyer, P.

McCord's Construction Plan.

Mr. McCord's letter, which was released by Mr. Davis, points out that a systematic construction program in which property owners of the district enter into a pretentious effort to reconstruct the area and in which they will be interested in improving their holdings rather than being satisfied with "paper jobs" will react to rehabilitate the district and make it one of the most valuable sections of the city.

He cites the fact that Fifth ave-ne in New York has been able to retain its prestige and prominence because of such concerted action and suggests that the Intercivic association take steps towards this end.

TAG SALE TO SEND VETS TO REUNION

In an effort to have Atlanta well represented at what may be the last reunion of the "thin grey line," a tag day will be held Saturday to raise funds to send Confederate veterans to Little Rock for the thirty-eighth annual reunion May 8 to 12, it was announced Saturday.

Word received from Little Rock indicates that elaborate preparations are being made for the great reunion and that the Confederate veterans is constantly dwindling as death takes its toll of the aged defenders of the "Lost Cause," and as this may be the last time the comrades will be together, plans are being made to have as many as possible at the meeting.

Mrs. A. O. Woodward has been appointed chairman of the tag day drive by the Atlanta camp No. 150, United Confederate Veterans, and announced Saturday that proceeds of the drive will be used to defray the expenses of the excursion, which will consist of a trip of all Fulton county veterans, who would be unable to meet the additional expenses of going to the reunion.

Headquarters for the tag day have been established at 130 Peachtree street, opposite the Canfield building.

One hundred ladies and their committees of young girls will be on the streets Tuesday selling the tags, and it is hoped that the stock of tags will be quickly exhausted by Atlanta's ready buyers, it was said.

In Richmond, Va., in 1926, between 15,000 and 18,000 veterans attended the reunion. Last year at Tampa around 5,000 attended.

FRANK DEANS' LEGAL HEIRSHIP NOT ISSUE

Attention has been called to the fact that the Deans versus Deans will be divided into two issues, from the beginning of the litigation in the court of ordinary, more than three years ago. The first issue involved the legal heirship of Frank Deans, which was vigorously contested by the executors and beneficiaries of the estate, alleged to be left by his father, Robert E. Deans, in which young Deans was not mentioned. The second issue now pending in supreme court has to do solely with the validity of this will. These divided issues appear to have confused in the newspapers and with the public, the legal status of Frank Deans.

The issue of Frank Deans' legal heirship was established and administered by the court of ordinary in his favor. An appeal was immediately filed and later abandoned. The result of these proceedings irrevocably settled for all time in every way, and everyone, it is believed, is the only son and legal heir of Robert E. Deans, who is alleged to have made at least two wills during his last illness.

Substantial testimony was introduced in the hearing on Frank Deans' heirship to show a ceremonial marriage between his parents. The judgment in the court of ordinary, from which appeal by the executors, W. O. Deans, et al., was withdrawn, recites that the petition of Frank Deans with all allegations was granted. This petition, granted, without reservation or revision, embraced and included the matter referred to in the will.

In a few weeks the Deans versus Deans will case will be argued in supreme court. The issue involved now is the validity of the last alleged will of Robert E. Deans, in which his son, Frank Deans, is not mentioned.

The provision of the will in question leaves Miss Robert Lawrence, a contest winner in Atlanta, Ga., a house and lot on Peachtree road. An alleged will made a few days earlier bequeathed to Miss Lawrence practically all of the estate of Robert E. Deans, originally valued at $100,000.

CORPORATION TRUST OPENS OFFICES HERE

The Corporation Trust company has established a representative here with an office at 1115 Healey building, it was announced Saturday to the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

The company is a newcomer to Atlanta in the sense of having a permanent representative in the city. The Corporation Trust company has been enjoying the patronage of leading lawyers in this section of the country for many years. Its business, of which it was the originator, is rendering assistance and guidance to the organization, affiliation and station representation of business corporations.

The Atlanta office has charge of the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama. It is in charge of James L. Watson, experienced member of the New York office staff.

HARRISON TO ASSUME COUNTY POSITION MAY 1

Education Board Endorses Junior Highs, K-6-3-3 Plan

Major J. C. Harrison, for many years a veteran Atlanta salesman, former president of the Atlanta City Salesmen's Association and local post "B" Travelers' Protective Association, and prominent in fraternal circles of Atlanta and Fulton county, will assume his position as the newly elected secretary of the Fulton county board of registration May 1, following his selection to fill the post.

Members of the Atlanta board of education Saturday were unequivocally on record as favoring junior high schools and the k-6-3-3 plan of education for Atlantans, having concurred unanimously in a resolution offered by W. W. Gaines, of the third ward.

The k-6-3-3 plan involves a kindergarten, six years of elementary school training, three years of junior high school work and three years at the senior high schools, and is said to be the most modern division of instruction in the educational field.

Mr. Gaines' resolution pointed out that the resolution which was passed unanimously by action of the board follows:

"Whereas, there has been some discussion in the city as to whether or not junior high schools should be continued in the Atlanta public school system; and whereas, it is the opinion of the board of education earnestly desired that the city of Atlanta heartily acquiesce in our k-6-3-3 plan, which is the accepted standard of the country over."

"By: W. W. GAINES."

Junior high schools are no longer an experiment in the educational field, nor is their value a mooted question in the educational world. All of the states and all of the large cities of the country have either introduced or are preparing to introduce junior high schools into their systems.

"Therefore, in view of this discussion the board of education desires to record in favor of junior high schools in the educational field."

"Junior high schools are no longer experiments but have proved their actual worth, that they are an integral part of the Atlanta educational system and that practically every modernly-modified public school educational system in the country has incorporated them into the instructional service rendered.

DAVIS WILL SPEAK AT COMMENCEMENT RITES AT G. M. A.

Brigadier General Richmond P. Davis, commander of the Fourth Corps area, is to be the commencement speaker this year at the Georgia Military Academy, according to announcement Saturday by Colonel J. C. Woodward, president. Dr. Leon Latimer, pastor of the First Baptist church of Griffin, will deliver the commencement sermon.

Preparations for the annual inspection of the cadet battalions by regular army officers are under way, and now so on that the school may greet the Fourth Corps area commander on that occasion as again one of the 15 schools in the United States designated as an honor school. The school has been so designated every year since 1914.

Three states and three foreign countries are represented in the list of winners for places by cadets for the anual declamation contest May 26, the first of the regular commencement exercises.

Freshmen: Robert Abvon, Havana, Cuba; Rene Polley, Jr., Havana, Cuba; Robert R. W. Thrower, Tampa, Fla.; Thomas J. Shove, Fernandina, Fla.; William A. Thornton, Atlanta.

Seniors: Loring B. Hunt, Atlanta, Ga.; S. W. Fleming, Jamesville, N. C.; J. R. Peterson, Miami, Fla.

WEST END CLUB PLANS WHITE WAY TO COUNTY LINE

White way lights from Gordon and Lee streets, south, though East Point and College park, to the conn-ty limits, and repaving of Glenn street and McDaniel to Whitehall street, will be the principal topics of discussion at a meeting at 7:30 o'clock Monday night in the Ritz hall, on Lee street, of the West End Business Men's club.

Discussion will also take place on the widening and repaving work being done on Peters street, making it a main thoroughfare from one section of the city to the other without crossing a street or track.

The West End Business Men's club started several months ago and its membership has grown to more than 150. Hall Davis, local automobile dealer, is president and will have charge of the meeting Monday night.

AIR MAIL WILL AID ATLANTA BANKERS

Benefits to be derived by Atlanta from the installation of air mail service to New York will include a saving on the transfer of checks alone, if it was revealed Saturday in an estimate made by local bankers and officials of the Pitcairn Aviation Company, Inc. Service on both the New York and the New Orleans routes will begin May 1.

Transit time to Richmond, Philadelphia and New York will be cut a day, and to Boston two days, there by meaning an extra interest to local banks, as the money will be put to their credit in New York and other transfer points 24 hours earlier, it was said.

The principal banks of the Atlanta Clearing House association and of the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank estimate a saving of $2,150,000 on an average day during a period of several years.

Items served by the Atlanta-York air mail, it was pointed out. At the conservative figure of five percent, this will mean a saving of $205,85 a day, or $91,755 for 313 business days in the year.

On Boston items, the saving is expected to result from the air mail transfer of hundreds of thousands of dollars in bonds, stocks and other negotiable paper.

Hundreds of banks outside of Atlanta which have been handling transfers direct, will begin to send through Atlanta in order to take advantage of the air mail service, local bankers said.

This will boost the daily average of $22,000 in checks between Atlanta and eastern points.

Atlanta will draw more and more branch offices for financial houses with home offices in the east following establishment of the air mail service to New York, New Orleans, Miami and Chicago, bank officials said.

MRS. NELSON EXPLAINS OPPOSITION TO SUTTON

Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, school commissioner from the sixth ward, who voted against reelection of Willis A. Sutton as superintendent of the Atlanta school system at a meeting of the board last Tuesday, Saturday gave out a statement in which she explained why she opposed his selection. Mr. Sutton was reelected by a vote of 9 to 2. Mrs. Nelson's statement follows:

"Were I a teacher or member of the P.T.A., who merely met Mr. Sutton socially or heard him speak, I might be a Sutton enthusiast. He is a magnetic, tactful man and a forcible speaker, but his place is on the platform and not in any responsible educational position. First, because he is a reckless financial committee, one of the ablest men ever on the board of education, who liked Mr. Sutton personally, said the board would be two or three hundred thousand dollars lighter every year even when there was no new building if it followed Mr. Sutton's advice. He invites teachers to make financial demands when they would not otherwise do so.

"Mr. Sutton and I were once guests at a dinner at a schoolhouse given by the Atlanta speech committee. When I spoke I said before the board of education and council were in financial straits and I hoped the school would cooperate with the board in living within its income. In Mr. Sutton's speech he advised the school to ask for a new building. He said when he urged them also to make large demands, the result being that almost the entire time he was consumed in hearing requests for over a million dollars which Mr. Sutton knew his board of education nor council possessed. He has time and time again admitted that he knew perfectly well that the board had no money when he made such large demands. But Mr. Sutton, one reason being that it was unwise ethically to tell the parents and girls of the junior high and senior high together. The junior high had been in operation but two or three years when he called an executive meeting of the board and advised us to convert to converting the beautiful new girls high school into an elementary school and consolidating junior high and senior high schools, completely scrapping the policy which had been put in operation which had been put in operation that no other city had, that this was his own plan. Another member asked if he recommended this consolidation. He replied that he did. I wrote his name down and kept it for reference. Contradiction charged.

"An outstanding and dependable principal told me that a few days afterwards, he told her he had merely suggested such consolidation. At the next board meeting he made the same statement, he had merely suggested it. This contradiction of his in difficulty we constantly have to contend with. His memory seems so treacherous that we can depend upon very little that he says. Mr. Sutton urged a longer school day. The teacher opposed this and the board rejected it. He said it was extremely expensive and said that for 17 cents a day pupils could obtain a better meal than parents could provide at home for that price. Parents vigorously denied this and many principals denied that even were this true a 17 cent meal a pupil could afford 17 cents a day. Many parents having seven children in school. Some principals said the majority in their schools could afford but 5 cents a day. He asked for radio in the schools, was first to obtain the services of principals to this. But he objected to the board granted his request. Newspaper dispatches state that he told Texans that the Atlanta schools had had the most successful year of all, due to radio!

"Some principals laughed at this exaggeration and others said the time devoted to radio was absolutely wasted and was badly needed for fundamentals.

"Dr. Strayer and Englehardt advised the consolidation of Tech High and Boys' High, saying it would greatly reduce expenses and be a benefit to both schools. Mr. Sutton always objected to this, for personal reasons, and when it was finally approved by the board, he secured an encircled plan of what the board had intended. Third, because he will not work. I believe it could be proven that no superintendent of schools ever did more to discredit the public school system on this topic and absented himself from the city, as has Mr. Sutton. An able board member said it embarrassed him to attend his clubs, because men called out 'I'll bet you $5 you don't know where Sutton is, unless you are in the pants.' One cannot obtain accurate information from him about books or business or school conditions or anything connected with the schools.

Disobedient Alleged.

"Fourth, because he will not obey rules. One book of rules states 'the only holiday on the crest of two unexpected and significant delegate victories in Iowa and Oklahoma, Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, over his famous brown derby cocked over his ear, has arrived at Asheville, N.C., for a 'giant vacation.'

"The rules of practical politics had laid aside the traditional implements of political warfare and has chosen to go into the most hostile atmosphere in the country armed only with a peaceful pipe—the politician's symbol of the peace pipe. He goes in unarmed, throwing himself upon the hospitality of a people who are most hospitable folk—striking them in their most vulnerable spot.

"He is not in the south as a candidate. He is not campaigning for delegates. He is not down there to tell them what a great man he is or what he could do for them. He is only paid in the white house. If he did that he probably would hear plenty. But what can the most ardent anti-Smith democrat say when his traditional enemy drops in just to be sociable and enjoy the air and the company of the people he represents. Smith's friends expect somebody can write a nice little political drama entitled, 'He stoops to conquer,' from which a good many other presidential candidates might learn much.

"On Wave's Crest.

"Smith's vacation trip to the south comes just at the time when his progress toward the presidential nomination has reached its most advanced point. It comes at a time when the most bitter anti-Smith leadership is becoming impatient. Under these circumstances, if it is a disastrous stroke for Smith to go down south not as an active candidate but just as friend so that his opponents might see for themselves whether there is much difference in human beings who happened to have been born in wet New York. Friends are wet Smith who is also in the south. If he gets them the delegates will come as a matter of course. More foolish politicians try to reverse the order and that is why their hothouse delegates will with the first frost.

"Smith's vacation cannot be estimated now in terms of delegate totals. His popularity is such a large factor.

"Whether he is nominated will depend largely upon how successful he is in selling himself over the political objections raised against him. He must demonstrate that he is much bigger than the political limitations which have been imposed on him by circumstances.

Hoover Opposition.

"In contrast to the gradual crumbling of the Smith opposition in the democratic party is the stubborn tenacity of the opposition of Secretary Hoover among republican groups.

"Hoover has in his favor the support of the southern democratic leaders.

"The study of science has been given a set back by the introduction of the riveted steel boiler.

Burnishing Rules Claimed.

"So the rule was passed 'the superintendent and assistant superintendent shall each be entitled to one month's vacation during the year on full pay, absence being from the period that shall be of pay.' Dr. Englehardt said Sutton had the rule also.

"He not only broke it, but incited others to break it. An assistant superintendent who asked for longer vacation, said he would not have done so, but Mr. Sutton insisted. He encouraged this assistant to overstay and paid him his stipend.

"He is a teacher or member of the junior high and senior high together. The junior high had been in operation but two or three years when he called an executive meeting of the board and advised us to convert to converting the beautiful new girls high school into an elementary school and consolidating junior high and senior high schools, completely scrapping the policy which had been put in operation that no other city had, that this was his own plan.

"Another member asked if he recommended this consolidation. He replied that he did. I wrote his name down and kept it for reference.

"Mr. Sutton had this last clause inserted. Under this last head he put in the stipend for the assistant superintendent of a chain grocery store. He wanted to put in a pamphlet published by a candy firm and containing their ad. He has three times this year tried to get in the schools projects in which all children would be asked to contribute. These and other fall he has been a child of labor. Many of these parents are out of work in many cases proper clothing and nourishing food are scarce.

5 MEETINGS OPEN IN CITY THIS WEEK

Five conventions will be held in Atlanta this week, assembling approximately 1,000 delegates from various parts of the country, it is announced by the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau.

The Southeastern Water and Light association will open its session at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning for a three-day meeting. The meetings of this body will be presided over by E. O. Sweet, of Birmingham, Ala., president.

The opening meeting will be in charge of L. M. Clarkson, chief engineer of the state board of health, and a number of important exhibits have been prepared. The entertainment program, in charge of L. F. Gordon of Atlanta, composes an automobile ride Tuesday afternoon for the ladies; a dinner for the men is a card party for the ladies on Tuesday night; a shopping tour and matinee for the ladies on Wednesday; the annual banquet on Wednesday night and a trip to Stone Mountain Thursday afternoon.

With more than 100 persons expected to attend, the Georgia agents of the Mutual Life Insurance company, of New York, will open a meeting Tuesday morning at the Biltmore hotel.

The Georgia Building and Loan association will hold its annual convention at the Candler hotel in Decatur, April 17 to 19. Approximately 400 delegates are expected to attend this meeting, according to C. A. Mathews, president of the Decatur association.

The Order of Kamehameha will hold a convention at the Anseley hotel on Thursday. Mrs. Martha E. Stallings, of Atlanta, is national secretary and an unusually large attendance is expected.

The Southern Educational Buyers and Business Officials association will assemble at the Henry Grady hotel Friday for a two-day meeting. George H. Mew, treasurer of Emory university, who is president of the association, which was organized in 1919.

Dr. Harry W. Cox, president of Emory university, will deliver the opening address and Governor Hardman will speak at noon Friday. Twenty subjects relative to finance and college administration will be discussed, it is announced.

DIX TO RECOVER FROM OPERATION, SAYS PHYSICIAN

Hollywood, April 14.—(AP)—Richard Dix, film star, who has been critically ill of pneumonia following an appendectomy operation, announced last Tuesday, rallied his failing hopes for his recovery were held out by his physician, who said: "Barring unforeseen complications, he will recover."

GAZA IS SCENE OF RIOTS BY RELIGIOUS Factions

Jerusalem, Palestine, April 14.—(AP)—Serious riots took place at Gaza yesterday which authorities say were due to Moslem animosity against the International Christian Missionary council, whose presence in Palestine coincided with an acute wave of religious antagonism.

The Gaza Moslems requested police permission to hold a demonstration of protest against the conference. The permission was refused but the district police officer consented to receive a deputation which visited his office during the Mohammedan prayer hour.

WONDERS OF U.S. TOLD BRITISHERS IN 200 LECTURES

More than 200 lectures, illustrated with lantern slides, describing the wonders of the United States, were delivered in the past twelve months in England, according to a address received Saturday in Atlanta by George H. Jewett, general manager of the Blesser company.

These lectures were given before schools and other organizations by members of the "Religion of the United States" mission to the United States. Their enthusiasm over America, as they saw her during war time, and the hospitable reception accorded them here, induced them to undertake the tour. They try to tell young people of England today just what America is and what she is doing.

These are cash prices delivered in Atlanta or by prepaid parcel post anywhere in Georgia.

DEMOCRATS CALL GOVERNING BOARD

Washington, D. C., April 14.—(P)—A call for a meeting of the committee on arrangements on April 20 in Washington was issued today by the democratic national committee.

At this meeting a temporary organization for the Houston convention will be set up, including the selection of a temporary chairman to deliver the keynote address.

The committee is composed of Jesse H. Jones, of Texas, chairman; Norman E. Mack, New York; John A. Julia, Ohio; Charles A. Ferguson, Indiana; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Missouri; Urey Woodson, Kentucky; Tom J. Spelacy, Connecticut; Frank J. Hague, New Jersey; Furnifold M. Simmons, North Carolina; Cordell Hull, Tennessee; Isadore Dockweiler, California; Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thompson, Colorado; George E. Hartman, Illinois; Bruce Kremer, Montana; John S. Cohen, Georgia; John Barnett, Colorado; Mrs. Florence Farley, Kansas; Arthur Mullen, Nebraska; Scott Ferris, Oklahoma; Mrs. Leroy Springs, South Carolina; Howard Bruce, Maryland; Mrs. Dorothy Jackson, New Hampshire, and Miss Alice Gaddell, Maine.

Two former democratic standard bearers, James M. Cox, of Ohio, and John W. Davis, of West Virginia, and Claude J. Bowers, one of the editors of the New York World, are among those mentioned for the temporary and permanent chairmanship.

RESCUERS RUSH AID TO MAROONED FLIERS

midnight Friday to proceed at once to Greenley Island. When news of the fliers' safe landing was received, the Bremen was 200 miles from Greenley island. Her progress will depend on the condition of the ice fields she will encounter.

Many believed the ice cutter would be unable to penetrate the ice-choked waters off the Labrador coast.

C. S. Caldwell, veteran pilot of the Far North, said the only logical way to reach the fliers was by airplane.

"A plane could do it nicely if it were equipped with skids," he said.

Lightkeeper Is Host.

It was believed here that the three airmen were being cared for by Light-house Keeper Lehmeyer and his family, who live on the island, which to proved a haven four centuries ago to a French explorer, just as it is to the three pioneers of the air.

Jacques Cartier, voyaging from France, sighted the island in 1534.

It was tantalizing to realize the two Germans and the Irishman were so near, yet so far from the civilization waiting to claim them.

Murray Bay, Quebec, for Greenley Island was reported to have encountered heavy snow storms in the north country and to have been unable to reach the three fliers.

A second plane was to be sent from Murray Bay tomorrow by the Canadian Trans-Continental Airways.

Return to Murray Bay.

The plane, if successful in getting to Greenley Island, would bring the fliers back to Murray Bay where there is a good landing field.

In view of prevailing weather conditions, however, it was believed the air men would have to wait at Greenley Island until a ship reached them unless they chose to reach Sydney, N. S., by dog sled.

Early messages from the aviators had indicated they needed to repair their plane—the propeller and tail skid of which were believed to have been broken in landing on ice—before noon and start for New York, but the later messages revealed the plane was too badly damaged to be repaired in a few hours.

Met Head Winds.

This much was known: The Bremen had encountered strong head winds in crossing the Atlantic. It was either blown off its course or fog had obscured its pilots from knowing where they were.

They were almost 200 miles north of their course when they landed after cruising for four hours in a thick fog.

A Marconi operator at Point Amour, Labrador, about 20 miles from Greenley Island sent the first word of the flight.

There are only a few residents on Greenley Island, beside the lighthouse keeper and his family. Fishermen, their names not known, a livelihood. Even in summer the grey, bleak island is a deserted spot.

There are fishing places close by, particularly at Blane Sablon, only five miles from where the Bremen came down.

Ice Barrier Tight.

Reports from Greenley Island said the ice was heavy and tight along the course, the ice cutter Montcalm would have to traverse. At the best speed, it would reach the island at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Captain Koehl, master of the cutter, knows the northern waters as well as any man.

Sealing steamers have been jammed in the ice for two weeks on the Newfoundland side of the gulf but conditions were more favorable for the continuance.

At noon there was an easterly wind, with ice moving off the Anticosti coast, tightening up, however, on the Greenley side.

It was probable the Montreal would be able to go.

Ran Out of Fuel.

If Koehl, von Huenfeld and Fitzmaurice decide to fly to New York in their own plane they would have to get gasoline in Greenley Island, it being impossible to land because the ran out of gas.

The only quality obtainable there is ordinary gasoline. If their supply is not sufficient for the trip to New York, they probably will not risk the flight with ordinary gas.

The plane, which is trans-Continental railway planes, the one which set out today was piloted by Dr. Louis Cuisinier. Another, which is to leave Murray Bay tomorrow, will be piloted by Romeo Dothan.

The plane, a Fairchild, especially equipped for long-distance flight service on the north shore of the St. Lawrence river. Their maximum flying speed is 160 miles an hour. They

NuGrape Co. Plans Reception As New Drink Is Introduced

Coincident with introduction to Atlanta and this district of a new line of soft drinks known as "Nu-Jer," the NuGrape Bottling company, of Atlanta, will hold an open house at the modern new plant recently erected on Peters street, it was announced Saturday by W. Guy Dobbs, general manager and secretary and treasurer of the organization.

Popularity of NuGrape and its introduction to other beverages manufactured by the same firm and along the same high type and distinctive line as NuGrape have compelled the company to seek larger quarters and to accede to the wishes of the public to manufacture other drinks it was to manufacture.

With this end in view, the company has arranged for manufacture and distribution of 15 other flavors which will embody the exclusive flavor and high quality which is contained in Nu-Jer.

The open house will be marked for elaborate receptions, one beginning at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and lasting until 11 o'clock at night and the other at 10 o'clock Thursday morning and continuing until 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Mr. Dobbs stated, "The open house will be marked for elaborate receptions, one beginning at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and lasting until 11 o'clock at night and the other at 10 o'clock Thursday morning and continuing until 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Mr. Dobbs stated, invitations have been issued to Atlantans to attend. An orchestra will furnish music and several vaudeville acts will be included on the entertainment program.

The plant will be in full operation during the reception and visitors will have an opportunity to see just how the new drinks are bottled and the extreme care taken to assure a pure clean product.

Favors will be distributed to all

Start Is Mystery.

The Bremen's flight actually started March 26. It was a mysterious start.

The machine left Tempelhof air-drome, Berlin, at 2:08 a. m. (eastern standard time). Its destination was not known.

Nine hours and 20 minutes later it landed at Baldonnel air-drome, Dublin, with Koehl, pilot, and von Huenfeld, financial backer, was Arthur Spindler. He was the mechanic.

At the 16 1/2 days which elapsed between the arrival at Baldonnel and the departure, something happened to the Bremen which has not been revealed.

Spindler returned to Germany and Fitzmaurice, commandant of the Irish Free State air force, replaced him.

The modified aristocrat and friend of a former foreign prince, Baron von Huenfeld, the daughter of a pilot, Captain Koehl and the smiling Irishman, Colonel Fitzmaurice, wait at Greenley Island to continue their journey to New York and glory.

to place the junior high school system in the primary, that citizens of the city consider the system an educational

City Wide Demand Answered.

Mayor Ragsdale, in response to an almost and almost citywide demand, vetoed the paper and announced that he felt the people of the city are more interested in judicious and economic use of the bond funds than they are with an attempt to abolish the junior high school system. Members of the administration department, parent-teacher organizations, professional men and members of the Atlanta

Chamber of Commerce, were present at the meeting.

Mr. Lyle pointed out that even if the junior high school system in the primary, which was the freely predicted outcome of the ballot if the issue had been placed before the public, the building program would be delayed to such a degree that there would not be enough time to complete the new school system.

Mr. Lyle will offer a motion to award of the junior high school annexes, council will have before it recommendations that contracts be let for the construction of Whitefield, Edgewood and Edgewood schools and new schools at Haygood-

Street, Morningside, and Grant park.

These contracts will total about $534,-

000, in addition to more than $600,-

With 'Bobby' Jones at Helm, $50,000 Disabled Veterans' Campaign Will Open Monday

Plans To Be Perfected at Luncheon at Athletic Club; Prompt Response Expected.

With Robert T. "Bobby" Jones, Jr., world's champion golfer, as general chairman of the drive, the campaign for $50,000 at Atlanta's quota of the $2,000,000 fund for Disabled American Veterans of the World War will get under way at 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at a luncheon at the Athletic club, it was announced Saturday.

At Monday's meeting, teams will be organized in regular military fashion to conduct the canvass for the funds, and all arrangements for the drive will be perfected. Campaign leaders predicted that Atlanta's response to the appeal will be so prompt that the drive will be completed within a few days.

100 to Participate.

Headquarters for the campaign will be established in the Peachtree building, at Baker and Peachtree streets.

More than 100 leading Atlantans are expected to participate. These workers will be divided up into military companies under officers, so as to inject competition into the campaign.

"Bobby" Jones is calling his forces together for an attack on Atlanta's open-hearted citizenry that will make the rest of the country sit up and take notice of this city's pride in her men who gave almost all for her, men for whom the war was yet over, men who had been dead and in their dying cannot ask for it themselves but have thousands who are ready to do it for them," said an announcement of the drive.

Bobby Jones was tendered the chairmanship of the organization committee's office in Mayor Ragsdale's office recently. Mayor Ragsdale is a member of the committee, and is putting all possible effort into support of the campaign.

"No other national figure is followed so closely by the disabled veterans in their hospitals as Bobby, and this fact gives the drive a greater impetus than any other factor," it was said.

Leaders Enlist Services.

Among those who have enlisted their services on the disabled veterans' committee are Governor L. G. Hardman, former Governor Hugh M. Johnson, the Rev. Father M. A. Cotter, Rev. David May, Milton Darigan, Jr., president of the chamber of commerce, Baxter Maddox, president of the junior chamber; Eugene R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve bank; Julian V. Booth, former Bishop of Georgia; Tech-Roy Dowdy, Colonel W. C. Edwards, Harrison Jones, Rev. N. R. H. Moore, Colonel Earl Pierce, L. D. Sharp, George West, Lauren Foreman, J. S. Kennedy, John Paschall, Clark Howell, St. John S. Cohen, Major W. H. Price, Rev. G. C. Schenck.

In a recent letter to Bobby Jones, commendation of the drive is expressed by Asa W. Candler, department commander of the American Legion in Georgia. "You are certainly doing a great cause for your friends. Call upon your friends in Atlanta for service in assisting the disabled American veterans of the world war to raise their endowment fund for the purpose of perpetuating their liaison service in the various veterans' bureau offices," Mr. Candler said.

Mayor To Extend Official Welcome At Kamelia Meet

Mayor L. N. Ragsdale will extend the official welcome of the city to delegates to the national convention of the Order of Kamelia, which will be held in Atlanta on Thursday and Friday next. Many distinguished women from the different states of the union are expected in the city prior to the official opening of the convention.

Miss Martha E. Stallings, of Atlanta, is national secretary of the order, and heads the program and entertainment committee for the local organization, office host to the gathering.

High lights in the entertainment program will be a banquet Friday night at which the national officers and delegates will be honor guests and a sightseeing trip to Stone mountain on Saturday morning after the business sessions of the convention are concluded.

The Order of Kamelia is an independent, non-political, non-religious, non-sectarian organization controlled solely by and for women, it is stated. It is a ritualistic, fraternal order and among objects listed in its charter are protection and expansion of Protestant Christianity, upholding of the constitution of the United States, maintaining sanctity of the home, defense of the household and upholding white supremacy, freedom of speech and worship, separation of church and state, clean, honest government and free public schools.

Baptist Elementary League To Hold April Meeting Next Tuesday

The Atlanta Baptist Elementary League will hold its annual meeting at 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Second Baptist church. The meeting will be featured by a "Mother's program," with Mrs. John S. Spalding speaking on "How the Elementary Division May Help Mothers." Mrs. John S. Spalding, president of the League, junior member, will conduct the junior conference, giving suggestions for Mother's day programs.

Special features for the primary conference have been arranged by Miss Lucile Avery, while Miss Ira Taylor, chairman, will be assisted by a group of experts. Mrs. Taylor will lead a discussion on "Mothers' Clubs," in the cradle conference.

Supper will be served at 6 o'clock, at which all elementary workers are welcomed. Miss Ross May King is president of the league with Miss Bertha Schaid as treasurer.

3 YOUTHS ARRESTED FOR DRY VIOLATION

Three youths who were arrested in Milton county in alleged possession of seven pints of whisky were held by the federal grand jury Saturday. The youths' leaders were arrested by a group of experts. Mrs. Taylor will lead a discussion on "Mothers' Clubs," in the cradle conference.

Supper will be served at 6 o'clock,

SECURITIES BLACKBURN SOLD NOT AUTHORIZED

Denying that they had signed or authorized the issue of Federal Holding, Inc., stocks and bonds which Palmer Blackburn, Atlanta bond broker under indictment, is alleged to have sold to prominent clients here, H. H. Elarbee and J. Henry Blount, of Jacksonville, whose names had appeared as president and secretary-treasurer of the holding company, voluntarily came to Atlanta Saturday for a conference with Solicitor General John A. Boykin.

"The company had never begun to do business; its organization was never completed; we received not one cent from the sale of such certificates, and no money was sent to us in Jackson for the benefit of the Federal Holding, Inc.," Mr. Elarbee declared Saturday.

At Tuesday's session of the grand jury the investigation will be resumed, it was said Saturday by Solicitor Boykin.

Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against Blackburn were filed in United States district court Friday. Blackburn had admitted his inability to pay his debts, waived bond for the petitioning creditors and accepted bankruptcy, it was said Saturday by the law firm of Edgar Neely and T. M. Shubik, who filed the petition for the creditor.

George Bell, Jr., was appointed receiver and Blackburn was given ten days in which to file a schedule of his affairs. The petitioning creditors are Hirsch Brothers, $389; L. C. Adler, $125, and George F. Lindner, $2,500, a total indebtedness of $3,014.

Jobs Are Sought For 250 Grads Of High Schools

Beginning Monday, machinery will be set in motion to secure employment for some 250 graduates of the high schools of Atlanta. The seniors will be interviewed this week and on May 1 - Superintendent W. A. Sutton will address letters to Atlanta employers asking for openings.

Interviews will be arranged this week by Miss Margaret Moss, head of the junior department of the Community Employment Service, 289 1/2 Peachtree street. A line on the wants and qualifications of the applicants will be established. Cards then will be filled out by both pupils and teachers giving the various qualifications of the pupils.

Miss Moss said Saturday that this year's graduating class will be the best equipped ever turned out by the high schools of Atlanta. "They will be first to complete the junior high school which adds a year to the life of a high school graduate, making the entire public school course 12 instead of 11 years.

The age of the graduates is 18, Miss Moss said. In the case of the Tech High and Commercial high schools the pupils are specially trained in business and technical lines.

H. H. Bixler, who is in charge of vocational training for the public schools, said that there would be apprentices for work. Half of the seniors, he said, have definite ideas of what they want to do, and have taken certain courses with that view. The school, however, not to direct the student of this or the occupation, but to put him or her in the employment most congenial or best suited to the applicant's needs," Mr. Bixler said.

On the cards upon which the graduate makes application for work, he also makes a check among others the following questions:

Age, weight, height, number of dependents, religion, health, physical defects, eye sight, use of tobacco, preference of work, father's occupation, favorite magazine, favorite author, school subjects in which best and poorest work was done, and so on, whether part time or permanent. Students are also asked to specify what kind of office work they can do, such as typing.

Employers rate the graduates on the following qualities:

Common sense, energy, initiative, leadership, reliability, attitude toward work, general intelligence, mental alertness, fitness whether for professional business or mechanical work.

Sheldon To Give Organ Program This Afternoon

Canzonetta Goddard
Vesperale Cyril Scott
Menuet Beethoven
Improvisation.

BAILIFF IS DENIED RETRIAL IN SLAYING OF KYLE L. ARWOOD

A law officer who attempts an arrest upon a warrant without having the paper in his possession at the time of the arrest, or in custody of an assisting officer, does so in violation of law, but the state supreme court ruled Saturday in refusing a new trial for E. R. Luffman, Gordon county bailiff, convicted of killing Kyle L. Arwood in that county in May of last year.

Luffman, it was alleged, shot and killed Arwood in attempting to arrest him without displaying a warrant. The officer was tried in Gordon superior court, where he was found guilty with recommendation for mercy. Receiving the case upon appeal, the state supreme court held the trial to have been unlawful, declaring that the evidence authorized the verdict, and that the lower court did not err in refusing a new trial.

Warrant for Arwood's arrest had been issued by a justice of the peace in Whitfield, just before the law officer requested Luffman to make the arrest but neglecting to deliver the warrant to him.

Activities of the Week in Atlanta's Schools

EDITED by RICHARD CLARK

Superintendent's Message To Boys and Girls

My dear Boys and Girls: This week we have had a number of remarkable meetings in the city of Atlanta, all of them trying to help you to make a better citizen and a greater man or woman. The Parent-Teacher Association of Georgia met in Atlanta this week and every message stressed the importance of educating, training and developing our boys and girls. Hundreds and thousands of men and women are studying ways and means to help you. Then later in the week the city and county school officials gathered with the state department of education to devise means by which more money could be secured to educate the boys and girls of Georgia, and to discuss the best methods of training and developing our students. Then as a climax of the week came the meeting of the Georgia Education association, representing 10,000 teachers. Each of these came with the one idea of making you a better citizen and a better man or woman. I have received from them many valuable ideas and hope we can pass these into service in Atlanta. Now the question that comes to my mind is this: Will you boys and girls try to help in the work of making you stronger and better? This week is "Mouth Health Week." Have you gotten your certificate? I am delighted to see that most of you have. Will you promise to continue to keep your mouth in A condition? I can see you as you answer "Yes." I wish especially to ask each of you to find out where the Parent-Teacher meeting is to be held in the interest of "Mouth Health Week" and to urge your father and mother to attend that meeting. I wish to ask your cooperation in making Atlanta greater and a better school system in every way possible.

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Tech High Students Hold Annual Literary Exercises

Annual exercises of Tech High school, held Thursday morning, April 10, in the Wesley Memorial church, resulted in the selection of George Threlwell as the school's outstanding declaimer, and Willis Beavers as best debater on the program. The negative team, composed of Julius Hubbard and Willis Beavers, was awarded the declaimer's trophy, and the affirmative, "Resolved, that the United States should cease to protect by force of arms, capital invested in foreign lands except after actual declaration of war." Upholding the affirmative were Welch, Jordahn and John Eberhardt. John Eberhardt, second year man, in putting up and answering his interrogations, was selected as second choice for best debater.

Commercial High Clubs To Appear in Festival

Commercial will hold its third annual spring festival in the school auditorium on April 20.

A program has been arranged in which each club takes part, presenting its own particular work. Some of the number of clubs represented by the G. H. C. are: a pantomime by the baseball team; a dance by the Spanish club; and a stunt by the Co-Ed and Quill and Scroll. Many other attractions will also be featured.

Among the clubs not included on this occasion will be members of the board of education, the mayor, officers of the Parent-Teacher association, officers of the student government and student body, class with the best attendance record, five pupils from each class who have shown the most improvement in their third quarter's work, the five pupils who have the highest averages in school and two officers from each of the other high schools.

O'KEEFE FORMS SCHOLARSHIP CLUB

O'Keefe has always had many outside activities along various lines, such as dramatics, athletics and music, but now for the first time a society for the promotion of scholarship is being organized. For membership in the club a student must be on the honor roll one semester; those who make the roll two semesters are entitled to the honorary emblem of the organization.

The club held its first meeting Wednesday and elected officers from the ninth grade to serve the rest of the year and to get the society properly organized.

The officers elected were:

Billy Stern, president; Kathie Waddeleben, vice president; Marcia Baker, treasurer.

These officers held a meeting Friday and drew up the constitution and by-laws of the club. These will be printed at this time. Tech High will be the first to present by high

Boys' High Orchestra Gives Programs on Two Occasions

Two programs were given last week by the Boys' High School Concert orchestra at the opening session of the day of the Georgia Educational association convention, and the other that afternoon at the Fulton High school, where a reception was held. The musicians are greatly in demand for occasions of this sort, and frequently the group is required to play several times in one day.

The orchestra will appear in its spring concert May 10, at the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. club. A splendid program of classical and semiclassical music will be offered at this time. Tech High is the only outside debate in which we participated.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 15, 1928.

Hoover and Smith Register Big Gain In Pledged Votes

New York Governor Now Appears Most Powerful in Two Parties, Say National Surveys.

HOOVER FINDS MANY OPPONENTS

Smith Gets 246 Delegates But Bases Hope on Result of Fight for California Vote.

Washington, April 14.—(AP)—As presidential politics rounds the turn of mid-April, Smith and Hoover remain the main names around which the preponderant delegate strength of the major parties, so far as revealed in definite pledges, is rallying.

But there is this difference between them: Secretary Hoover faces a solid anti-Hoover field of competitors, including a runner-up, Governor Lowden, already backed by a formidable number of delegates, and at least one dark horse, in the person of Vice President Dawes, whose friends confidently predict that he eventually will be the beneficiary of the whole anti-Hoover movement. Governor Smith has opposed to him no single candidate whose delegate strength to date comes within a stone's throw of Smith's own, nor have the considerable number of party leaders who stand against him shown any evidence of solidarity either as to candidates or issues.

All along the line the republicans are being asked to align themselves for Hoover or against him. On the other hand the followers of Smith and those of Senator Reed actually combined in Oklahoma to control the state convention against any possible third candidate, and there have been suggestions that something of the same kind has happened in Iowa.

How Votes Will Go.

Hoover needs a majority of the republican convention to nominate him, while Smith needs two-thirds of the democratic delegates. Both are far away from their goals in delegate actually chosen thus far, and although the supporters of both believe the votes are in sight, these claims are very stoutly disputed by the leaders who are trying to set the stop sign against these two candidates.

As matters stand today, Hoover has instructed or definitely claimed for him 246 of the 545 delegates he needs to win the nomination. Kansas City, while Lowden has about 150, Smith's instructed and claimed delegates now number 264, compared to 733 1/2 necessary for a nomination at Houston. His nearest competitor, Reed of Missouri, has only 36. During the past week Smith increased his lead over other democratic candidates by Lowden, by annexing a big block of delegates from his home state of Illinois, narrowed the margin of selected delegates standing between him and Hoover.

Much attention is being given by political observers to the Smith victory in local conventions: Iowa, which the anti-Smith forces led by E. T. Meredith, ascribe to "political trickery," and to the Smith-Reed dominance of the democratic state convention in Oklahoma. At Madison Square Garden, however, and in these two states were for Indiana, as were Washington state, which instructed yesterday for Smith, and other western states now contained in the Smith column.

Furthermore, Oklahoma has countenanced itself as a party to the democratic cause, and the basis of the anti-Smith sentiment. It is into this politically hostile territory that Governor Smith has gone for a vacation and some golf at Asheville, N. C., only to find as soon as he stepped from the train yesterday that political speculation and political rumors are sure to surround him as long as he remains on southern soil.

California "Battleground."

The fight on Smith in the south is based on various issues, including his attitude toward prohibition and his stand on the rights of Negroes in that territory, however, are attempting to break down hostility. Already the Smith contingent claims Louisiana's 20 votes at Houston; at least half of the 18 from Arkansas and, after perhaps a ballot or two for Reed, Oklahoma's 20 votes.

Plaintiffs cited city ordinances under which they asked the right to continue the five-and-a-half-year term which they had elected last December by the 1928 legislature.

Recommending president of the American Cast Iron Pipe company, Eagan acquired all of the common stock and entered into a trust agreement with the employees that they would get all of the income from the stock that year. Mr. Jackson said, "In his will Eagan left the stock to the employees, and before turning it over to the heirs the executors had the will construed in Fulton superior court, where the company was incorporated.

Plaintiffs' answer, according to attorneys, will be a general denial to the quo warranto petition.

The legal action in the controversy climaxed several weeks of contention which followed the action of the 1928 hospitals and charities committee in naming a new executive group for Grady last March.

While they realize the importance of the south, the Smith managers and their opponents are most concerned for the moment with California. There in the May 1 primaries the Walsh-Reed-Smith contest for delegates will be the chief issue.

HEAVY LIFE TOLL TAKEN BY QUAKE IN BALKANTOWNS

Scores Killed; Injured Numberless; Many Villages Stricken by Severe Tremors.

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 14.—(AP)—Bulgaria, southern Rumania and the eastern section of Jugoslavia were shaken today by a heavy earthquake.

The disturbance centered in southern Bulgaria between the Black Sea and the city of Philippopolis with the town of Tchirpan as chief sufferer. Thirty persons were killed and hundreds injured in Tchirpan; seven were killed at Borissowgrad and two at Zagara. A late report from Plovdiv said that four were killed there and dozens injured by the collapse of houses and mosques.

Only a portion of the affected territory had been heard from and there was great apprehension of a widespread catastrophe.

PROPERTY LOSS HUGE.

Property damage was enormous. At Tchirpan all public buildings were either badly damaged or destroyed. The railway station there is in ruins. Houses and mosques crashed in numerous villages, there was particular damage to the village of Ivanovtsi, in the region between Tchirpan and Borissowgrad.

Hot mineral springs, which abound for the affected region, increased their flow with heightened temperature after the quake.

Philippopolis, a busy commercial center of 85,000 inhabitants, reported that two persons were killed there when a mosque was wrecked. The city, which was the ancient capital of Thrace, was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake in 1836.

How Votes Will Go.

This is the further difference: Hoover needs a majority of the republican convention to nominate him, while Smith needs two-thirds of the democratic delegates.

Premier Liantchoff is leaving Sofia for the devastated regions. In the neighborhood of Chirpu the quakes were reported continuing.

TEN LOSE LIVES IN PERUVIAN QUAKE.

Lima, Peru, April 14.—(AP)—Advices received from the department of Arequipa in southern Peru say that 10 persons have lost their lives in a series of earthquakes which have been shaking the country for some days.

The earth tremors began April 9 and continued spasmodically until yesterday, but news of the disturbances was not received until today when El Comercio received a special dispatch from Macusani, town in the province of Carabaya.

GRADY FIGHT GOES TO TRIAL BY JURY

Court Sets Hospital Case for Special Hearing April 30; Respondents To Enter General Denial

The battle between executive committees for control of Grady hospital will go to a Fulton superior court jury April 30, according to an order signed Saturday by Judge Virlyn B. Moore setting the case for special hearing.

While respondents have filed no formal answer to the quo warranto petition brought by the 1927 committee, the 1928 committee, headed Saturday that a question of contradictory facts would be raised, and the dispute was accordingly transferred for jury trial from the motion docket.

In the original plea, brought by Dr. Marion T. Benson, chairman of the 1927 committee, and members of the 1928 group, headed by Dr. Joseph Hines, it was contended that hospital service was demoralized by the 1927 hospitals and charities committee of city council.

Respondents' answer, according to attorneys, will be a general denial to the quo warranto petition.

The legal action in the controversy climaxed several weeks of contention which followed the action of the 1928 hospitals and charities committee in naming a new executive group for Grady last March.

THE WORLD REJOICES.

Not since Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh safely landed at the Paris field—the first trans-Atlantic flight in a heavier-than-air plane—has the world been so interested as at the flash of good news from Labrador that the German-Junkers monoplane Bremen had safely negotiated the western passage and had landed on firm North American soil, with all of the crew safe.

The joy of the two continents was accentuated by reason of the apprehension that had been felt for several hours after the scheduled time of their planned arrival at Roosevelt field had passed.

Indeed apprehension had been supplanted by grave doubt and fear as to the safety of the intrepid aviators, particularly as the passage from east to west across the Atlantic had been a graveyard for many other daring fliers who had tried and failed and gave their lives in the failure.

The world loves courage, intrepidity and accomplishment. Though the Bremen did not reach the goal of its hopes it did make the first western voyage over the turbulent waters of the ocean, and in view of the obstacles of snow and ice and storm, achieved one of the most remarkable feats in the history of long distance, non-stop aviation.

The aviators who successfully made the voyage will justly rank high among the air heroes of the world.

DR. BOYD ON GRADY HOSPITAL.

Elsewhere is published a thoughtful communication from Dr. Montague L. Boyd, discussing the disgraceful and efficiency-destroying situation that involves Grady hospital.

In many of his conclusions he is eminently correct. The method of administering the institution, with large groups of conflicting department heads, and with inadequate maintenance funds provided by council, necessarily impairs efficiency, and seriously hampers the institution in the great services it is capable of performing for the city.

"They now have a number of different heads for each department," writes Dr. Boyd, "and every few months a different man takes charge, and everything must be changed to accord with his ideas."

While this lessens efficiency he regards as an even more serious feature the fact that no one man has full authority to properly develop any department, and that no one man can get the credit if a department should develop unusual service efficiency.

These statements are fundamental as applying to any business, and hospitalization, while professional, is also a business.

They are statements of facts which explain why Grady hospital is not better equipped, and not better supported by the city.

Dr. Boyd's first suggestion to remedy the situation is not tenable. He says "the solution of that difficulty is for the city to select from physicians in Atlanta the very best available men for the head of each department."

That is the very obvious reason for the distressing situation that now exists, and is one of the causes for Grady's troubles as assigned by Dr. Boyd himself.

The institution should be kept entirely from politics, and this cannot be so long as council has the selection of department heads.

Such a course involves ward politics, favoritism, and influence and can only mean a continuation of the present status.

That is the very thing that needs most to be avoided.

On the other hand Dr. Boyd makes an alternative suggestion which is constructive, and will solve the Grady troubles.

He says "turning the institution over to Emory university would accomplish the same end."

It would go infinitely further. It would accomplish the most to be desired end, for then it would be free of political dicker, haming, and trading, and would be standardized staple trading! That is the first step toward a reform that Mr. Taylor very clearly sees is necessary.

CALL FOR DISABLED VETERANS.

Atlanta's quota of the $2,000,000 to be raised for the national organization of the disabled veterans of America is $50,000.

Bobby Jones has accepted the chairmanship of the local campaign committee and associated with him are a large number of leading citizens of the city.

All over America men of national prominence are enlisted in this work.

Atlanta will respond, and to the limit of the quota. She takes pride in her disabled veterans, and her big heart will answer the call.

It is difficult to conceive of a cause of greater appeal than that of rendering sufficient financial aid to those boys who fought the country's battles on a foreign field for the sake of a world democracy, who lost their health, their eyes, their limbs, their earning capacity, in the cause, and who must go through life in the physical and mental distress of permanent disability.

It may be assumed that the government does all that is necessary for these disabled veterans. Very promptly the Veterans' Bureau was established, even before the armistice, and there are regional branches all over the country, but compensations are not properly regulated nor equalized, as has been repeatedly charged, and in multitudes of cases are wholly inadequate.

Most of these veterans are poor, and a great many of them with dependents.

It is necessary to provide private funds, in addition to federal aid, in order to properly provide for them and to relieve, as far as is humanly possible, the suffering that they must encounter to the end.

Tens of thousands of boys who fought for the country's flag made the supreme sacrifice. Nothing can restore their lives.

But the nation, and the people of this nation, who are able, can do their part toward the alleviation of the pain and the distress of those "who are dead and yet live."

Atlanta's open-hearted citizenry will yield patriotically and with enthusiasm to this call of men for whom the war is not yet over and will never be over in this world.

COOLIDGE POSITION CORRECT.

President Coolidge is correct in opposing the equalization fee provision in the revised McNary-Haugen farm relief measure.

It is not only unconstitutional, according to the leading constitutional lawyers of the country, but it is a process of direct taxation that cannot be justified.

It is admitted that there should be some kind of farm relief legislation, but the Curtis-Crisp bill, one of the authors of which is a Georgia, comes nearer to providing surplus control without additional taxation than any of the control measures before congress.

The fact is, the farmers' economic welfare depends more upon their own efforts along sane and sound lines of personal operations coupled with good marketing conditions than anything else. It is no more possible to legislate prosperity for a farmer, without his own help, than it is to legislate morals into one who doesn't take kindly to such legislation.

The government is getting into all kinds of business. It is already a bureaucracy. It is forgetting the first principles of the good old doctrine of states' rights.

If there would be less politics in proposed farm relief legislation the situation for the farmer would be infinitely better. Certainly no law, based entirely upon a tax levy without providing relief to 90 per cent of the agrarian masses, can be justified.

ATLANTA TOPS THE LIST.

The trouble with over-production is not in the southeast. It comes from the ever-increasing acreage in Texas, and to the southwest of that state.

Here is a trouble, to which Mr. Taylor makes reference, and it is the crux of the whole situation: Farmers are too content to grow short-staple, low-grade cotton instead of growing the staple the home mills consume. Hence they are forced to ship out of the state, much by export as he suggests, and automatically the mills are forced to import their major consumptive demands from other states. The local short-staple market cannot be sold on a spinners' market because the spinners can't use it and it must be sold on a local grade market at inferior prices.

If there could be a stabilization of staple grown there could result a stabilization in spot prices, and not until then. Some brokers no doubt attempt to, and do profit by manipulation, to which Mr. Taylor refers, but it is a serious and an undeserved indictment to say that any goodly portion of them do. They buy and sell on commissions, and most of them confine themselves to legitimate commission trading.

Citizens should give hearty cooperation and encouragement to the week that has been specifically designated for particular attention to mouth health.

REGISTER AND VOTE.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce is doing an admirable service in its campaign to get citizens to register and vote. It is sending out thousands of letters to qualified voters in the city calling attention to the June primary and the importance of the same as representative of democratic government.

The fact is a little more than 10 per cent of the potential vote of Atlanta is ever registered in any city election. The result is government by minority, which is always unrepresentative, undemocratic and dangerous.

On June 6 12 councilmen and five aldermen will be elected. These men, when elected, will spend approximately $10,000,000 a year of the taxpayers' money. Then why should not the taxpayers take initiative enough in the voting franchise to say who these representatives of theirs in the city's legislative chamber shall be?

It is worth every citizen's time and trouble to acquaint himself and herself with all candidates for such important offices.

It is unthinkable that people who should recognize that general welfare depends upon good government should take the elective franchise so indifferently. Government is business. It influences, one way or another, every phase of commercial, industrial and public life. The only way to make government representative is for the people to vote.

The campaign of the chamber of commerce is a worthy one and deserves the whole-hearted support of every citizen.

DISTINGUISHED JEW COMING.

The people of Atlanta, and especially those of the Jewish faith, are to be honored Tuesday by the visit of one of the country's most distinguished religious teachers, jurists and authors. Judge William M. Lewis, of Philadelphia, will come to deliver the principal address that evening at the launching of the United Palestine appeal.

Judge Lewis is national chairman of the organization that is raising $7,500,000 among the Jewish people of America this year. All organizations aiding in the reconstruction of Palestine into a Jewish homeland are united in the campaign. Atlanta's quota is $30,000.

Judge Lewis has served repeatedly on the Philadelphia city council and was in 1922 appointed to the bench in 1923 he was reelected to a term of ten years.

He has taken an active part in Jewish communal affairs as well as in the civic life of Philadelphia.

BRAND'S BILL FAVORED.

The bill of Representative Brand, of Georgia, to forbid the separation of juries in capital offenses and felony cases in the District of Columbia has been favorably reported by the house district committee.

It is admitted that there should be some kind of farm relief legislation, but the Curtis-Crisp bill, one of the authors of which is a Georgia, comes nearer to providing surplus control without additional taxation than any of the control measures before congress.

The bill provides that a jury empaneled to try a capital offense shall not be permitted to separate until discharged, except where the presiding judge believes that separation is necessary.

It also provides that a jury formed to try a felony case shall not be allowed to separate except when the presiding judge may permit separation, if it is agreed to by the prosecution and defense attorneys.

It is a good measure and if enacted will cure a weak feature in the court system of the district.

It is a strange commentary that the greatest advocates for a five-day labor week are manufacturers of automobiles, kodaks and gasoline. We are yet to hear from the soft drink and wiener-wurst concerns.

Deputies are guarding the jurors of the Sinclair trial, and possibly Burns' agency is guarding the deputies and federal officers the Burns' men, and so on ad lib. A modern trial has its theatricals.

It is claimed that the Bible is stolen from book stalls in greater number than all other books combined. Evidently the thief knows he gets 66 books in one.

The greatest discovery of the age is the recent revelation that the mail men are being milked.

The man in loud knickers and the woman with loud snickers take the joy out of golf.

Naturally Jimmy Walker felt at home in Atlanta, the New York of the South.

Superintendent Willis A. Sutton has worked on this problem of good teeth for school children so long and so earnestly that Atlanta is at the top of the list in the United States, a most marvelous record, and one that has attracted attention of schools throughout the world. Dr. Sutton is asked to make more addresses on this work, in other cities, than on any other phase of school endeavor.

Citizens should give hearty cooperation and encouragement to the week that has been specifically designated for particular attention to mouth health.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The Victory for Law and Order in Illinois and Its Implications.

Washington, April 15.—(Special) but doubt is expressed as to the other ladies.

The manner in which the people of Illinois slammed the lawless republicans into the Lowell district of Massachusetts, has openly protested against the action of some of the citizens of this district, who have hankered to appropriate her seat and salary.

In the Jersey City district, where the wets are thick as bees around a molasses barrel, the rank and file democrats, in spite of Mrs. Norton's wetness, are demanding a wetter man in her stead.

Out in Kentucky it may turn out that John Langley will "come back," having his citizenship restored, and his wife giving way to him. His constituents out there are thoroughly convinced that John was "framed" in his prohibition violation conviction and wish to vindicate him.

Ruth McCormick will shine.

Assuming that there will be no statewide democratic landslide in Illinois, the state, which will be elected Republican, Dick Yates, son of the old war-time governor and senator, and himself governor for a notable term, Yates had a conspicuous "dry" in the congress. Mrs. McCormick is not at all expected to succeed him in that particular role. She is a popular and honest woman, and life is as she sees it.

The Senate Freed of Smith. There was sensible relief shown on both sides of the senate chamber when the Illinois bulletins made it sure that a one-horse country lawyer from "down state" had taken Frank Smith's measure and laid him out cold! Now the senate will not have to kick him off its door-step a third time.

Smith felt so sure that his gang had the state sewed up in his sack that he resigned both his previous claims of election and gubernatorial appointment and went back to the voters with the defiant boast that this time he would get more than his previous 800,000 majority. Instead he lost 800,000 and 200,000 more, besides!

Which goes to prove again that Old Man Peepul is a mighty tickle fellow-citizen and often manifests a pure delight in doing unlooked-for political stunts.

One such was the nomination on Tuesday of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick as a republican candidate for congress-at-large. Illinois has two such members, because the country majorities in the legislature have steadily refused since 1910 to redistrict the state, which chose Congressmen to fill the vacancies.

Tens of thousands will arise over the right of the legislature to retain congressmen-at-large when the reapportionment act requires their allocation to definite districts.

The Women Are Forging Forward.

Slowly, but surely, the women are coming on in practical politics and are certain to figure more largely in the future in the national legislature. There are four now in the house of the sitting congress—Mrs. Alice Kahan of Massachusetts; Mrs. Mary Norton, of New Jersey, and Mrs. Katherine Langley, of Kentucky. The first two were chosen to sit in the seats vacated by their deceased husbands and the four were elected "on her own" and as the protégé of Frank Hague, the democratic boss of Jersey City. Mrs. Langley, a member of the Democratic Guderian family, of Buncombe county, in North Carolina, became a republican when she married John Guderian, of Kentucky. He died from cancer and she gave her son the name of being the nation's first woman senator of the United States.

She is a very able, popular and attractive person and if Governor Donahay had appointed her to the senate he would have produced a national sensation, such as Governor Hardwick of Georgia did when he elected his wife, the popular Rebeca Latting Felton, to succeed Senator Tom Watson, deceased, and so gave her the honor of being the nation's first woman senator of the United States.

The amount which Germany is asked to pay as a national obligation is open to argument. The Germans incline to the figure of $4,000,000,000. Others think she could pay $7,000,000,000, which would be restricted by the amount of it being set at present. The price went up when the Germans produced more; if it went down, they were to limit production accordingly.

Owing to factors quite unrelated to the plan of control, the price of rubber soared. The United States, which produces but a fraction of the world's supply, is the chief rubber producer. They get it predominantly from the Malayan peninsula and sell it on the world market. So, about eight years ago a scheme was devised and put in force by which each year's production was to be restricted or enlarged according to

Summer Dramatic Season Opens Monday at Erlanger

The stage is set, the players are rigid, and everything is in fine shape for the opening performance of "Romance," the new Sheldon play which the Williams-Kohlmor Production company is offering here for the opening play of the summer season at Erlanger theater.

Under the able direction of Edna L. Lilley, the Atlanta company will produce during the season only plays that have been outstanding successes in New York. Mr. Lilley is very much pleased with the way final rehearsals for Monday night's performance have gone off this week at the theater, and is certain of a perfect production.

With such stars of Broadway fame as Miss Helen Menken, Felix Krems, Robert Williams, Ray Walburn, David Newell, Denise Morris and others playing leads in "Romance," Atlanta has invited for itself a first-class cast. It is not often that such actors and actresses leave Broadway and it was only with difficulty that these players were secured by the managers, Fred Kohlmor and Robert Williams, for the Atlanta summer season.

At the same time that "Romance" will be opening here Monday night, it will be opening in Budapest, with Doris Keane playing the role that Miss Menken will play here. The play involves the story of an opera singer, telling the story of her experiences with love from the time she was an urchin singing in the streets of New York to the time she is in New York, where she meets her real love, an Episcopal rector whose purity and unselfishness wins her soul back and thus brings a happy ending.

Elaborate costumes for the play period style arrived here during the week from New York, where they were especially designed and made for the play here. Each week when costumes are necessary of this type they will be made and sent here specially for the individual production.

The management announced yesterday that more requests for season tickets had been received showing that the Atlanta public wants good plays and are appreciative of the fact that Atlanta is to see late Broadway successes played by Broadway stars who seldom leave New York for out-of-town engagements.

Miss Helen Menken, with one hand, writes several names with the other and reads the baseball scores at the same time.

W. H. Groh, with the assistance of George La Rowe, is presenting one of vaudeville's best novelties, "Piano Hounds," said to be funnier than ever and a novelty which has scored heavily.

Harry Kahn, said to be the world's supreme mentalist, opens a week's engagement at Keith's Georgia theater Monday and is the featured attraction of the stage entertainment. The screen feature brings Rod LaRoque in "Stand and Deliver," an action film of romance and thrills, in which Lupe Velez, the young Mexican girl who starred with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho," has another star part.

New and greater mental achievements will be presented by Harry Kahn whom scientists have credited with having a triple brain. He writes upside down and backwards. He writes two separate sentences at the same time. He adds columns of figures.

'RARIN' TO GO' BILLED FOR MIDNIGHT FROLIC

C. T. JORDAN NAMED, ATLANTA MANAGER UNIVERSAL FILMS

In keeping with his policy of "promotion within the ranks," Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures, has appointed C. T. Jordan, salesman with the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., manager of the Atlanta office, succeeding Ben Y. Cammack, formerly branch manager here, who was recently promoted to short subjects sales manager, with headquarters in the New York office.

"RARIN' TO GO," the big revue produced by Ed Daley which has played highly successful seasons on the Columbia Burlesque Wheel, and Atlanta who attend it Friday night are promised excellent comedy, good dancing and tumultuous entertainment.

"A laugh a second" is the basis of the show, which is featured by the appearance of an imposing array of talented principals and a big chorus of dusky stepsters who put an abundance of pep into their dancing.

Among featured performers, who promise to keep the audience in a state of the fast and furious order: excellent singing and rip-roaring comedy, are Brown and Jones, Spencer Barnes, Grace Rector, Kitty Ablaunche, Vernon Hutchins, "the golden-voiced tenor," and Newman and Whatley, charmingly dressed dancers known as "feather feet."

Tickets for this big midnight frolic will be on sale in advance of the performance at Chess' Place and on the night of the show at the box office of the 81 theater.

EPIC OF NATION, IN PICTURE FORM AT TENTH STREET

A picture that has been declared by many critics to be more wonderful than the "Birth of a Nation," more thrilling than "Way Down East" is scheduled to open the week's program at the Tenth Street theater Monday, when D. W. Griffith's masterpiece, "Annie," will be screened.

On Wednesday, another of her Ralston will be the featured star in her latest success, "The Spotlight," a typical Ralston feature with plenty of action and lots of humor from start to finish.

On Thursday and Friday, Gene Stratton-Porter's "Wanderer" will be offered when "The Harvester" will be shown. The popular novelist gave the screen one of her cleanest and best when she contributed this one to the movie public. On Saturday, Clara Bow will be shown in "The Ancient Mariner."

A single costume coating $2,200 has been designed and made for Constance Griffith to wear in her starring role in First National's elaborate period drama, "The Divine Lady," a Frank Lloyd production on which final preparatory touches are now being completed.

A continuous costume coating $2,200 has been designed and made for Constance Griffith to wear in her starring role in First National's elaborate period drama, "The Divine Lady," a Frank Lloyd production on which final preparatory touches are now being completed.

Carlos and Inez are the kind of stars that you like to see. They do a beautiful waltz number that has been the hit of two continents. They are recent stars of Ervin Berlin's "Music Box Revue."

The Legion of the Condemned, "The Legion of the Condemned,"

The Rialto theater will start the week off by showing "A Woman's Way," featuring Warner Baxter and Margaret Livingston. This picture will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and on Thursday, Belle Bennett in "The Sporting Age" will appear at the Rialto for a three-day showing.

"A Woman's Way" is a fascinating love story set in the most unusual locale against the opera Latin quarter, boulevard cafes and the underworld of Paris. The film is a picture of the French city as it is—a character you will love and fear—intensely human-delineated by a superb cast of recognized favorites.

"The Sporting Age" is a touching drama of a middle-aged woman who felt that she could sell the innocence and blush of youth but found a bitter cup in store for her. Eagerly you'll admit the outcome of the strange complications which arise in this powerful drama of today.

The film is a picture of the French city as it is—a character you will love and fear—intensely human-delineated by a superb cast of recognized favorites.

"THE HARVESTER" OPENS NEXT WEEK AT THE WEST END

BILLY GLASON, COMIC TOPS NEW LOEW BILL

Nice Stage Bill Slated At Capitol

Billy Glason, champion master of ceremonies and a comedian who will delight local audiences with his cleverness, is the headliner on the new vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Billy Glason, the comedian who is known as "The Boy Who Put the U. in Humorous," will appear in a skit entitled "Just Songs and Singings," written for him by Neal O'Hara, noted humorist of the New York World staff. All through the program Billy will move and will appear in many ridiculous scenes.

Entertaining musicals and pretty dances will be featured in "Melody Mansion," a big musical fantasy offered by a company of eight people, seven of them pretty girls. Wolfe and Kindler appears as features in this act which has been scoring big hits among the public.

One of the outstanding acts on the new program is that of Joe B. Stanley and company in "Waiting" a farce with song trimmings. In the act is a boy, a fox, a bear, an able farceur, and two other artists who have been dressed up with some attractive scenic effects and some pretty song numbers are introduced.

Violet Singer does not belie her name because she is a great song artist. She brings a repertoire of songs which are rare and unique, and which are especially prepared especially for her program. She gives a combination singing and piano program which is unusually pleasing.

The opening number will be offered by Takever and company, have equated the company, performed a speech here before and are ranked around the top of their class. This extraordinary vaudeville bill will be offered in conjunction with Lon Chaney's new picture, "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

he literally transferred to the West End section of Atlanta, when "New York" starring Ricardo Cortes, Lois Wilson and Estelle Taylor, will be the attraction at Paul Shor's playhouse on Wednesday.

On Monday and Tuesday, "The Great Comedy Sensation of the Year, Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," will be the attraction for Thursday and Friday. The cast in this great film includes Ruth Taylor, Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin and many others who are well known for the laugh-producing qualities Wesley Barry will make his film comeback Saturday in "Old Kentucky."

GOLD-DIGGER TALE OPENS NEW SCREEN BILLING AT PALACE

With a record group of comedy players assembled, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," will be the attraction at the Palace theater in Inman park and radio favorites, will present an extraordinary musical turn.

On the screen this week, May McAvoy is starred in "The Little Snob," a clever romance of Coney Island.

NEWS OF THE THEATERS

Famous Dumas Tale
Big Screen Feature
At Empire Theater

Headlined by "The Three Musketeers," United Artists' magnificent film version of Alexandre Dumas' immortal story with Douglas Fairbanks in the role of D'Artagnan, the Empire theater, beautiful new playhouse at Georgia Avenue and Crew street, this week presents a program of feature entertainment for its patrons.

"The Three Musketeers" is booked for appearances on the Empire screen Wednesday, on which day a record attendance is anticipated. The Empire's week will open Monday with "The Tender Hour," with Billy Dove and Ben Lyon, depicting a cast of prominent players.

Tuesday brings to the Empire the super-thriller, mystery play, "The Bat," which is known everywhere as one of the most tensely gripping pictures of a kind ever made. For Thursday and Friday presentations the community house has booked "My Best Girl," with Mary Pickford, Charles Rogers, Carmelita Geraghty and Hobart Bosworth. For all the week's pictures the new and improved Orchestraphone will supply special orchestrations.

Ponce de Leon Theater Offers Figure Puzzle, Giving Free Tickets

It's an old adage that "liars figure, but figures don't lie."

With that assurance as a basis, crack mathematicians are invited to look for the solution of this week's figure puzzle of which will entitle the figure-hound to a free admission to the Ponce de Leon theater at Boulevard.

The tickets offered will be to the performance of "My Best Girl," latest picture made by Mary Pickford, and destined to be one of the finest in which she has ever appeared.

In which she can solve the mathematical mystery as it appears in this issue of The Constitution will win free admission to a splendid entertainment with no more expense than an outlay of hard thinking.

Plenty of parking spaces at the Palace.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE GREAT AMERICAN BAND WAGON.

By Ralph Jones.

Charles Merz, author of the group of sketches of contemporaneous American life, which makes up this volume, selected as the "Book of the Month" in "Small Movies," is a study of exaggerations. There is a sharp distinction, while this sub-title is undoubtedly correct, it is only correct because modern American life is itself a series of exaggerations and the truthful commentator can merely report the facts and conditions, themselves exaggerations. There is a sharp distinction in this from the habit of some authors of widely exaggerating whatever they see.

Begin while Mr. Merz was himself traveling by automobile through the midwest, along the trans-continental avenue of pop stands, gas tanks, water tanks, electric signs, kerosene tanks, dolls and chocolate stands that has become the broad and pulsing artery of a nation." The volume takes us through such widely divergent American scenes and characteristics as secret orders, radio, soft-milk stands, Spanish real estate developments, bathing, beauty contests, the movies, championship prizefights, entrepreneurs, newspaper-made heroes, press agency and others.

It is a fascinating volume and the reader who does not get more than one deep, satisfying chuckle from each page is thereby proven minus a sense of humor.

Mr. Merz has written many sparkling essays for the leading monthly magazines. He is now on the editorial staff of the New York World, and this is the first time his magazine essays have been gathered together between the covers of a single volume.

That the volume should quickly rank with the best sellers of the day is to be expected, in the more intelligent and sophisticated type which has drawn him a great deal of success.

Should it take this rank, there will undoubtedly be more volumes to follow the first. Should the confidence in the perspicacity of the mass be misplaced, let us hope that the publishers, the John Day company, will be charitable enough to give to us who do appreciate it, another volume any-way.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

By Frank R. Kent, author of "The Democratic Party."

"The Great Game of Politics," will be widely read. It is the story of the oldest political party in the United States. It is said that the author is "unquestionably the most acute and witty of our political writers, and it will be no surprise to him that he has made a most interesting story out of the democratic party."

The usual discussion on politics, as well as the speakers on this subject, deal too liberally in figures, and the author has the good sense to leave the book when he has the time to wade through statistics. The author traces the career of the democratic party from its birth 136 years ago to the present time. He discusses most liberally the five outstanding leaders as Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Grover Cleveland, William Jennings Bryan and Woodrow Wilson.

The analysis made by a well-known critic is as follows: "Kent has succeeded in maintaining his critical balance between praise and blame, showing the genuine greatness of the basic democratic principles, the essential soundness of the historic democratic doctrines and, some of the party's achievements."

It is the story of John Wilkes Booth, the most strange character in his political career. The author is widely known as a successful political writer. He writes a daily column on national politics for the Baltimore Sun. (Price $3. The Century Co., New York.)

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

By William Starr Myers, author of "Socialism and American Ideas," and "American Politics."

"The History of the Republican Party" is the complete editor of the New York Journal of Commerce.

The author sets forth in most interesting style the history of the republican party, its origin and development, its great victories and equally great defeats. He also tells the story of the men who have been closely identified with every phase of the republican party.

Dr. Myers is a versatile writer and has written this story for all Americans. In writing of the republican party he takes the reader into the very heart and soul of the party, as it stands, tells of the important issues in which it has figured, and discusses extensively the leading subject on which it is founded and the men who have been leaders from the very beginning, among them being Abraham Lincoln, Andrew Jackson, James Blaine, Ulysses Grant, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, on Calvin Coolidge, and the white house.

Michigan Trims Bulldogs, 12 to 7; Tech, Mercer Rained Out

Jacket Nine Off Tuesday
To Play Tigers

Rain Robs Tech of Chance To Even Series With Bears.

BY ROGER PAGE.
Being forced to desert their playing ground on account of the deluge which descended on Atlanta at the most inopportune time, the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech were unable to play the Mercer Bears the second of the two game series in baseball which was scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

The first defeat at the hands of any college nine this season was handed the Tech team Friday when the Mercer club opened up with a hitting affair and came out on top of a 7 to 3 score.

Up until this time, the Jackets had been on a winning streak, sending Clemson, Oglethorpe and Maryland back under defeat.

"Comedy of Errors." However, since the game, or rather the "comedy of errors," with the Mercer Bears Friday has no bearing on the southern conference standing of the Jackets. Renewed determinations have been made to set a pace second to beat on the diamond this year by the Clay men.

The Yellow Jackets leave here Tuesday morning for Auburn, where the Tigers, in a long, tiresome effort, will be encamped on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. The Auburnites were conference champions the past season, although they have not made as good showing as has been expected of them this spring. This does not mean the Tech can't win the two games lightly, for Auburn is one of those colleges that fights to the last minute.

The Jackets have a four-game series with the Tigers. After playing home to the Tech, the Jackets will be on the Auburn team comes to Atlanta for games Friday and Saturday. These games will be played between these two colleges, the "Bama nine playing two return games, and when these two nines meet on the diamond, anything can be expected.

Florida and South Carolina will present teams to face the hitting outfit of the Jackets before the University of Georgia Bulldogs start barking at them. The Bulldogs have a hard hitting club, and when these two nines meet on the diamond, anything can be expected.

Florida, star twirler of the Jackets, who recently went through an operation on his nose, is just about to recover. He has been out for a week, but his exertions have been made by the physician yet. He should be in tip-top shape by the last of this week, and will probably have a hand in the outcome of the games with the Auburn Tigers.

Alvan Clay will probably take sixteen days to get him on the train to Auburn Monday. The team will return Wednesday morning and immediately prepare the reception for the Tigers who arrive Friday for a couple of games.

PIRATES ARE BLANKED.

Cincinnati, April 14.—The Cincinnati Reds blanked Pittsburgh scorers in the National league cellar for another day when they clinched Milous off the mound in the seventh inning and won 6 to 0 today. Lucas held the Pirates to three hits and reduced in favor of Brane after the Reds bit two singles and one double, none out. The single drove two more safeties home for Brane four runs in the seventh inning.

Ethan Allen, Reds' centerfielder, sprained his right knee in the seventh and was carried off the field.

Old-Time Fighters Held Own Eliminations Without Help

Magnates Now Bolster Pugs By Publicity

No Need for Eliminations in Old Days When Fighters Fought.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

These days the promoters handle the much ballyhooed progress of the heavyweight saps, right up to the point where he can be shoved into a championship match and people will fork out a million or two in real money to see the show.

The promoters have to do the eliminating now, as a business proposition.

There aren't any fighters good enough to attend to that detail themselves.

That's why the magnates of elimination tournaments year by year and advertised them very heartily, we might never hear of some of the beefy gentlemen whose names now clutter up the sporting pages. Jack Sharkey, the garrulous gob, is an instance. Sharkey did his best fair fighting a couple of years ago and Mr. Rickard grew very fond of him as an asset. Sharkey beat up and stopped Harry Wills. The fact that Wills was an ancient piece of cheese, pugilistically at the time, doesn't affect the worth of the performance. Few people knew it. Sharkey knocked out Jim Maloney, who was really an awful sap as a fighter but had been ballyhooed by Rickard until everybody believed in the ballyhoo. Right here Mr. Rickard grew much fonder of Sharkey. In fact he thought him so much better that if he'd already helped draw a two-million-dollar gate, he figured that if Sharkey, the rough and ready sailor walloper, knocked out Jack Dempsey, then Sharkey would be even a bigger drawing card than Dempsey. And so it was, though Sharkey in to fight Dempsey. Rickard couldn't lose either way, for a win would make Dempsey good for a return match with Tunney, as it did.

Sharkey Alived.

This year Rickard resurrected Sharkey and seemed as fond of him as ever. Sharkey has had a complete flop in two well advertised elimination bouts. After that Tex matched Sharkey back into the picture by signing him to fight the twice eliminated Jack Delaney. When a guy has broad shoulders and weighs over 200, and is talkin' tough egg, and has valor and all that sort of thing, it's hard to keep him out of the money.

Well, here we've been wasting time for two years looking at elimination bouts that didn't prove anything, and that the ranks of eighty-eight fighters now is temporarily defunct. And now Mr. Fugazy, of Brooklyn, and Mr. Mullins, of Chicago, are conspiring together to run off more elimination heavyweight bouts and then challenge Tunney for the survivor, something like that. The ranks of our heavyweight fighters is shown by the fact that there isn't out outstanding fighting man in the bunch, with Dempsey definitely retired, who has the nerve, ambition and ability to do his own eliminating and force himself into the position of challenger for the title.

Great Eliminator.

Used to be different? I say it did. Remember a fat, white haired old fellow known as John L. Sullivan who was around a few years ago? When John L. was a young man of 20 or so nobody was boasting him toward the world's champion. He had a short round behind the belt he lost his skin. You probably remember this John L. from his photographs, which showed a smooth bodied, big waisted fellow with a protruding jaw and a threatening eye, but otherwise but a pie-eating contest. That was old boozefatigue John. He was young John. When he was young Mr. Sullivan was as muscular as Dempsey at his best, with big arms and shoulders and a small waist, and the biggest and most powerful pair of sledge hammer hands ever hooked to a human being. John was the toughest man that ever fought.

He was the real "absquat brute," although Jack London invented that expression years after Sullivan's time, to describe Battling Nelson. John L. thought of nothing but "knock 'em down" and when he fought them they stayed down. John L. was running out of rivals to eliminate and being hungry for a chance to knock out somebody every evening so he'd get up an appetite for breakfast next morning, started a tour of the country offering $400 to a champion who could stay down four rounds. It isn't on record that John ever had to pay the money. He knocked out over a hundred men! They weren't all near-champions, but they were the champions of their localities, champions of lumber camps, mining towns, fighting places, and tough men generally. Some of them were so much bigger than John L. that he offered to be careful not to kill him, but he knocked them all out. In fact he avowed that John kept a tradition grew up that John kept a man with a wooden mallet behind the curtains to tap them on the head if they were too obstreperous. But that was a libel.

No Ballyhoo.

Next to John L. the greatest eliminator was Jack Dempsey. In fact I don't know but that Dempsey was a greater eliminator than John L. He didn't eliminate so many but he did it more suddenly and effectively. Like Dempsey when he knocked him up to the title. The two biggest men he licked were Carl Morris, the Oklahoma Giant, and Fred Fulton. He knocked out Morris with a single punch, the first crashing left hook in the pit of the stomach. He knocked out Fulton with a right hook to the last rib. He was falling in just 14-35 seconds of the first round. The first, third, sixth and seventh were even. Miss Turpie gained a temporary advantage on the second hole, which she negotiated in the hole. Miss Collett, however, took the lead at the fifth, added another hole at the eighth but lost the ninth.

For Jim Corbett, who was first to discover that Sullivan was no longer dangerous, first to knock old John L. out, and who fought Chyna-ski, Peter Jackson and many others to win his title, he had a

Nobody fixed up any easy tournaments for Jack Johnson. For several years Johnson, who was good, had to frame fights to get any fights at all. Then he forced Tommy Burns to fight him by offering Burns to Australia, and got his chance. The express instruction was issued by the war department in Washington encouraging all post commanders to establish polo clubs wherever practicable. The expressed object was "to promote skill in horsemanship and daring."

In subsequent items on the subject of polo, it shall present the rules of the game, the history of the polo player, and the sportsmanship and traditions of the galloping game.

Paul Waner Holds His Lead In 'Big Six'

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Paul Waner, slugging outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, retained his lead at the top of the "Big Six" rating yesterday by cracking out a triple and a home run, as the Bucs beat out the Pirates, 5 to 0. Paul waited until the ninth inning to break into the hit column. Kiki Cuyler kept up his stride of one hit a day with a single in four times at bat at St. Louis. Harry Heilmann got a pair of singles at Detroit. Bill Rupp, Tex Cobb and Rogers Hornsby were idle.

The standing to date:

GRID SCHEDULE OF FLA. RATS IS ANNOUNCED

University of Florida, Gainesville, April 14.—Games with the freshman football teams of Auburn, Alabama, Clemson, Mississippi A. and M., and South Carolina have been scheduled by Athletic Director Everett M. Yon for the 1928 "Baby Gator" eleven by Athlete Director Everett M. Yon for the University of Florida, it was announced here today.

The program, embracing five southern conference engagements, will open on October 13 with the young Gators meeting the Auburn yearlings at Pensacola, and will conclude on Thanksgiving day at Columbia, S. C., where Cowell's fresh tangle with the South Carolina rats. The Gators have been slated for a first-year football team at Florida university, and athletic authorities here are hopeful that another excellent freshman squad will carry the Orange and Blue through the five-game conference.

The official schedule, as announced by Director Yon today, follows:

October 13—Florida Rats vs. Auburn Rats, at Pensacola.

November 3—Florida Rats vs. Alabama Rats, at Lakeland.

November 10—Florida Rats vs. Clemson Rats, at Orlando.

November 24—Florida Rats vs. Mississippi A. and M. Rats, at Gainesville.

November 29—Florida Rats vs. South Carolina Rats, at Columbia, South Carolina.

Director Yon stated the game with Alabama was tentative for the present, but hoped to have everything definitely settled within a short time.

The Auburn game offers coincidence by the fact that while the freshman teams are battling at Pensacola, the University of Florida and Auburn will be mixing at Gainesville.

AMATEUR BALL TEAMS HALTED BY WEATHER

Expert Writes Series of Articles for Constitution Explaining Game.

Opening games of the 1928 baseball season of the Y-Church Athletic association were postponed on account of the heavy rain Saturday afternoon. The games next week will be played as scheduled in the five leagues sponsored by the association.

The postponement of yesterday's games will give the teams another week for practice and will open the opening game sounds next Saturday the teams are expected to get away to a flying start.

The regular Monday night meeting of this association at the Y. M. C. A. will enable teams that were late in getting started to enter a league.

Openings of amateur baseball teams are eligible for berths in this league and any team sponsored by a Sunday school will be accepted for one of the open berths.

The schedule when possible for the opening games will be the same as those published the past week.

Heavy Rain Halts Women's Tourney

Biloxi, Miss., April 14.—(R)—A heavy rain today terminated the 36-hole final of the Pan-American women's amateur golf tournament at the end of the ninth hole when Miss Glennie Collett, of Providence, R. I., was leading Miss Mary Turpie, of New York, 1 up. The remaining 17 holes will be played tomorrow morning.

Both players made the nine holes in 43. The first, third, sixth and seventh were even.

Miss Turpie, who had a hole in one on the fourth hole and Miss Collett took the lead at the fifth, added another hole at the eighth but lost the ninth.

The express instruction was issued by the war department in Washington encouraging all post commanders to establish polo clubs wherever practicable. The expressed object was "to promote skill in horsemanship and daring."

In subsequent items on the subject of polo, it shall present the rules of the game, the history of the polo player, and the sportsmanship and traditions of the galloping game.

Polo Holds Most Thrills Of All Sports

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY.

New York, April 14.—Slice $500,000 off Jack Dempsey's bank roll and the former heavyweight champion may be forced to return to the ring.

Jack Kearns, former manager of the "Manassa Mauler," is suing Dempsey for just such an amount and if Kearns should win Dempsey might be seen in the ring again as of September.

On arrival here from the Philippines, the man who has been the Dempsey's counsel has assured him that he will be a free agent.

Dempsey's hand was temporarily exposed when Kearns' lawyers asked Judge Runyon to declare a mistrial at Newark, N. J., last November. Kearns' counsel charged jury-fixing, tampering with bribery, but was unable to prove it. Kearns was forced to withdraw the suit from the court.

May Have to Fight.

But if the unexpected should happen when the case is brought before Judge John C. Knox in federal court next week, Kearns' hand will be exposed again.

Two Feature Games Booked For Tuesday

Second Round of Games Will Start Friday With Three Tiffs on Tap.

Tuesday of this week will see the final games of the first round of the city prep league played. Beginning Friday the second round is scheduled to begin.

The Boys' High vs. Fulton, and Tech High vs. G. M. A. encounters loom as the feature attractions on the card for the second round events of the week.

Boys' High, by its good work in the first part of the season has assumed a leading position in the league, with the Smithies and Fulton teams in close pursuit.

Fulton, by its victories over University and Boys' High, gave the doper a rather severe jolt and is being watched as a dangerous contender at the present time.

The schedule for the second half follows:

Boys' High vs. Marist, at Boys' High.

East Point vs. Fulton, at Fulton.

Tech High vs. G. M. A., at G. M. A.

APRIL 20.

Boys' High vs. Fulton, at Boys' High.

G. M. A. vs. Marist, at Marist.

Philip H. Draper, Jr., of Troy, N. Y., recently elected captain of the cadets' basketball team for next season, is continuing at the Military academy a family athletic tradition instilled in him by his father and two uncles.

Draper's father, now a business man in Troy, played on the Williams football team in 1894 and 1895 and was considered one of the best backs of his day. He played with the Chicago athletic association in 1890 and 1897 among his teammates being Mayor William Hale Thompson, of Chicago, and Rex Beach, the novelist.

Former State Senator Frederick E. Draper, an uncle of the West Point captain, played on the football and basketball at Williams three years, being captain of the baseball team in 1895. He was the receiving end of the famous college football team of Lewis and Draper. The pitcher, Ted Lewis, was a star for several years with the Boston Nationals.

Dr. Louis LeGrand Draper, of New York, the other uncle, captained the Williams football team in 1890 and led his squad in victories over Dartmouth and Amherst to win the triangular championship.

In addition to starring on the basketball court, young Draper has given a good account of himself since given this opportunity on the gridiron and this spring is a member of the lacrosse team.

WHIZ OPENING AT GUN CLUB IS POSTPONED

The official opening of the Peachtree Gun club whiz traps set for yesterday was postponed until next Saturday on account of rain. Despite the rain, however, 10 shooters went out Saturday and won through and down to the whiz course. Fifty targets were shot over this course and when the scores were totaled, Hal McKenzie led the field with a score of 44550. Worth E. Yankey was second with 40200, and targets to his credit. The event proved very popular and a big time is expected next Saturday. Two sterling trophies will be awarded and all local and visiting shooters are cordially invited to attend.

After the whiz shoot, the shooters went back to the regular traps, shooting 50 singles and the regular handicap and double programs. J. H. Fuller was high in the 50 singles and Sam D'Amato won in the doubles. McKenzie was unexpectedly high on the 25 yard handicap event.

Heeney Best Pug In U. S., Says Paulino

Paulino Uzcudun, who has fought Tom Heeney twice, getting a draw and a somewhat questionable decision, thinks Heeney is the best fighter in the United States—and he doesn't even except Gene Tunney.

That's what Paulino said just before sailing for Spain and a family reunion with his mother and nine brothers and sisters in his home village of Regil in the Province of Leon. Paulino said, he thought Heeney deserved the title shot. The Basque added that if Tunney does some boxing at Barcelona in 1929, as he plans, for King Alfonso's big athletic exposition, he, Paulino, will fight Tunney free of charge for the entertainment of his countrymen.

A novelty musical organization, the Cairo Brothers Accordion Trio, will broadcast a program sponsored by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation over WSB Wednesday night from 7 to 8 o'clock. This organization will offer a varied musical program including piano, accordion selections, soloists, violin solos, etc., ranging from the classics to the popular. From 6:30 to 7 o'clock, Paul and John, "the two disciples of harmony," will conduct a request program. Immediately following them Caroline Scott Perkins, soprano, will be heard in a short program of songs.

Dr. Joe P. Bowdoin, of the health duo, are scheduled to appear on the Monday dinnerbell R. F. D. club program which is broadcast from the Sears-Roebuck tower studio. Dr. Joe P. Bowdoin, deputy commissioner of health, state board of health, will deliver a short health message entitled, "Ghosts of Food."

The first half of the Wednesday dinnerbell program will be devoted to The Farmers' Radio Newspaper and the last half hour from 12 to 12:30 o'clock, will be given by Lawrence Smith, pianist; Long Sisters, radio tennis, and Bruce Waggoner, singer with violin.

Friday noon Frank W. Day, flute soloist, and the Sears-Roebuck Players, including Harry Pomar, H. E. Leppert and Allan Walker, will broadcast the dinnerbell R. F. D. club program. Mr. Pomar will sing several selections during the hour.

Mrs. R. F. Whitchurch, home adviser of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, will talk to the home-makers of the WSB audience each morning at 10 o'clock on the following subjects: "Lucinda Plans Her Vacation," "Short Dinners For Those Who Love Island," "Campaigning Against Dangerous Summer Foods," "Flavor Hints," and "Men's Questions and Answers." As is customary, a little playlet will be broadcast on Friday morning.

Each day at 10 a. m., 12:05 and 2:30 p. m., the weather and market reports will be broadcast from the Sears-Roebuck studio. On Saturday morning following the homemakers' program, Lawrence Smith, pianist, and Ralph Richardson, blind singer, will conduct a request program and "Uncle

STROMBERG HOUR OF OLD FAVORITES

"Last Night" will be played as a violin solo by Godfrey Ludlow, accompanied with McLeod, vibraphonist, while Mrs. McLeod will play "Juanita" as a solo.

The members of the quartet are Milton J. Cross, first tenor; Maurice Tyler, second tenor; Walter Preston, baritone, and Marley R. Sheris, bass.

The complete program follows:

"Treasure Chest of Memory" quartet and vibraphone; "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" quartet; "Absent" quartet and vibraphone; "Last Night" violin solo with vibraphone accompaniment; Godfrey Ludlow, violin solo; "Sweet Home, Sweet Home," quartet; "Watch for the Wagon" quartet; "Juanita," vibraphone solo, Keith Smith, violin; "Perfect Day," quartet; "Home, Sweet Home," quartet, violin and vibraphone.

"Song of Nellie Home" and "Watch for the Wagon" sung by the quartet.

"Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" and "A Perfect Day." The quartet's opening song will be "Treasure Chest of Memory," and "Home, Sweet Home" will be the closing number.

PROBLEMS SOLVED IN ONE-DIAL CONTROL

Inclusion of single-tuning control in receivers has long been desired without considerable difficulty. It has been a real task to produce the same selectivity in this type of receiver that characterizes the receiver in which circuit was separately designed.

The success of the single tuning control receiver depends on careful matching of individual circuits. This in turn depends upon matching of coils, wiring and especially condensers.

Condensers have been designed in factors of proportion. Condensers have been designed in factors of proportion. Any number of condensers can be made having capacities that vary one from the other in only slight degrees. However, it is very difficult to construct condensers having equal calibrations on all capacities. For instance, four condensers used in the same receiver are possible, giving the same capacity reading at four different points. When each condenser is engaged half way, however, discrepancies are very apt to show up and when fully engaged, even greater discrepancies.

It has been the task of Stromberg-Carlson to solve this in the design of their single tuning control receivers to minimize these discrepancies to the greatest possible extent. Condensers undergo in their laboratories extremely rigid tests to insure the selection of the receiver in which each circuit was separately designed.

HUPMOBILE'S amazing record of sales with the new Century Six and Eight has a far deeper foundation than the brilliant new beauty of these cars. It rests solidly upon the widespread respect which buyers have for traditional Hupmobile standards of engineering and manufacturing excellence. Among the features which rank the new Century Hupmobiles far in front in mechanical design are advanced high compression motors, rigid, non-weaving chassis, cam-and-lever steering for easy control of balloon tires, double vibration dampers and entirely new steeldraulic four-wheel brakes. Investigate these and a score of other Hupmobile features and you will realize that on the basis of style, speed, power and strength, the new Century Hupmobiles represent the century's greatest value in the moderately priced field.

RADIO-ING² The Air Waves.

BY THE DIAL TWISTER.

A device to eliminate static, the invention of a veteran of the naval reserve who spent 21 years in painstaking labor expended his small savings to perfect it, is to be installed at Radio Central of the navy. If the apparatus is as efficient as tests by navy engineers indicate, William J. Scott, erstwhile repairer of band instruments, will win a place in radio's hall of fame for an invaluable contribution to wireless communication.

Scott's invention is the elaphone. In 1907 he conceived the idea of producing a noise eliminating machine. He was employed in the navy's band instrument repair shop and was regarded as an expert technician. His first machines were huge, unwieldy instruments, but he kept on working that he might place at the disposal of the navy a device that would be useful.

The elaphone today is a compact, sound-filtering machine which is connected to the output of the radio receiver. The operator receiving the signals through headphones attached to the clariphone. Signals are conducted to a sound receiving chamber in the clariphone, to which is connected a series of tubes. The tubes have the function of these tubes to break up the sound waves prior to their entry into a sound transmitting chamber, rejecting the noises and preserving the harmonic signals.

Sound waves due to static and other noises are absent, irregular and non-existent. The tubes of radio signals are uniform and produce harmonies with a well defined frequency. The receiving chamber of the clariphone is accurately tuned to these harmonic sounds and all static and other extraneous noises not in resonance with the signal are absorbed by the filter tubes.

The instrument is designed primarily to eliminate interference from radio code and other forms of communication, and Scott now is undertaking the development of a clariphone for use with radio telephone receivers. "It is believed this development will produce a very efficient interference eliminator of much smaller dimensions than those of the present machine," Mr. Scott declared.

To provide correct supply from a B eliminator a voltage divider has been designed for use with any plate power device. It consists of wire resistances equipped with sliders, and the unit is connected between the B plates maximum and the negative of the eliminator. The sliders permit any adjustment of the voltage.

Flint, Mich., April 14.—A period of heightened business activity lies ahead of the automobile industry, in the opinion of C. W. Churchill, general sales manager of the Buick Motor company, who recently returned from a trip on which he studied prospects in various parts of the United States. Mr. Churchill predicts a continuation of the unusual activity which the demand has been registering for several weeks past, and foresees both for Buick and other manufacturers, a generally satisfactory year.

As every manufacturer of automobiles knows, the demand for his product is affected by the business, industrial, and agricultural trends over the country as a whole. The increased production schedules recently announced by Buick reflect a quickening of the business pulse which began to be felt in February and which, careful surveys indicate, is repeating itself in the surrounding country. No

FEMININE INFLUENCE SEEN IN 1929 DESIGN

The ever-increasing influence of the gentler sex in the final choice of this or that motor car is a matter that all automobile manufacturers are taking into consideration in greater measure each year. This feminine influence was especially noticeable in the colors and appointments of the many new models on exhibit at the 1928 national automobile shows.

Statistics show that direct sales of motor cars to women buyers is 17 per cent and that women's influence in the sale of automobiles is as high as 90 per cent. Fifty-one per cent of all automobile owners' wives who were questioned said they selected, designed, drive—and of this number more than 56 per cent drive more than do their husbands. So here is a vast number of women who are more concerned in the functioning and condition of the family automobile than their husbands. The drive it more and rely on it more and consequently are as much interested in its operation as they are in its comforts and appointments.

In the 1929 Reo Flying Cloud, the most popular car in the world, the beauty of exterior and interior, new modish appointments and the comfort which my lady looks for and appreciates, but Reo designers have also created many year-ahead operating advantages which anticipate what women drivers expect no sooner than a year from now, officials state. In the new 1929 Reo Flying Cloud she will find handling ease that requires but a very small fraction of her strength, steering ease that is controlled by a new type, an easily reached brake pedal that stops the new Flying Cloud at the touch of her toes and an ability to scoot through traffic faster than she ever has before.

It is one of many other advantages found in the new models, which will still further increase the popularity of the Flying Cloud among women drivers, and enable the new 1929 Flying Cloud to exceed even the record-breaking production of last year, Reo officials believe.

These national officials and southern representatives of the widely-known Champion spark plugs Saturday ended their zone convention at the Biltmore hotel here. Front row, left to right: L. W. Davis, A. B. Griffin, E. V. Deaton, C. F. Coggesell. Center row, T. J. Weaver, W. E. Radbone, district manager; F. R. Caswell, vice president in charge of sales; M. C. Dewitt, vice president in charge of advertising; Ross Jarman, research engineer; R. A. Cochran. Back row, W. N. Moltz, R. R. "Bob" Thomas, G. L. Baker, manager Atlanta zone; D. F. Fourcher, F. B. Bowen and A. L. Bynum.

Representatives of Champion spark plugs in the south Saturday closed an enthusiastic three-day zone convention at the Biltmore hotel, which was marked by technical discussions of the latest spark plug product and by an outline looking to expansion of business not only in the south but throughout the country.

The Atlanta zone meeting is one of a series of similar conventions being held by the Champion Spark Plug company throughout the United factory, outstanding among whom were F. R. Caswell, vice president in charge of sales; Ross Jarman, research engineer; M. C. De Witt, vice president in charge of advertising, and W. E. Radbone, district manager various department heads from the Champion spark plugs.

Expert Diagnosis of Auto Iills Cadillac Practice

Buying a car from an organization which deals in cars of the highest grade is much like buying precious stones from Tiffany's or buying objects d'art from exclusive Fifth Avenue galleries. One expects not only an article which is unsurpassably fine but he also expects a very high and intelligent order of personal service. This is one of the greatest gifts given to the public by Mr. Nichols, Director of General Service manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, for the development of the company's service policy through national and local service conventions, educational work and contacts of the company with service representatives, books, slide films and research work.

"After the sale a Cadillac or LaSalle owner's contacts with the company are through the service department," Mr. Nichols states. "There is very little direct contact between man and prompt attention. Beyond that he wants to know three things: what is wrong with his car, how much it will cost to fix it and when he can get it. Correct answers to these questions have been taken as guides for the management of our service department.

"With standardized service methods and with business-like management of the service station, it has not been difficult to tell an owner when he can get his car, and how much it will cost.

Expert Diagnosis

"But the first question is the most important of all. Much of our recent service research and development has been for the purpose of providing a correct decision as to what attention the car needs.

"Development of diagnosis in automobiles has progressed in recent years, as has the diagnosis of diseases of human life has progressed in the medical profession during the past quarter century.

"There are, for instance, 36 reasons for a car overheating. One of them is faulty lubrication. Another is a leaky cylinder, which causes the cooling system. There are others such as excessive carbon deposits, dragging brakes and late timing. If a service man is well trained in diagnosis, he can quickly apply tests and by a process of elimination immediately

Wallace Bros. Merit Appointment As Chevrolet Dealers in Inman Park

IN accordance with the recent appointment by the Chevrolet Motor Company division of the General Motors Corporation of J. C. and F. E. Wallace as local Chevrolet dealers—the Wallace Brothers announce the official opening of their splendid new organization on Euclid avenue in Inman Park.

The new company, known as the Wallace-Chevrolet Company is prepared to fully meet the requirements of the trade as well as ranking high in marks which qualify them as authorized Chevrolet dealers.

F. E. WALLACE

Adequate display rooms are provided for the showing of all the latest models to best advantage. The sales department includes only men of experience who are under the direct supervision of the Wallace brothers, and under the guidance of these officials who have been widely prominent in the automobile world for a number of years, one may be assured of the courtesy and service which is desirably outstanding.

In conjunction with the sales department, the company operates a service and parts department where equipment and facilities for rendering service and supplying any needed parts will be available at all times. This department will be in charge of special Chevrolet mechanics who are competent to fulfill every need.

The Wallace company will fill a vital need in the Inman Park sections and visitors to the new display rooms are cordially invited.

Stock Tests Described By Chrysler Engineers place his finger on the one condition which is causing improper functioning of a car.

"In our sales efforts, we have taken the position that we are selling a car, not a service, and in transportation, that the owner of a Cadillac or LaSalle car is really buying membership in an institution, and that he is entitled to satisfactory performance from his car and satisfactory relations with the company and its service department. When he brings his car to the service station, he is entitled to know not only when he can get it, and how much it will cost, but also what work it requires.

"Our educational work is being carried out through books and slide films and also by an educational field force who are training service superintendents, foremen and shop men in correct diagnosis.

"Our diagnostic service is given in service clinics held at 30 key points, which distributors and dealers send their men. Here the men gather at periodic intervals and devote a week's time to the intensive study of how best to serve the owners of Cadillac and LaSalle cars.

"The system has already been developed to a point where any owner can obtain exactly the same type of service in any authorized Cadillac-LaSalle service station in the United States as he would in his own home city."

What is described as the most terrible punishment ever meted out to an automobile is the "road shock test" given to Chrysler cars on a specially constructed testing machine developed by Chrysler engineers.

These engineers explain that the plan was devised because they had long known that outdoor open road tests, given to determine the ability of other motor supports, were entirely inadequate to meet Chrysler standards. It was because of the limitations of outdoor testing that the new machine was developed, and that it is unique in its application to this type of work.

With this new device two elementary features are possible of attainment, the engineers explain.

First, the subjecting of the car to an enormous magnitude of severe road shocks within the space of a few hours, a feature held to be impossible in roadway testing, because no driver could physically stand the continuous severe abuse and still record vital performance details while the car is in operation.

pairs of rollers, specially constructed gear connections operate the forward rollers. Through this means the front wheels of the car are rotated exactly as though they were operating on the road and at a speed equivalent to that of the rear wheels, paralleling high-way driving.

Roughness Exaggerated.

Mounted on all rollers are irregularly spaced, raised metal cleats which severely bump and toss about the entire car, exaggerating the effect of roughness. With this machine, the intensity and frequency of this terrific pounding and wracking can be continued indefinitely and can be exactly duplicated day after day. Automatic controls attached to the machine provide for the irregularities of acceleration and deceleration that assists in producing a wide range of driving over these bumps. No owner will subject his car to such punishment as hundreds of miles of driving over these cleats and, equally important, their effect that the wheels of the car are tossed about like a chip upon a rough sea.

It is claimed for the road shock machine that there is not a single unit in the entire world that can be tested under these conditions. Front axle, steering assembly, wheels, springs, body, chassis, engine mounting and every rigid and semi-rigid assembly is subjected to terrific abuse.

THIS V-TYPE EIGHT ASSURES CONSISTENTLY BRILLIANT PERFORMANCE

CADILLAC and La Salle—with their Cadillac-perfected V-type, 8-cylinder engines, assuring consistently brilliant performance—occupy almost exclusively the highest fine-car field.

None but Cadillac can cater to this topmost market because none else has ever been able to command the volume which holds down Cadillac and La Salle prices.

Successful motor car manufacturing consists in picking out a prosperous market and holding that clientele.

25 years ago Cadillac selected the highest division. Today its following of those who demand the very finest of fine cars constitutes almost the entire market for such cars.

There is no room for others—excepting with limited productions. And this means prohibitive prices which exclude them from real rivalry with Cadillac and La Salle.

Others cannot begin to offer the unsafely brilliant performance of the 90-degree, V-type Cadillac-La Salle engine, the supreme luxury of Fisher and Fisher-Fleetwood bodies—because their market can never be big enough to spread the cost of Cadillac manufacturing.

The development that makes today's 90-degree, V-type Cadillac-La Salle engine the highest expression of 8-cylinder performance could never have been accomplished were it not for Cadillac's command of this market.

This is something that everybody can understand. Cadillac and La Salle luxury and refinements and value ever increasing. Cadillac and La Salle prices continuing to be leveled far below other cars that attempt to approach their superiorities but are inevitably defeated by the yoke of lesser volume.

It is inescapable that, with Cadillac volume constantly increasing, the luxury and value of Cadillac and La Salle should correspondingly increase.

New lower La Salle prices, $2350 to $2875. Cadillac prices, $3295 to $3950. Exclusive Fisher and Fisher-Fleetwood custom-built bodies up to $5500. All prices f. o. b. Detroit.

Cadillac welcomes an opportunity to prove these statements.

STUTZ WILL RACE EUROPEAN CHAMP

Ample reason for giving the informal title of "stock champion of Europe" to the Hispano-Suiza car that will meet a Stutz Black Hawk in a 24-hour international match race on the Indianapolis motor speedway on April 16.

April 16, is found in the records established by Hispano-Suiza motors on land, on the water and in the air, conquering the road, in the famous French motor has extended its supremacy to the water and the air as well.

The motor now used in Hispano-Suiza cars and which will power C. T. Weymann's Biplane model in the battle with the American stock car champion on the Indianapolis track, was developed for aviation use during the world war. Not until this motor was perfected did the ailerons in the air really materialize, and by the end of the war, nearly half of all aviation motors in allied service were Hispano-Suiza.

Hispano motor, car building, dated from 1904, but after the war the new Hispano motor was adapted to automobile and marine use, and the design has been maintained. With Barnato driving, a Hispano-Suiza established new world speed records at Brooklands, England, in 1921, for 200 and 300 miles, for 250, 300, 400 and 500 kilometers, and for two and three hour runs. In the same year, new world's aviation speed records were made by Lieutenant Bonnet of the French army, in a plane powered with a Hispano-Suiza motor. Power boats equipped with Hispano-Suiza motors attain speeds of from 65 to 85 miles an hour.

What is believed to be a revolutionary step in motor car merchandising was taken recently by George H. Williams, Milwaukee distributor for Franklin automobiles, when he accepted a used airplane as part payment on a new Franklin car. The ship, a "LaRhône" Scout type biplane of 22-foot wing spread, is powered by a French "LaRhône" rotary air-cooled motor.

"Merely in the line of business," said Mr. Williams, "and, of course, we haven't been doing it right along. Never heard of anybody doing it before, but we are sold on the air-cooled motor. (Franklin has an air-cooled motor, you know.) No, we do not want it as a personal plane. We are putting an ad in the classified section to sell the plane just as we would a used car."

Observers in the automobile field see particular interest in the incident, as it is believed a new field of motor car dealers trying to sell airplane dealers. A number of automobile dealers have taken the agency for airplanes as subsidiary to their automobile business, and it is claimed that before long automobiles and airplanes will exchange in the market quite as commonly as used cars are now turned on in new cars.

Hundred New Whippet Sixes in Drive Away

342,184 Chevrolets Built During First 1928 Quarter

Detroit, Mich., April 14.—With March production running 14 per cent ahead of any previous month in history, and production and sales organizations operating at a record-shattering pace, the Chevrolet Motor company for the first quarter of 1928 had a total of 342,184 cars and trucks, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, announced here today.

This record output is 70,000 units more than the turnout during the corresponding period last year, and gives substantial backing to the statement made a week ago by Chevrolet executives that the country is in the midst of an unusual era of prosperity that is destined to hold throughout the greater part of the year.

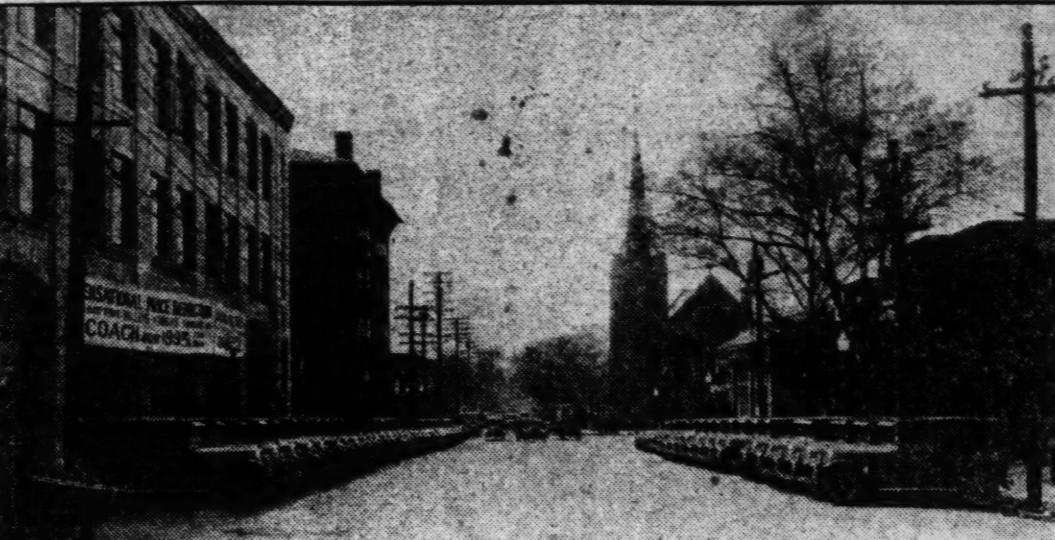

In March Chevrolet built 133,657 cars and trucks. This is 17,000 units better than February, 1928, which previously was the largest month's output in the 10-year existence of the company. Mr. Knudsen pointed out.

On top of the new high performance in March, the 14 domestic Chevrolet factories are building cars as fast as precision methods will permit, with the expectation that April, despite having two less working days than March, will show practically as high a production volume as the month just ended. Mr. Knudsen stated that still higher records are possible when a new assembly plant with a capacity of 350 cars a day, which is shortly to be opened at Atlanta, gets under way to augment the output of the other factories.

An unusual feature of the March output was the fact that more than 113,000 units of the total volume were absorbed by the domestic market to assure all dealers of an adequate number for prompt delivery.

The remarkable showing of the company was interpreted here as a sweeping endorsement of the refinements embodied in the Bigger and Better Chevrolet as well as a tribute to the far-seeing policy of Chevrolet officials in arranging their production facilities so that cars might be instantly available to the public.

Coincident with the announcement by the Willys-Overland company, of their entirely new Whippet Six, several hundred enthusiastic Georgia dealers attended a meeting at the Le Roux Motor company, distributors here. Above is shown a part of the hundred new Whippets they drove back to their hometowns. Mr. Le Roux stated after the meeting "that it was one of the largest drive aways ever held in this section of the country."

CHEAP RUBBER TIRE WON BY FIRESTONE

Miami Beach, Fla., April 14.—(Special)—Harvey S. Firestone, rubber king and manufacturer of tires at Akron, Ohio, and who has his winter home here, sat in his study deluged with telegrams of congratulations, and with a sense of satisfaction that his five-year battle to get rubber from the Rio Grande Valley of Brazil, the American motorist has been won.

During the five years, most of which time he was fighting alone, the American motorist has paid out more than a billion dollars in excess of what it should have for rubber tires.

Mr. Firestone's good record in rendering and rendering telegrams and cables which informed him of the drop in crude rubber quotations from 28 cents to close at 21 1/2 cents per pound. On November 1, 1922, the British colonial office restricted the production of rubber in the colonies to 60,000 tons of material, and immediately gave from 15 cents to 37 cents a pound, and in 1925 rubber sold as high as $1.22 per pound. The announcement by Premier Baldwin that he had appointed a committee to investigate the restriction caused the price to drop to 10 cents from 42 cents to 28 cents a pound.

When the American motorist realized that an increase of 1 cent a pound would mean $8,000,000 annually, they can better appreciate what Mr. Firestone has really done for them, whose name has always stood in the forefront of the international controversy.

The British restriction on rubber has been removed. It will go into effect on November 1. This action, however, does not mean that there will be an immediate drop in tire prices, as manufacturers must carry a large amount of surplus rubber on hand and in transit from the rubber countries. But it does mean an even saving of millions to the motorists.

The finest Oil for Automobile Motors now available through

ALEXANDER-SEEWALD CO.

HERE'S good news for every motorist who takes pride in the performance of his car. It means that the highest grade of lubrication service now is available to you.

It's a fact that Pennzoil is the finest oil you can buy for your motor. It holds its body—its lubricating value—for hundreds of miles longer than ordinary oils. You need change it only half as often.

Pennzoil, 100% supreme Pennsylvania quality doesn't break down under intense heat. You can keep your motor going at high speed over long, continuous runs without worrying about lubrication—if you have a crankcase filling of Pennzoil.

That accounts for the wide-spread choice of Pennzoil when a motor is to be put to any grueling test.

Pennzoil has made unbeatable records in air-planes—speed boats—racing cars—endurance runs—general automobile use. It has an unquestioned reputation of always furnishing safe, sure lubrication.

For your motor's sake use Pennzoil. You can't duplicate its quality. The Pennzoil sign shows you where to get the best service. Look for it.

THE PENNZOIL CO., Offices and Refinery: Oil City, Pa.

New York to Germany, Chamberlain chose Pennzoil when he flew from New York to Germany, in the longest trans-Atlantic flight on record. He trusted in Pennzoil's ability to keep his motor going when the slightest "miss" or overheating would have meant disaster. He used it, too, when with Arctic he broke America's endurance record by staying in the air over 51 hours with an oil consumption of 43 1/2 gallons of Pennzoil.

Three relief drivers drove a Peerless Six-80 sedan, for 31 days, covering 22,095 non-stop miles. The Peerless and the crew's car were never changed and only 10 quarts of Pennzoil were added—an average of 2209 1/2 miles per quart of Pennzoil.

3302 miles between New York and San Francisco covered in 77 hours, 40 minutes. That's the startling achievement of Ab Jenkins in his Studebaker Commander Sedan. Only 5 quarts of Pennzoil were used and the oil was not changed once throughout the trip.

MORRIS' CLOSE 7 HOME SALES

Sale of seven homes by F. P. & Geo. J. Morris, to be constructed by that company for the purchasers, featured announcement Saturday by Kellie F. Melton, manager of the Morris residence building sales department. The business, booked within short period, indicates a continuation of the heavy home sales and construction program undertaken by the company since the first of the year.

Morris sold and will build for Mr. and Mrs. Jesse A. Barrett a seven-room bungalow of brick, American type architecture. The site of the home is on Northview avenue.

A six-room bungalow of unusual type, American architecture, will be built for Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hobson on Morningdale drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Little, of 1559 Peachtree road, have contracted for a beautiful home to be erected in Garden Hills, on Bolling road. The Littles are natives of England. Mr. Melton remarked, and selected a typical English residence, and selected a picture of the anticipated drawing in an advertisement of F. P. & Geo. J. Morris, in the Constitution classified ad section.

A home for Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wingate will be built on South Warren street, Kirkwood, according to a contract closed with Morris. The home is a six-room brick bungalow of special American design.

Another home, six rooms, brick veneer and American type architecture, is to be erected on Sherwood road, in Morningside for A. E. Stubblefield.

Morris will also erect a specially designed bungalow for Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bailey. The residence will contain six rooms, and will be situated on Morningdale drive.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Stripling have contracted for a six-room bungalow of special design and brick construction, to be erected on Rogers avenue, in West End Park.

MASELLS SELL SPRING LEASEHOLD

History of an important Spring street development was revealed Sunday in announcement by S. A. Massell, secretary of the Massell Realty company, big local property developers, of a leasehold sale.

The Massell company sold its leasehold for a period of years to Louis Wellhouse, on the commercial structure, the northeast corner of Spring and Simpson streets. The consideration was not announced but understood to have involved a large sum.

The undertaking is one of the many Massell developments on Spring street. The corner site, owned by Mr. Wellhouse and measuring 100 feet on Spring and 50 feet on Simpson was sold for $2,500 per year for 10 years at the following sliding-scale rental: $2,500 per year for the first 10 years; $3,000 per year for the second 10 years; $3,500 per year for the third 10 years; $4,000 per year for the fourth 10 years, and $4,500 per year for the fifth 10 years.

The Massell company then erected a two-story building with 5 ground-floor stores, and leased the space to various tenants, bringing an annual income of approximately $6,000 per year. In the latest transaction, Massell resold their improved leasehold to the original owner of the land.

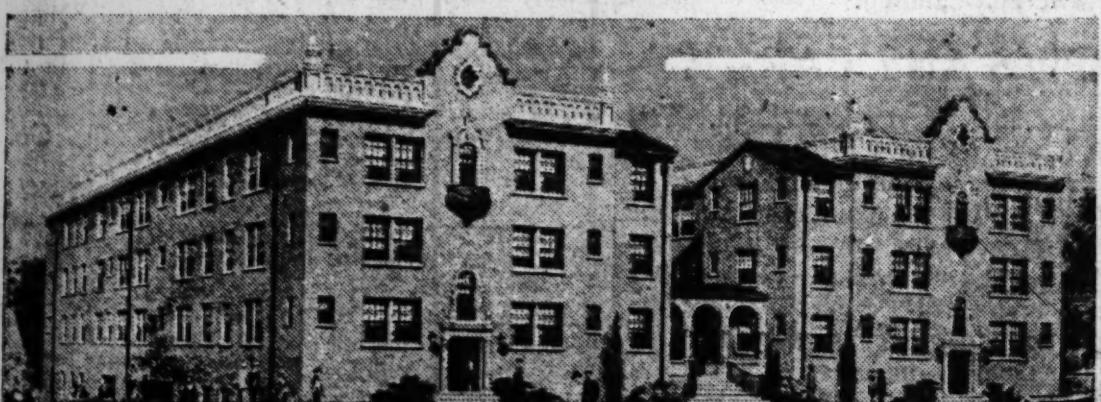

Salvation Army Leader Appeals For Old Clothes

Comfort of thousands of poor people here this winter will depend on Atlanta's activity in cleaning out attics and clothes closets of old clothing, paper, furniture and other things discarded but still subject to repair or conversion for further service, it was declared Saturday by Capt. H. Range, of the Salvation Army, in a statement on the eve of the opening of the city's annual "Clean Up, Paint Up Week."

The social service department of the army, Captain Range said, is depending entirely on the results of this week for the collection of old clothing, furniture and other materials necessary to carry the department's unfortunate charges over the cold weather period.

Four trucks will be used by the department to send for old clothing, paper, parts and rags cleaned out of storage places during "Clean Up, Paint Up Week." A truck will be dispatched to any home in the city the afternoon following a call to Ivy 2224 in the morning or on the morning following a call made in the afternoon.

$350,000 Granada Apartments Sale Is Largest Announced This Week

Granada apartments, important residential structure on West Peachtree street at Sixteenth street, which figured in the largest real estate sale of the week. The consideration was $350,000. The Morrison Realty company sold the property for C. A. Mathews to the International Life Insurance company, of St. Louis. The purchasers gave as part payment large tracts of farm acreage in south Georgia.

be 200 cars. Pringle and Smith are the architects.

According to the contract, the Forsyth Street Garage corporation, builders and operators, will handle the free parking service for customers of M. Rich & Bros. Co. for a term of ten years. It is estimated that over the period of the contract an expenditure of more than $325,000 by Rich's for this customers' service will be involved.

Draper-Owens company negotiated as agents the lease between owner of the property and the Forsyth Street Garage corporation and also handled the contract between the garage operators and Rich's. The property has a frontage of 90 feet on Forsyth street and 90 feet on Hunter street. It is in the same block with the large department store and readily accessible for customers of the institution. The intersection on which the site is located, it is directly across from the Hunter street approach to the Spring street viaduct.

BIG LEASE MADE BY ADAMS-CATES

Lease of a large commercial building at 104-6 Pryor street, S. W., formerly occupied by Ragan-Malones company for a term of years, at an aggregate rental of $60,000, featured a large list of recent deals handled by Adams-Cates company, according to announcement Saturday by H. H. Arnold, head of the lease department.

The Pryor street structure, which is five stories high over a basement, was leased for Mrs. Edna Avery Jones to the Atlanta Auction and Commission company. The Atlanta Auction and Commission company has been in Atlanta for a period of years and in taking possession of the building will have greater space for their increased business, it was stated.

The list of leases made by Adams-Cates company as agents and real estate brokers, includes the local commercial lease market, follows:

For E. R. Black to Southeastern Printers' Supply company, building of three floors and basement, 207-9 Trinity avenue. This concern has been operating in Atlanta for a number of years and its increased business made it necessary to secure larger quarters. This lease is for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $30,000.

For M. M. McP. Inman to Standard Scale and Fixture company store, 234 Mitchell street, S. W.

For M. Rich & Bros. Co. to McDaniel's Office Supply company, storeroom at 317 Peachtree street.

Byrd Printing Co. Named Defendant In Bankruptcy Suit

Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were filed Saturday against the Byrd Printing company by the Fulton National Bank of Atlanta in United States Bankruptcy court. The bank presented claims represented by two judgments totaling $4,552.79, stating that the value of securities held is $1,000, leaving $3,532.79 of the claim unsecured.

The petition alleges that the Byrd Printing company permitted its creditor, the Fulton National bank, to obtain preference while the Byrd Printing company was insolvent, the preference obtained through legal procedure and not having vacated or discharged the same at least five days before sale or final disposition of the property affected by the alleged preference.

Little, Powell, Smith & Goldstein filed the petition on the paper. A hearing on the paper was set for April 24.

Owens Outlines Details of Map Service in Board

Details of the map service being provided by the Atlanta Real Estate board for its members were outlined Saturday in an announcement by Frank C. Owens, president. The set of maps were recently purchased by the board and constitute one of the most complete property guides ever to be displayed here.

The maps show every piece of property in the city of Atlanta and surrounding territory, giving approximate dimensions of lot, street number, location, kind and size of building, and the date of construction.

The maps will be used to a large extent in the preparation of the atlases of the Atlanta Real Estate board in posting each piece of property of that has been appraised during the past four years by the board.

More than 600 pieces of property will be posted, amounting to more than $40,000,000. It will be the responsibility of the map service to appraise, value of the land, value of the improvements, size and market value of the appraisal as of the date it was appraised.

President Owens further states that steps are being taken now by the officers of the board to collect all data in the use of these maps by the members and that each member will be issued a mail of the services offered in this way. All members are urged to take advantage of the information offered by these maps inasmuch as they are put in and maintained by the board at quite a large expense.

LOCKHART ADVOCATES SPARK PLUG CHANGING

Frank Lockhart, the great race driver, in a recent letter to the Chamber of Commerce, wrote the following:

"I changed the spark plugs a my Stutz Weymann sedan today after they had gone something over 10,000 miles. I never knew I have spark plugs in the car until I change them according to your recommendation at that mileage."

"I wish you to know that I have never known a spark plug the equal of Champion. I have in my stock cars, dirt track racing cars, and my speedway racing cars constantly. They perform wonderfully well for me under the trying circumstances of high compression racing motors which turn up to revolutions even beyond 10,000 a minute. It seems sometimes to have a plug come out of a racing motor after the grind of a 200 or 500-mile race, where the motor is kept turning at above 6,500 revolutions per minute for the entire distance."

"A dependable spark plug to a race car is a must. I have one in his pocket. Think what a chance any driver would have if his motor should suddenly drop a cylinder due to a faulty plug!"

"While the money cost would not be so great in my touring car, the annoyance is still there. I put in Champion now, and forget them."

"The Champions in my Daytona Beach Stutz Black Hawk Special, in my trial for the world's mile record, behaved admirably. They had their work cut out for them, too, and they remained perfectly reliable. Without a perfect spark plug it would have been impossible to travel 225 miles an hour, as I was traveling when I ran into a rain squall, could not see and finished in the ocean."

"I unhesitatingly endorse Champion spark plugs for all uses. If they were not 100 per cent dependable I assure you I could not afford to use them for a minute."

INDIAN ANNOUNCES NEWEST MOTOCYCLE

The Indian Motorcycle company at Springfield, Mass., announced this week the new motocycle, the new Indian Scout (series 101), which incorporates many improvements and new features. Information on the changes which give greater safety and beauty of lines has spread from coast to coast even before the official public announcement, and the motocycle would have been taken in if by storm. Orders at the present time, according to a report received by W. R. Roberts, are keeping the Indian factory working day and night.

Perhaps the most important feature on this new model is the Mr. R. R. is the braking system, which gives a pleasing effect never before seen in any motorcycle. The motor is set further forward in the frame, giving more even distribution of weight and perfect balance. New, graceful handlebars and adjustable, double cushion springs are now standard. The saddle is now before achieved.

New generator mounting allows simple and easy adjustment and insures proper alignment of driving belt at all times.

According to local dealers, this model is not only the perfect mount for hard work and solo pleasure riding, but is also ideally adapted for commercial purposes when equipped with side van.

TWO GREENSBORO BOYS ARE SOUGHT

Greensboro, Ga., April 14.—(Special)—Search is being made for Calvin and Pope Thurmond, brothers, 12 and 14 years of age, respectively, who disappeared from their home here April 9 and have not been heard from since.

The boys are described as follows: The boys are blonde and their hair is light brown; the eyes of Calvin are blue, while those of Pope are light hazel. Each is approximately 5 feet in height, Calvin being slender, while his brother is inclined to stoutness. They were clad in overalls and work shirts when last seen.

Anyone seeing or hearing of the lads is requested to notify their mother, Mrs. A. M. Thurmond, of this place.

Unique Doors on de Luxe Hudsons

A new type door on 1928 de luxe Hudsons. The upper part consists of a metal frame to retain the glass. It is chromium plated.

Doors in motor cars usually have been—just doors. In the efforts of automobile engineers to step ahead of the competitive procession practically every other unit of design has undergone radical changes but doors have not varied much from those of 10 years ago.

For the 1928 season, however, the Hudson organization has worked out interesting new doors developed in the Hudson super-six de luxe models.

Three Main Objects. "For these cars, Hudson designers went after three major points," said C. H. Becker, of the Goldsmith-Becker company, local Hudson, Essex dealers. "First the doors should be permanently silent. Second, they should assist a distinctive and modish appearance. Third, they should be staunch and weather-tight.

"The usual idea of an automobile door has been to build it heavy and strong, and to fit it closely and snugly to the body, the closer the better.

"In the bodies where a sense of thought altogether is followed, the lower half of each door is of standard design—heavily constructed and fitting tightly. But above the belt line the structure consists only of a strong frame to hold the glass in place. The upper part consists of a metal frame to retain the glass. It is chromium plated.

SEAT COVER POPULAR AUTO ACCESSORY NOW

Attractive patterns and improved methods of putting them on explain the wide popularity of the new 1928 seat covers now being shown in the leading auto supply stores. Seat covers are now one of the most popular auto accessories. They prevent clothing sticking and becoming soiled from dirt that would accumulate on unpadding cushions and add the feeling and appearance of coolness. Most covers are now made so they may be easily cleaned and kept fresh and bright.

For many years car owners have realized that if seat covers are installed on the new car, the car's resale value is increased; but in past years prices for covers were usually so high as to make them almost prohibitive. In the last three years, however, vast progress has been made in the seat cover industry. The car owners' needs have been clearly defined and seat covers made to fit these needs with special fabrics noted for durability and strength have been designed; improved methods of fastening seat covers to the car have been worked out, and attractive color patterns have been woven to harmonize with the beauty of the automobile. At the same time production has been speeded up to meet the constantly increasing demand with the consequence that better seat covers are available today at the leading stores and at prices that are about one-half what they formerly were.

but slender steel frame to hold the window glass in place.

"The doors close against a hollow spring rubber tubing, with no metal-to-metal contact whatever. Further, a quarter inch clearance is maintained between the outer edge of the door and the door jamb. The door is thus literally insulated from the body, yet a tight and permanent joint is assured.

"The whole summed-up result is individuality and distinction of appearance, permanence, silence, and attractiveness. Similar designs have been used in custom cars costing from $5,000 to $7,000, but Hudson is the first standard maker to adopt the idea.

The display and salesrooms of the Wallace-Chevrolet company, located at "Little Five Points" in Inman Park, are giving a new revelation of the intensive research carried on by automotive engineers in their relentless search for the facts of performance contained in a statement made public today by W. C. James, research engineer of the Studebaker Corporation.

"Records of the Studebaker proving ground and research laboratory show that Studebaker and Erskine experimental cars were driven a total of 1,575,000 miles in 1927," said Mr. James.

This amazing mileage, equivalent to more than 51 trips around the earth, covers a nonstop test driving of the new American edition of the Erie Six, the Studebaker Dictator, the Commander, the new President Eight and various commercial models.

It does not include comparative tests and studies made with competitive cars and ordrories on individual units such as motors, springs and other such as oratory equipment, would greatly increase the actual driving mileage if their equivalent mileage were included.

As an example of these laboratory tests, Mr. James quoted a report on one 500-mile endurance run made by the new President Eight motor. The run covered the equivalent of 14,000 miles. The motor was run at wide open throttle for 50 consecutive hours at a speed of 10 miles an hour, then for another 50 hours at 20 miles an hour, and so on without stopping through five additional 50-hour periods at 30, 40, 50, 60 and 70 miles per hour. Mrs. Large Discusses Merits Of Student Aid Foundation

Under the caption of "Is the Student Aid Fund Worth While?" Mrs. E. K. Large, executive secretary for student aid of the Georgia federation, sets forth a very remarkable insight into the life of some of the young women beneficiaries of this splendid part of the federation program. Mrs. E. A. Fish, of Barnesville, pres. chairman for the sixth district, wrote to Mrs. Large a true story concerning the loan to a girl in that district of a certain amount to defray her expenses for an education. Mrs. Fish says:

Margaret Elizabeth, as we will call her, has an average of 97 percent all through her four years of high school course. She is pretty, a student, and a leader. She leads in books, athletics and church activities. Soon graduation will be here, and we hope that she will be first in the class. And then the question what? Her sisters were fine, they were nearly as fine as she. Their family had suffered severe reverses financially, and the girls on leaving school had to work in the mills. This was Margaret Elizabeth's only choice as she thought, "How she longed to go to college. How she wished because she couldn't. However, there was something that could be done." Some clubwoman told her about the student loan fund that the Atlanta club had. She wrote to the address of student aid secretary, and only yesterday her face wreathed in smiles, she said, "I can go to college, I can hardly believe it but read what it says: 'Your request has been granted, you loan from the student aid fund, and the check you've sent to us will be for $25 to $300. Would you like to sponsor some particular girl—either entirely or for part of the loan? It is a beautiful work—a very inspiring and interesting one and certainly a very compensating one."

"These two letters have come recently from two girls who have just repaid their loans. (Seven girls have paid up since January 1 amounts from $50 to $300.) One writes, 'Each year we find a checkbook to my aid, and I am grateful for your help in my independence to the student aid foundation. I am so happy to be able to say I have paid in full and never failed to meet the organization when I have been asked to do so. I am grateful to the organization for what it has done for me. You have done so much for me. I have paid in full and will continue to grow and be a benefit to others as it has to me.' And again this—'I am enclosing a check which pays in full my loan from the student aid received two years ago. Many thanks for your help. I am so grateful for what this has meant to me and the structure it has been to return it even now. My heart is most grateful to the generous, loving hearts who have made possible the realization of many dreams of service. Six majors stand between me and my degree but I will find a way."

"It is not a blessed privilege to help such girls? Are we not sending out a fine spirit and constructive effort when we help such women to be the teachers of our children? And has not the Georgia federation a just reason to be for two of the great sculptors, Tallulah, which helps the younger boys and girls, and student aid, which helps the older girls?"

Mrs. Large's Comment.

In her own enlightening comment on this student aid foundation, Mrs. Large based her story upon the foregoing letter and says:

"To a young girl who will go happily and hopefully forward in her college course with her classmates from the high school."

"We have another type of girl also—the girl who has struggled but by bit for every year or every three months of her college work, stopping regularly to teach so as to save a little money to add another quarter

Clean-Up and Paint-Up' Drive Will Be Launched on Monday

Atlanta's twenty-first annual "clean-up and paint-up" week will be launched Monday with a parade followed with a series of rallies for home-making, health, and band work. Tuesday, at Grant park at 3 o'clock Wednesday and at Piedmont park at 3 o'clock Thursday. The campaign is sponsored by the civic division of the Atlanta Woman's club, under chairmanship of Mrs. E. L. Little, with the active support of the three divisions of the chamber of commerce and other civic organizations.

The "clean-up, paint-up" week idea was originated in Atlanta by the late Mrs. Sam Jones, who died in 1907. The first such campaign in 1907, the year the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs was organized with Mrs. Jones as president, Mrs. Little said Saturday. Atlanta campaigns have been sponsored under the administration of the late Mesdames Jones, Woods White, Fred Seely, Charles J.

BIG BETHEL CHURCH GIVES CONCERT TODAY

Big Bethel choir No. 1 will join with the Morris Brown university quartet in presentation of musical numbers at Big Bethel A. M. E. church, at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. Feature addresses will be delivered by Bishop J. S. Flipper and John H. Lewis, president of Morris Brown.

Year Book Committee Makes Urgent Request

The year book committee of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs requests department chairmen to have reports in form for the year book when read at the convention. The year book committee expects to begin work on the book immediately after the convention and urges that copies handed the secretary be ready for editing.

Mrs. Hastings Makes Child Welfare Report.

Mrs. H. G. Hastings, state chairman of child welfare, reports that the second, sixth and twelfth districts have sent in very fine reports for the state and general federations.

Mrs. Richardson Made Art Gallery Chairman.

One of the features at the Texas biennial will be the gallery of pictures of club homes in the United States. As Georgia has in the past, had such a creditable showing at the General Federation meetings, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson has been appointed chairman of this part of the biennial program. It is earnestly requested, therefore, that Georgia send to Mrs. Richardson, 1128 West Peachtree at once the picture of every club home in the state. If you have not sent this before, will you please see that your state has the largest number of pictures for we wish to show that Georgia has the greatest number of club homes of any state in the union. There is only one way: "Seeing is believing," and whether clubroom or clubhouse, show the picture in the auditorium, or in the hall, or in the parlor, or in the room where the club meets, and let the people see what you have.

Atlanta Needlecraft Indorses Mrs. Brenner.

Atlanta Needlecraft circle met Wednesday in Rich's tea room and informed Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Atlanta, that the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs had been appointed chairman of this part of the biennial program. It is earnestly requested, therefore, that Georgia send to Mrs. Richardson, 1128 West Peachtree at once the picture of every club home in the state. If you have not sent this before, will you please see that your state has the largest number of pictures for we wish to show that Georgia has the greatest number of club homes of any state in the union. Mr. and Mrs. King Honored at Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. H. Dandeneau entertained at a dinner party Saturday evening at their home on Macon drive in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Earle King, whose marriage was a recent event, taking place at the Peachtree Christian church. Mrs. King was formerly Miss Gladys Welch.

Zebulon Club Indorses Mrs. A. P. Brantley.

The Zebulon Woman's club unanimously indorsed Mrs. A. P. Brantley for general federation director at the January meeting. Mrs. C. R. Guy is president.

Mrs. Inman Calls Attention To Resolution Rules

Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, chairman of resolutions, calls attention to the rules governing resolutions for the convention of the Georgia federation at Decatur May 1 to 4, and says send copies of resolutions not less than two weeks before convention to her at 640 Peachtree street, N. E., Atlanta.

No. 1—All resolutions proposed shall be read by the chairman of the resolutions committee not less than two weeks prior to a biennial convention or council meeting.

No. 2—Each resolution shall be typewritten on one side of the paper and four copies furnished the chairman. Each resolution shall bear the signature of the person presenting it.

No. 3—Each resolution shall be received by the resolutions committee unless presented by a member of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

No. 4—No resolution will be accepted unless it has been indorsed by the department and division chairman in which it originates.

No. 5—Resolutions of other organizations as such will not be accepted by the resolutions committee.

No. 6—Motions from the floor constructed by the chair to the majority of resolutions shall take the regular course of resolutions as prescribed in the by-laws.

No. 7—No resolution shall be considered by the body until 24 hours have elapsed after the first presentation to the convention, or council, except on the last day, when one hour shall have elapsed.

No. 8—Emergency resolutions can be introduced at any time after passing the resolutions committee and receiving the indorsement of the Georgia federation as an "emergency." They shall be subject to all other rules governing resolutions.

No. 9—Resolutions previously adopted by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs shall be read by the chairman of the resolutions committee before passing the resolutions committee and receiving the indorsement of the Georgia federation as an "emergency." They shall be subject to all other rules governing resolutions.

Miss Collier To Wed

Charles H. Martin

In the Early Summer

Gainesville, Ga., April 14.—Social interest centers in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Juaneese Collier, of Pine Bluff, Ark., and Charles Holmes Martin, Jr., of Gainesville, Ga., to be solemnized in the early summer, which is the name of the residence of the bride. Miss Collier was a student of Brenau college.

Miss Collier, who is the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ward Alexander Collier, prominent residents of Pine Bluff, is a graduate of Brenau college, having received a diploma in oratory from that institution. Miss Collier took a prominent part in all college activities and was a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. Membership in the Zeta Phi Eta sorority, national oratorical sorority, was given her due to her high standing in her class and in the university at the school.

In addition to being possessed of rare talent in dramatic art, her personal charm, vibrant beauty and inherent sweetness of disposition have endeared her to a wide circle of friends both here and in her home state.

Miss Collier is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Martin of Gainesville, and a prominent young business man, being a member of the firm of C. H. Martin & Son. He was graduated from the University of Georgia in the class of 1925, receiving a B. S. degree, and while in the university, Collier enjoyed the popularity of a legion of associates. A member of the Delta Sigma Pi, national honorary commercial fraternity, he was at one time president of that society. He is a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity in Gainesville, he is actively identified in civic affairs and is an official of the Gainesville junior chamber of commerce.

Miss Louise Glaze Weds I. C. Moon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Glaze announce the marriage of their daughter, Louise, to I. C. Moon. The marriage was quietly solemnized March 31, at 5 o'clock in the presence of the couple's closest friends. The bride's only attendant was Miss Irene Jones and the best man, David Wright. Mr. and Mrs. Moon are at home at 1307 La France street, N. E.

KING—WIGGINS.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. King, of Jacksonville, Fla., announce the engagement of their daughter, Emma Louise, to Frontis Burbank Wiggins, of Atlanta, the marriage to be solemnized Saturday, June 9, in Atlanta.

THE maritime romance between Miss Alice Stearns and Bernard de Sieses, fostered by Father Neptune when the charming couple happened to cross the Atlantic as fellow passengers on the Rochambeau more than a year ago, reaches a happy climax at high noon on May 12, when they meet at the flower-decked altar in the Peachtree street residence of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Laurence Stearns. Their wedding is of international importance for, like his aristocratic fiancee, Mr. de Sieses is lineally descended from the nobility of France, and his parents, the Marquis and Marquise de Sieses de Veynes, continue to live in the ancestral chateau of the de Sieses in the south of France, quite near to Nice, which has belonged in the distinguished family since the twelfth century. After graduating from Washington seminary, Gunston Hall in Washington, D. C., and the fashionable Oaksmere school in Mamaroneck, N. Y., pretty Miss Stearns sailed for Europe with her sister, Mrs. Edgar Upton, and Harry L. Stearns, Jr., traveling for several months together, returning Atlanta in the fall for Miss Stearns to make her debut at a brilliant reception at the Piedmont Driving club. That same season she was invited to join the Junior League, the exclusive organization which elected her sister, Mrs. Upton, as its president for two successive years. The popular bride-to-be served upon the league's executive board, being active in all of the league's activities, and she added her charms and graces to the "Junior League Follies," presented for several successive years to raise funds for philanthropic work.

A year ago last March when the Rochambeau sailed out of New York harbor for the coast of France, the ship's roster carried the name of Miss Alice Stearns, bound for Paris to meet her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Eben George Rives; Mrs. Eben George Rives, Mrs. Maywing, Clarendon Place placed her at the table in the dining room with Bernard de Sieses, the young nobleman who was returning to the French capital after studying important business measures in America. The romance which had its beginning on the steamer ship and was created by glistening moonlit evenings spent on the promenade deck, continued to ripen into deeper love, and when the lovely Atlantan sailed for the United States late in the summer, she wore upon her engagement finger a platinum set diamond. When she returned to Paris, her family having been prominent in the history of the state of Maine for over 400 years, The Right Reverend John D. Wing, Bishop of South Florida, and Harry Wing of Atlanta, are her uncles, and Mrs. Eben George Rives, of New York, and Mrs. Ben Gant, of Atlanta, are her aunts.

At seventeen years of age Mr. de Sieses answered the call of France in the world war, serving the untried and the entire duration of the war. He was enrolled in the Fourteenth Hussars, 11th regiment of infantry, French motors and the flying corps. One of his commanders was Nungesser, the daring Frenchman who lost his life last summer when he attempted the flight from France to America. His plane being lost at sea, and he belonged to the cadets R-125, which located and destroyed "Big Bertha" when the Germans shelled Paris from a 70-mile range.

The groom-elect is highly educated, having at his command five or six languages, and is perfect English. Two of his brothers, Mr. and Mrs. de Sieses reside in New York and will meet the bridegroom when the Ile de France docks at the pier April 24, and accompany him to Atlanta for the ceremony.

The marriage will carry international importance on the social calendar and the newly-wed will sail for Brazil May 16, expecting to spend four months in South America. They will make their home in England where Mr. de Sieses will represent a prominent European group of financiers, having many interests.

THE arrival of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Lownsbery, former residents of Richmond, Va., and very prominent in social circles in Virginia, to make their home in Atlanta, is quite an important factor in the musical and business circles of the Gate City. Mrs. Lownsbery is an unusually talented musician, having studied quite seriously with Ernest Hutchison in New York after graduating from the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore. Her maiden name, Miss Rita Powell, reveals the fact that she is a cousin of John Powell, the internationally known pianist and composer, who recently announced his engagement to Miss Louise Burleigh, author and theatrical director.

Mr. and Mrs. Lownsbery number among their most intimate friends

WHEN Miss Harriett Purdy Sheidde became Mrs. Henry W. Grady, Jr., last evening, she was surrounded by the members of her family, which includes a group of close friends who made their debuts together during the winter of 1924-25 and since that time have shared each other's every happiness, meeting once each week to perpetuate their association. The sewing club has never been honored with a more distinguished member, always passing the time in sewing, but it is an excellent excuse for enjoying the friendships which have never suffered even a short lapse of time.

The prayer book used in the wedding service was carried by the bride's maid of honor, Mrs. Harrison Bag, at her wedding, and it was covered with ivy-ribbed brocaded satin from the wedding gown of the bride's mother, Mrs. Robert F. Shedd.

Another interesting bit of sentiment surrounding the ceremony, was the employment of a narrow gold bracelet which had been constant which has been used by five generations of brides on her maternal side, and tied by the narrowest of white satin ribbons to the diamond-studded platinum band which Mrs. Grady wears under her engagement solitaire. The tiny platinum watch surrounded by a delicate diamond chain, the slender wrist of the fair bride, was sent by a close friend of her father's, Harry Rockwell Purdy, of New York, whose name she bears. Mr. Grady's gift to his charming bride was a smart blue motor car from a well-known manufacturer, while the magnificent silver service, given by the family of Atlanta to the late Harry W. Grady, Sr., grandfather of the groom, was among the treasured gifts of this interesting couple.

INTEREST follows Atlantans even when their influence goes into the making of social and civic projects in other cities.

For example, Mrs. Basil M. Boykin stood for the best in the cultural and educational life of the city. As president of the Atlanta Woman's club, she invests herself completely in the city's interests and proved an inspiration for many forward movements for the common good. As president of the Woman's club of Miami Beach, Fla., where she has made her home for the past several years, the same forcefulness of ability which made for great usefulness here and finding additional expression through the activities of this Florida club.

It will be true that the head of a body directs and gives surely credit is due this former Atlanta woman for recent accomplishments of the organization in Miami. The club has petitioned city council to establish a health bureau for Miami Beach. It has taken complete charge of the dance patio of Municipal Golf and Country Club for the summer, entertainments there having been formerly conducted by the recreation department of the city and chaperoned by the club. The club has a library of 3,000 volumes which have been circulated 24,010 times since the establishment of the library in 1927. The fact was made known at a recent meeting of the club at which Mrs. Boykin presided.

MRS. FARNSWORTH DREW, who has spent a few weeks here, has again turned toward the north where, during the summer months, she finds lonely islands and wild seas to paint. At present she is at Cooleemee Farms, 50 miles from Atlanta, painting spring landscapes and plantation folk. During her stay in Atlanta, in addition to the overmantle mural for Mrs. Archibald Davis, she executed a number of small portrait heads in charcoal, white paint and oil. Among the sitters were those of Louis Ruquier, Knowles Davis, Miss Katherine Stanford and Mrs. Garringer, formerly Miss Martha Maddox, both of whom were former pupils of Mrs. Drew's.

ONE of those true stories which again and again find their way to the attention of "Four Women" reminds us that loquacity ceases to be a virtue in more cases than one.

Recently a gentle little lassie of 4, out riding with her mother and a group of friends, many of whom are well known here, listened at length to the endless conversation which some of the girls had and artlessly between just such an animated.

There were many speaking at once.

There was sparkling wit and the intermittent bursts of laughter which inevitably accompanies the light-hearted chatter of many minds.

Some discussed their neighbors; others made puns. Still others discussed at length on the ice man and the maid.

"I want to go home." Our golden-haired little friend wriggled uncomfortably on the seat. She was unmistakably displeased.

"What is the matter, dear?" her mother wanted to know. "Are you tired?"

"No, I am not tired."

"Then what is it, dear? Do you feel sick?"

"No, I do not feel sick."

"Then what is it?" Mother was undoubtedly perplexed.

"I want to go where I can hear some noise."

Miss Doris Thurmond To Wed T. Bartow Ford, Jr., in June

Of cordial and sincere interest to a wide circle of friends throughout the south and east is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Albert K. Thurmond of the engagement of their eldest daughter, Doris, to T. Bartow Ford, Jr.

Miss Thurmond is a graduate of the Girls' High school, later attending Columbia university, New York. During her course of study she pursued the field of chemistry, history and laboratory technique, and for the past three years she has been associated with the pathological laboratories of Emory university and the Albert Steiner clinic of Atlanta. She also has a license to practice in Georgia.

On her maternal side she is the daughter of the former Harriet Jane Enbank and the granddaughter of Joseph Edward Enbank, well known and beloved pioneer of Atlanta, and the late Mrs. Sarah Cuthbertson.

On her paternal side she is the granddaughter of Mrs. Nancy Fryer Thurmond and the late Meredith Thomas Thurmond, of Barnesville, Ga. The bride-elect has enjoyed wide popularity in the social and professional circles of the south.

Mr. Ford is the eldest son of Mr. T. Bartow Ford. His mother was before her marriage, Miss Mary MacPherson, a popular belle of Columbus, Ga. His father, a former resident of Marietta, is chief engineer for the Puna Alegre Sugar company, their headquarters being in Havana, Cuba.

The groom-elect was graduated from the Boys' High school and later attended Georgia Tech, where he received his B. S. degree in engineering chemistry with the class of 1926. He was a popular member of the Cotillion club, the football team, while attending Georgia Tech.

He is a member of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

Since his graduation he has been connected with the Atlanta office of the Dorr company, chemical engineers of New York city.

Mr. Ford is a Mason and is actively interested in the DeMolay, Boy Scouts and other boy's work organizations.

The marriage of Miss Thurmond and Mr. Ford will be an interesting event of June.

Miss Branen and Mr. Crockett Will Wed at June Ceremony

The announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Avery Branen of the engagement of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, to James Cuthbert Crockett, of wide social interest, the marriage to be solemnized Saturday, June 2. With her parents, the lovely young bride-elect moved to Atlanta seven years ago from Greensboro, N. C., and since coming here her residence she has made a wide circle of friends. She attended the Girls' High school before graduating from Woodberry Hall. She completed her education at the Greensboro college in Greensboro, N. C. Miss Branen possesses an exquisite soprano voice, having studied voice for the past five years. The attractive young bride-to-be is a representative of prominent

North Carolina families.

Mr. Crockett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Albert Crockett of this city, who are numbered among Atlanta's leading citizens. Mrs. Crockett was before her marriage Miss Lorena Adams, daughter of the late Absalom Q. Adams, who was prominently identified with the development and growth of Atlanta.

The popular groom-elect received his education at Riverside Military academy, Mercer university and Oglethorpe university. He is a prominent alumnus of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and is well known in Atlanta's insurance circles.

Berry-Killian Engagement Is of Wide Social Interest

Of interest to a wide circle of friends throughout the state is the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Margaret Mae Berry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Berry, to Thomas Grant Killian, the marriage to be solemnized in June. Miss Killian is the daughter of the state normal school at Athens and is a young lady of wide culture and charm. She is the sister of Herbert Berry, of Greensboro, N. C., and of Miss Elizabeth Berry, of Atlanta. On the paternal side she is the granddaughter of D. H. Hollifield, of Atlanta, and a great-niece of the late Dr. Benjamin F. Bomar, pioneer citizen and one of the early mayors of Atlanta.

Various Camp Fire Groups
Are Active Throughout City

The Camp Fire Girls of Grant Park school have elected the following new officers: Misses Louise Haynes, president; Cleo Bradley, vice president; Mary Sills, council representative; Elsie Tumlin, secretary and treasurer; Helen Forrester, song leader, and Geneva Wiley, scribe. At the meeting Wednesday afternoon, all girls will bring cigar boxes, out of which will be taken books.

The Owakwa group of Girls' High school paid a visit to the Home for Incurables Friday afternoon, taking to the inmates candy and magazines and singing songs of cheer. The group was glad to welcome two new members into their circle: Misses Marie Parker and Sarah Almond. The Owakwa group is planning a council fire to be held Friday, April 27.

The Ihaba Camp Fire Girls met at the home of their guardian, Miss Essie Bell, Brookman street, on Saturday. They made and held a nature nature, learning to draw the contours of trees. They also made smoke prints of leaves, thereby earning nature hours No. 310 and 313.

The Camp Fire Girls of the O'Keefe Junior High school, Mrs. Virginia Wade, guardian, will make a Camp Fire program before the school at assembly Tuesday morning, April 17. All the girls in the group will take part on the program, singing the songs of Camp Fire and giving the ideals and aims of the Camp Fire program.

Planned Big Party for High Employees

The above-pictured committee of officials and employees of the J. M. High company made arrangements for the big dance on the roof of the Ansley hotel last Thursday night, at which the general personnel of the Whitehall street department store celebrated its victory in the recent three-cornered "leadership sale" at High's. The employees assumed direction of the sale for one of its three weeks, and their sales total exceeded those of any other week in the sale, with the result that they were feted at the big dance, the second they have been given for leadership in sales in two years. The group includes, back row, left to right: O. L. Wooley, chairman of committee; A. R. Dorsen, general manager of the High company; W. F. Robbie, sales promotion manager; C. C. Gibbs, Aaron Kahanow, master of ceremonies at the party. Front row: Miss Bess Segal, Miss Gladys Couch, Miss Irene Stovall, Miss Irene Connelly and Mrs. Jennie Wright.

General Demonstration Takes Place at Y.W.C.A. Wednesday

A general demonstration of the work of the physical education department of the Atlanta Y. W. C. A. will be presented Wednesday evening, April 18, at 8 o'clock, in the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium, 37 Auburn avenue, and will be open to the public. No admission will be charged and friends of the Y. W. C. A. are invited especially those women interested in gymnastics and dancing. Miss Lucile Crabtree is physical director at the local association, and is in charge of the demonstration.

The program will be divided into three sections, the first presenting music, the second showing the work of the regular gymnasium classes, and the third featuring the business girls' dancing class. Twenty-eight girls, between the ages of 6 and 10, will have part in the first section. There will be three ensemble numbers, including a very attractive novelty dance, "The Tuck." Another dance, "In the Wave," a bathing suit phantasy, will feature little Martha Hurt, Margaretine Tutan and Mary Tice. Kathleen Elkin and Betty Morgan will present "The Jack-in-the-Box" and Carolyn Hale and Patty Osborne will do a balloon dance which will be arranged by Anne Wallace, Margaretine Tutan, Jenny Duke and Elizabeth Walsh.

A special feature of the program devoted to the work of the gymnasium classes, will be an old English country dance, prepared especially for the demonstration by eight members of the matrons' class. The business girls' dancing class, about 20 in number, will participate in the demonstration, and there will be several group dances. One of the most gracefully executed will be "The Frolie," danced by Misses Sarah Slaughter, Isabel Dew and Martha Shover. Others will include "Apollo's Chariot," "Gymnastic Hippocampus," a clover dance and a solo dance.

Costumes for dances have been designed by the members of the classes and the attractiveness will be enhanced by the lighting arrangements, now being installed in the gymnasium. Extra bleachers have been put up on the balcony overlooking the gymnasium floor so there will be plenty of seating space.

Members of the Y. W. C. A. are invited to a dance at Girls' High, Central High, Decatur, Fulton and East Point High schools, will go to Camp Highland Friday, April 20, for the "Senior Farewell," held every spring in honor of the members graduating in June. A farewell ceremonial will be led Saturday night by Miss Sara Hale, girls' reserve secretary of the Atlanta Y. W. C. A. The election of officers takes place for the Inter-Club council, an executive body composed of the cabinets of the various high school clubs. The retiring officers all of whom graduate this year, are Miss Jane Robinson, of Girls' High school; president; Miss Kathleen Bowen, Decatur High school, vice president; Miss Elsa Matson, Fulton High school, secretary. High School Girl Reserves are invited to attend this outing, but reservations must be made at the Y. W. C. A. by Thursday.

Members of the Girls' High, Central High, Decatur, Fulton and East Point High schools, will be at the Girls' High school on April 16 at 2:30 o'clock. Her subject will be "The Road to Understanding," based on experiences at the Geneva peace conference September 15-21.

The Atlanta Woman's club will be special guests, and the president, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, urges that all members avail themselves of this unusual opportunity.

Loan Art Collection
To Be Exhibited At College Park Club

Wednesday afternoon, April 18, at 3 o'clock there will be exhibited at the College Park Woman's club a wonderful collection of paintings—reproductions of famous masters. This collection is the Cara F. Hinman loan collection sent out by the art department of the Atlanta Federation of Clubs. Mrs. James R. Little is chairman.

Mrs. W. E. Lotspiech, chairman of arts and crafts for the College Park Woman's club, will introduce Mrs. George Hinman, who will illustrate her lectures on painting by some of the most celebrated artists. Hinman is an authority on the subject of art and the club is hoping in securing so able a speaker.

Mrs. Hugh C. Conch, chairman of music for the afternoon, has arranged a delightful program to be given in connection with Mrs. Hinman's address. Tea will be served by Mrs. Lorraine Bradley, Mrs. R. W. Moore, Mrs. B. F. Ragsdale, Mrs. George Longino and Mrs. T. H. Johnson, with Mrs. Young Evans and Mrs. Ralph Neville as special guests.

The exhibit will remain in position for the evening so that business women and teachers belonging to the club may have an opportunity of seeing the pictures between the hours of 6 and 10. No admission fee will be charged.

Social Notes From East Atlanta.

Mrs. Carl Johnson has returned from Columbia, S. C. She also visited friends in Elberton.

E. A. Minor, T. J. O'Neill, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and W. Dean Everett left Tuesday to motor to Tampa, Fla. While in Tampa they will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Minor Everett.

Miss Mary Thomas entertained at bridge at her home on Brownwood avenue Saturday evening. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Brumelow and daughter, Eleanor; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Alderman, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Brown, Misses Mary Shuey,

Social Affairs Feature Program of West End Club

Two delightful social affairs will feature the activities of the West End Woman's club this week. Mrs. E. P. Paden, house chairman, assisted by her committee, will sponsor a bridge-dinner at the club house. Only 15 tables will be maintained. Call Mrs. Paden, West 1176-1, for reservations. Game will be played at 10:30 o'clock with dinner at 1 o'clock.

Mrs. L. M. Ahern, chairman of the game committee, will entertain her committee at the clubhouse Wednesday afternoon.

At the annual meeting recently, it was voted to revise the constitution, and Mrs. George Grant, the president, appointed Miss Elizabeth Young, wife of Eddie and Mrs. J. M. Ahern a committee for this work. The nominating committee numbers Mrs. Carl Farries, chairman; Mrs. W. N. Ponder, Mrs. C. E. Cole, Mrs. Luther Still and Mrs. W. B. Griffith.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

Mrs. J. J. Harris, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Monday, April 9, 63 years after the surrender at Appomattox, an entire nation paused to pay tribute to the leader of the Confederate Army. North and south had come together to do honor to the great leader of the Confederacy, who looked down with pride upon his people, who had fought so nobly, so well, so gloriously in surrender. Glad and happy were the sixties, the look upon the faces of their commanders, the look upon the mountains and in their eyes glowed again the light which this present effort brought. A second hundred years in the air, Robert E. Lee unveiled the face of his illustrious ancestor, General Robert E. Lee. Official records of the 50th State of the union witnessed the union of the blue and the grey as with bowed heads the good before the great, the great before the Confederacy. Many thousands were present at this event, the members of the historical society, the members of the parade of visiting and local military units and the occasion the official unveiling of the present Georgia division, U. D. C., were Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, president; Mrs. E. B. Williams, Atlanta, Covington, first vice president; Mrs. H. O. Bell, Jackson, second vice president; Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Atlanta, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, third vice president; Mrs. H. A. Craig, Augusta, registrar; Mrs. Ada Lamp, Dalton, Augusta, honorary life member; Mrs. W. L. Anderson, Atlanta, chairman of women of the south in Atlanta, chairman of women of the south in Atlanta, president of Fulton chapter and chairman of Crosses of Military Service; Mrs. E. S. Killebrew, Atlanta, chairman of Fireproof Museum for Relics; Mrs. Walter L. Athens, Atlanta, president of the Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. Ozmer, Decatur, president of the Agnes Lee chapter; Mrs. J. A. McCrary, Decatur, chairman of the Atlanta chapter; Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Atlanta, honorary president; Mrs. E. B. Williams, Atlanta; Mrs. E. F. Williams, Atlanta, chairman of historical program; the president of the chapter; Mrs. J. J. Harris, Soderville, editor of the magazine.

Delegates from many states assembled to witness the unveiling together with the congressional party, guests from the entire country and many military units. Impressive speeches marked the unveiling.

Mrs. Lamar Contributes Article on Rabun Gap School

Mrs. Walter B. Lamar, past president of Georgia division, and trustee of Rabun Gap-Nacoochee school contributes the following splendid article to the official page today, which relates to the constructive story of the organization. She says:

"No organization, whether civic or purely patriotic, can interest people nowadays unless such organization carries on constructive work.

The Daughters of the Confederacy have always done much in this line, of late years more and more, for the cardinal privilege of this organization is memorial, and what better memorial to Confederate soldiers and their ideals could be planned than a program to secure to the state through our efforts an educated citizen?

No Foreign Problem

The face of General Robert E. Lee, the great leader of the great leader of the Confederacy, who looked down for countless ages upon those who fought for the union, will be the first unit in a mecca, marking the first unit of union completion will be the greatest monument and will be a lasting and two banquets, given by the Stone Mountain Memorial association, and the aid of the union, the pleasure of the thousands who gathered from every part of the country to the greatest general of the Confederacy.

Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, vice president general, U. D. C., and past president of the Georgia division, the author of the article, was showered upon her. It was learned indirectly that she had received fourties and five hundred dollars.

She was a special guest at the P. T. A. convention in Atlanta April 10 and 11 and the Georgia division gave $11,750 in land and money to the Rabun Gap school. (See Eastman minutes, page 68, Mrs. M. M. Harrison, treasurer.)

Mrs. W. D. Lamar, the then president, had the privilege of paying this amount to the school in June, 1914.

It is known as the E. S. Bartram memorial at Rabun Gap.

"The money was used for the purchase of 100 acres in Rabun county and the establishment of the rotation farm system, devised by Mr. Ritchie, a native of Rabun county, and the amount to these the chapter decided to give.

Mrs. E. S. Killebrew, former president and beloved member of Dougherty County chapter.

Mrs. C. M. Harper, historian, presented the following program: Tributes to Miss Mildred Rutherford, writer of state division; Mrs. E. S. Killebrew, poet laureate of the Georgia division; Miss E. S. Killebrew, a poem written by Mrs. Lola Kindal Rogers, poet laureate of the Georgia division, U. D. C., was read by Mrs. C. D. Smith, "Romance of DeSoto," from Miss Rutherford's history, "Georgia: The Third Colony."

It was given in an entertaining way by Mrs. P. J. Nix. Miss E. E. Jossey, president, was in the chair.

Prizes were made for Memorial day as the chapter entertained the wives and widows of Dr. Carter Helm Jones of Atlanta, will deliver the memorial address. Mrs. John Pennington had charge of the program, featuring Georgia Secession, by Mrs. E. S. Killebrew, "Mildred Rutherford," a poem written by Mrs. Lola Kindal Rogers, poet laureate of the Georgia division, U. D. C., was read by Mrs. C. D. Smith.

Prizes were given to the winners.

Grand Opera Gaieties Claim Social Interest

Grand opera festivities claim the attention of society this week, as visitors are arriving daily in Atlanta to remain throughout the third week in April to hear the eight performances of the Metropolitan Opera company. The program offers one of the most varied and satisfactory repertoires ever given to southern music lovers. The outstanding events of the week include the production of Bellini's beautiful "Norma" with Ponselle in the title role; the production of Wagner's magnificent "Die Walkure," and the presentation of a new soprano singer, Grace Moore, native of Tennessee, in the leading soprano role in "Carmen." The old school Italian opera, "Norma," has furnished many a world-famed soprano with a role of great technical difficulty and one which exhibits every facet of a beautiful and highly-trained voice. This opera has not been in the Metropolitan repertoire for some years and it is revived this year to give opportunity for the expanding voice and ripening talents of Ross Ponselle. The famous aria, "Casta Diva," has been called by music critics "one of the great melodic inspirations of the world."

Another novelty on the program is the "Barber of Seville." This tuneful, charming, amusing and daintily colored opera has never been produced in Atlanta by the Metropolitan company, but one can safely predict that it will be among the most enjoyable of this season's offerings. All in all, the program could scarcely be improved upon and the singers who will interpret it are, most of them, old favorites in the south and artists of international repute. We believe the 1928 southern season will be a red letter one for lovers of music in this section.

Mrs. Reuben Arnold Honors Miss Richardson.

Peachtree Garden Club Meets Monday.

The Peachtree Garden club meets at 3 o'clock Monday at the home of Mrs. W. R. Prescott on Clifton road, the meeting date having been changed from April 25 to April 16 on account of grand opera.

Miss Mary Rutherford Jay, of New York, noted landscape artist and authority on formal gardens, will be the speaker.

Sculpture Gallery Added to Museum.

Through the generosity of Mrs. J. Madison High, a gallery of unusual interest to art lovers has been added to the High museum. This new addition contains splendid reproductions of antique Greek sculpture, including the famous Venus de Melos, Apollo, Discus Thrower, Athene, Minerva, Psyche, Diana. Later eight sections of the Parthenon and several more reproductions of famous marbles, the gift of Mrs. High, will be put on permanent exhibition.

All of the original marbles are in old world galleries and cannot be purchased at any price. To have these remarkable reproductions is invaluable to the student of art and of great inspiration to the public at large. The latest acquisition made possible through Mrs. High's generosity, says J. Carroll Payne, president of the Atlanta Art association, marks a definite progressive step in the development of the High museum.

The most noted find in the sculpture court is that of Venus de Melos by Alexander of Antioch, 250 B. C. The High museum will be open from 2 until 6 o'clock Sunday.

Silhouette Exhibit At High Museum.

There will be no lecture at the High Museum of Art Sunday, April 15, as Rev. McKinney, director, has been called away from the city.

An exhibition of the silhouettes of Joe Cranston Jones will open at the High Museum Sunday, April 15. Joe Jones, whose ingenious cuttings of quaint fantastic scenes have won for him a nation-wide reputation, is exhibiting some of his finest work in this new showing. The artist's dexterous fingers have fashioned delightful compositions filled with rich design and beautiful balance. His delicate work is in great demand.

The bride was accompanied to the altar by her mother, William Shewell, where they were joined by the groom and his best man, Shellman Boston. The bride's wedding gown was a becoming model fashioned of soft ivory satin along straight lines.

Shedden-Grady Wedding Is Beautiful Home Event

The marriage of Miss Harriet Shedden and Henry W. Grady, Jr., was solemnized Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fitch Shedden of Atlanta society, the occasion being marked by a fashionable assemblage of Atlanta society.

Dr. Wallace Rogers, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church, performed the ceremony, which was preceded by appropriate musical selections played by the orchestra directed by Enrico Leide. During the marriage service Mr. Leide played softly "To an Evening Star," from the opera "Tannhauser."

Beautiful Decorations.

The spacious living room, where the marriage service was read, was elaborately decorated with palms, smilax, Easter lilies, and valley lilies. Across one side of the room were masses of palms and ferns, which extended to the high ceiling. An altar was erected in the center of the foliage, which was adorned by a huge basket of Easter lilies showered with valley lilies. On either side were eight-branched cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers, the base of each candelabra graced by clusters of Easter lilies. Floor baskets of Easter lilies arranged at artistic intervals amongst the foliage of the stately palms enhanced the beautiful decorations which formed an effective background for the bridal party. The white satin prie-dieu directly in front of the altar was fringed with valley lilies, while a cluster of delicately tinted orchids graced the top. A large basket of Easter lilies was placed on top of the newel post of the broad stairway down which the wedding attendants descended and passed through an aisle formed of half columns topped with clusters of Easter lilies and garlanded with wide white satin ribbon.

A variety of spring flowers were used in the decoration of the other rooms of the home with Easter lilies and snapdragons predominating. The sides of the enclosed front porch were banked with foliage plants, flowering begonias and wall vases of cut flowers. Masses of purple wisteria and begonias entwined the punch bowls that were placed on the porch in the library.

Summer Round-Up of Children To Be Held First Week in May

Mrs. H. G. Parks, president of the pre-school council, writes the following article in reference to the summer round-up of the children, May 1, 2, 3 and 4, 1928.

"The summer round-up of the children, who will enter kindergarten in September will be held May 1, 2, 3 and 4, 1928. This marks the fourth year of intensive pre-school work for the children. The round-up will include a physical examination by a physician, and registration of the child for kindergarten, thereby assuring the parents of a seat in school. If the examination is given by the family physician, parents are urged to secure a health certificate and bring the child to school to be registered.

"The object of the campaign is to enter in school a class of children 100 per cent free from remediable defects.

The movement of the development of the platform laid down in 1923 that all the year-round parenthetical groups in 22 states has grown until during the year of 1927, 2,120 groups in 44 states aroused interest in the health of the children in their communities through this project.

In the work of the association, to participate in this work, national congress does not desire to duplicate any effective health work already being done in the community, but suggests that its units cooperate with the agencies now at work, securing their aid in the conduct of the campaign. Also it should be clearly understood that the organization opposes free medical or dental care in carrying through the correction of defects (except in cases of financial inability), referring the child to the family physician or dentist for treatment. The physician or dentist, however, that because of the close contact its membership has with the homes and schools, it is in a position, as is no other organization, to 'round up' the children for the examinations and to urge parents to have the defects corrected. The correction of defects is the most important part of the summer round-up work. Examinations of pre-school children may go on indefinitely but unless the correction of the defects there will be no lasting results and much of the taxpayers' money will be spent in vain.

In the 1928 campaign the national congress has the cooperation of the United States bureau of education, children's bureau, the National Education Association, the American Public Health Association, the American Medical Association and the American Dental Association. Each of these associations is open to all associations and circles in membership with the national congress of parents and teachers.

Mrs. Charles Howland delighted the audience with two songs, "The Cry of the Children" and "The Little Birdie and the Bird." She was accompanied by Mrs. Stanley Hastings. The meeting took place in the Social Reform Presbyterian church, which was open through the kindness of Rev. M. B. Williams, pastor.

Church P.T.A. Council Meets Tuesday.

The Atlanta P.T.A. church council meets at a luncheon Tuesday, April 18, at 12 o'clock at the Henry Grady hotel. The annual election of officers will be held at this meeting.

Humane Week To Be Observed In Atlanta

Mrs. Katherine Weathersbee, chairman of humane education for the fifth district P.T.A., writes interestingly of the observance of humane Sunday and kind to animals week, which begins Sunday, April 15, in the following article:

"In the wisdom of Jehovah it seemed well that man should serve in a place of responsibility rather than a care-free idler, wherefore he committed unto him possibly the greatest, highest and noblest task that man was able to carry. That which he had created for His own pleasure, the par excellence of which could suffer pain and know happiness, which could sing songs of joy and express love and devotion, of these God spoke in Genesis 1:28, when he blessed man and said 'Have dominion over the fish of the sea and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.' This was 'The First Great Commission.' Is it not reasonable that justice, mercy, kindness and love should dominate this dominion and that failure to do so is an offense to God in carrying out 'The First Great Commission.' Our church, in its consideration of the observance of humane Sunday, has made when she spoke of the necessity of sympathetic understanding between parent and teacher and working out the character building program. Miss Adair told all the educational powers in the nation now working for a secretary of education to be appointed by the president and appointed at the head of educational research. She ended her talk with a very clever story, interpreting the characters of the sister nations.

Mrs. Charles Howland delighted the audience with two songs, "The Cry of the Children" and "The Little Birdie and the Bird." She was accompanied by Mrs. Stanley Hastings. The meeting took place in the Social Reform Presbyterian church, which was open through the kindness of Rev. M. B. Williams, pastor.

Moreland P.T.A. Sponsors Carnival.

A carnival will be sponsored by the Moreland P.T.A. Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. An interesting feature will be a bazaar where hand work of all kinds, home-made cakes, candies and jellies will be on sale to the mothers. For the entertainment of the children will be the circus taking place in the kindergarten rooms, the ice cream booth, fortune telling, fish-pond and various other attractions.

A candy-pulling will also be held and the child selling the largest number of tickets will receive a prize.

Any one desiring to assist in this entertainment can call Mrs. D. W. Durden, who is general chairman. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend.

Benteen P.T.A. Holds Meeting.

The Benteen P.T.A. met Wednesday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock after a talk on the "Child and the Teacher" by Mrs. Ramsey, was enjoyed after the luncheon.

Pans were perfected for the daddies' meeting to be held April 17 at 7 o'clock. Every mother is urged to attend and bring the daddies. They will be served supper and will hear splendid talks by the honor guests, Judge Watkins and Mr. Ramsey.

Mrs. J. D. Miller, of Gainesville, Heads Georgia State P.T. A.

Mrs. Joe Dan Miller, of Gainesville, Ga., who was unanimously elected president of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers at the closing session of the three-day convention held in Atlanta this past week.

Mrs. Joe Dan Miller, of Gainesville, was unanimously elected president of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers Thursday at the morning session of the three days' state convention held in Atlanta. Mrs. Jeter was elected first vice president; Miss Katherine Dozier, of Gainesville, second vice president; Mrs. Otto Kobl, of Savannah, third vice president; Mrs. Baynard Willingham, of College Park, fourth vice president; Kyle Alfriend, of Macon, fifth vice president; Mrs. J. C. Wall, of Eastman, sixth vice president; Willis A. Sutton, of Atlanta, seventh vice president.

Mrs. Miller has had wide experience in parent-teacher work, having for the past two years directed the home service department sponsored by state P.T.A. As director of this work, she conceived the idea of compiling a cook book and has written the introduction to the title of "P.T.A. Interpretations of Food." Mrs. Miller secured hundreds of contributions to the cook book, supplying the proper needs of life, featuring health, thrift, efficiency and nutrition. Among celebrities who have contributed are Dr. Louise Stanley, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Mrs. Clifford Walker, Miss Mary Brent Whiteside, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley and many others.

Mrs. Miller occupies a distinct place in Georgia's civic, cultural and educational causes. She is recognized authority on child welfare and possesses extreme executive ability. Under her leadership a continued progress of organized parent-teacher activities in home service, extension, education, Georgia is assured.

Important Resolutions Feature Convention of State P.T. A.

Six hundred parents and teachers in attendance upon the Georgia State P.T.A. convention held in Atlanta for the past three days unanimously and enthusiastically endorsed a resolution at Thursday's session favoring the movement for the negotiation of treaties, or a world treaty, condemning recourse to war for the settlement of international disputes and recommending an international organization to settle differences of whatever nature or origin. The resolution further requested that representatives of Georgia be called upon to devote their efforts toward meeting the demands of the world's people for peace and pledged the cooperation of the Georgia branch P.T.A. with other organizations in their work for peace.

Other resolutions adopted by the state P.T.A. Thursday were that the parents and teachers of Georgia call upon the press to render its responsibility to society and to refuse to feed the vanity of criminals by publishing their pictures, detailing their lives or anything in reference to them except a bare narration of the crime and court trial; that the Georgia state P.T.A. cooperate with Mrs. George C. Dolly Madison C.A.R. Celebrates Second Anniversary at Party

The second anniversary of the reorganization of the Dolly Madison society, Children of the American Revolution, was celebrated in the nature of a birthday party and on this occasion the members were the guests of Miss Clara Mitchell McConnell, the retiring corresponding secretary, who is the "daughter" of Mrs. Lucius McConnell. It was during Mrs. McConnell's regency of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., that the Dolly Madison society was reorganized.

This society is well established among the patriotic organizations of the city. Its members have taken part in every patriotic celebration held in Atlanta since its reorganization in 1926 and have served many social affairs given by the Atlanta chapter. D. A. R., and others given by some ladies of the D. A. R. In 1926 there were twenty members, now there are about sixty. Mrs. T. C. Mell was the corresponding secretary, but recently Miss Willis Fort Williams has been appointed in her place. Mrs. John Sage, of Atlanta, is the state chairman, C. A. R.

A greater love for and pride in America and a knowledge of the brave men and women of revolution days are being instilled in the hearts and minds of the members through the historical papers and talks that are held at every meeting. The interesting and instructive programs have been prepared by Miss Ross Moran. Either history of a person or event of national interest is given each month.

or something relative to Georgia revolution history.

Other good works outside of the meetings have been accomplished by the chapter. Well-filled baskets have been taken at Thanksgiving and Christmas to families and to Hospital No. 48; beautiful scrap books have been taken at Christmas to homes and hospitals for children; a large box of letters to children who have been adopted at Ellis Island were sent to the chapter. Well-filled baskets have been given to the national convention held in Tamaqua, S. C., sponsored by the national C. A. R., and also to the building fund of the national chapter house, C. A. R. in Washington, D. C. Monday. The delegation will head by Mrs. Julius Tammidge, vice president, Mrs. Franklin, state regent, and headquarters will be at the Willard hotel, where several brilliant entertainments will be sponsored by the Georgia group, including a reception for Mrs. Tammidge.

Owing to the fact that Mrs. Julius Tammidge, vice president general for Georgia, has been endorsed by the recent state conference for president general, and who will formally announce her candidacy at the proper time, there is intense interest in the election to be convened this year, and many Georgia D. A. R. who have never attended congress previously will be in Washington this week.

Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, newly elected state regent, will be confirmed at congress and she, as well as all state officers, will assume their duties immediately afterward.

18 years of age are invited to join the chapter. Miss Willis Fort Williams, Hemlock 1176, will furnish any information.

The following new officers were elected: Miss Sylvia Shoup, president; Miss Frances McConnell, recording secretary; Miss Virginia Stitt, corresponding secretary; Miss Martha Carmichael, treasurer; Hyde Tebo, registrar; Charles Everett, historian; George Gillon, color bearer, and the other officers who have served during the past two years and during whose administration a great deal has been accomplished are: Miss Elizabeth Everett, president; Miss Emily Mathews, vice president; Miss Rela Randolph, treasurer; Miss Lundy Sharpe, recording secretary; Miss Clara Mitchell McConnell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. Sage, J., recording secretary; Clarence Caldwell, historian, and Francis Shoup, color bearer.

D. A. R. Congress Convenes Monday.

The largest delegation of Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution ever to attend the national meeting will be in attendance at the continental congress of the D. A. R., which opens in Washington, D. C. Monday.

The delegation will head by Mrs. Julius Tammidge, vice president, Mrs. Franklin, state regent, and headquarters will be at the Willard hotel, where several brilliant entertainments will be sponsored by the Georgia group, including a reception for Mrs. Tammidge.

McIntosh Chapter

Unveils Marker On Hightower Trail

A recent outstanding event was the unveiling of a large granite marker on Hightower Trail by the Colonial John McIntosh chapter, D. A. R.

This marker is of great patriotic interest to Rockdale county and the unveiling exercises were held in the open out on the trail.

Mrs. J. H. McCollum, chapter regent, presided at the exercises.

The program included: Welcome, by Mrs. B. F. Tucker; Unveiling of Marker, by Edward Cowan and Mrs. W. C. Clark; Remarks, American Legion; A. G. Plaice, who went on marker, by Mary Callaway, wearing a quaint costume of long ago. Presentation of Mrs. H. M. Franklin and Mrs. H. H. McCallum by Mrs. J. H. McCallum. Address by Mrs. Franklin, state regent. Remarks by Mrs. H. H. McCallum, ex-president general. Address, by Dr. A. W. Reed, president of Emory University academy, Oxford, Ga.

The members of the McIntosh chapter gave a luncheon at the home of Mrs. R. D. Hewlett, in honor of the distinguished guests who attended the unveiling of the Hightower Trail marker.

Those serving were Misses Sarah Hewlett, Ora Guin, Louise McElvany and Renee Canon, all young daughters of D. A. R. members. Coffee was poured by Mrs. W. A. Langley.

During the luncheon Mrs. J. H. McCollum, chapter regent, gave original toasts in verse to the distinguished guests and presented each with a fashioned bouquet of roses and violets.

Among the distinguished visitors present were Mrs. H. M. Franklin, Mrs. H. H. McCallum, Mrs. W. H. Collier, Mrs. M. L. Knobell, Mrs. J. C. Rankston, Mrs. R. W. Williams, Mrs. C. G. Gandy, Mrs. J. C. Gentry, Mrs. J. B. Wiley, Mrs. W. B. Smith, Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Rees.

The out-of-town members of the chapter attending were Mrs. F. M. Dabney, Mrs. L. K. Ross, Mrs. B. C. Dabney, Mrs. C. C. Dabney, Mrs. J. Calaway, Mrs. M. G. Pendergrass.

Those attending from Conyers were Mrs. J. H. McCallum, Rev. and Mrs. Robert Jordan, Rev. J. J. Drake, Mrs. L. L. Mohley, Mrs. C. K. Gailey, Mrs. C. R. Cannon, Mrs. H. G. McElvany, Mrs. R. D. Hewlett, Mrs. W. A. Langley, Mrs. G. W. Cleaton, Mrs. B. Tucker, Mrs. C. R. Vaughn, Mrs. M. C. Summers, Mrs. J. M. Lassiter, Mrs. J. R. Lee, Miss Maud McCalla and Miss Kate Smith.

Movie Guide
For D. A. R.

The following pictures are approved by the national chairman on better films, Mrs. Newton D. Chapman: Jazz Singer, Warner Bros. Pictures—starring Al Jolson. Our Gang, a Buster Keaton comedy, Some Scout, Educational Film Exchanges, Lupino Lane in a picture of the pioneer-Indian type. Two Arabian Knights, United Artists. Louis Wolheim and William Powell in a picture of "The Scarlet West." First National Pictures, a story of an Indian's heroic sacrifice; it has patriotic value. The Valley of the Giants, First National Pictures. Milton Sills is the star—photographed in scenes of some of the California redwood forest; splendid. Tiffany Productions has a series of short subjects in color among which are: Romany Love, Comrades, Memory, Rose of Killarney. Note: State chairmen attending the national congress are requested to look at the bulletin board for the date and place of the better films committee meeting.

Newton Chapter To Mark Grave.

In recognition of the desire to honor all soldiers of the American Revolution, the Newton chapter has taken steps to have the grave of Robert Pullen suitably and permanently marked. The grave is located in the old cemetery at Covington, Ga., and bears this simple inscription, "Robert Pullen, born July 6, 1758, died January 12, 1854." The date of his revolution came within two years of completing a full century of his eventful life.

Sergeant Newton chapter met in March at the home of Mrs. Luke Robinson with Mrs. R. A. Norris, regent, presiding.

Miss Elizabeth Skinner, corresponding secretary, read several interesting communications. At the close of the business session the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee, of which Mrs. W. C. Clark was chairman. The outstanding feature of the program was a splendid talk on "Our Sons in the War," which took in the homemakers of America," which was given by Miss Mary Payne.

D. A. R.'s Present Banner to School.

Sarah Dickinson chapter, D. A. R., of LaGrange, was entertained by Mrs. Martha Reid and Mrs. J. J. Farmer at the March meeting, at the home of Mrs. Farmer. A very interesting program was given, following splendid reports from officers and chairmen.

This chapter has recently presented to the high school a handsome Georgia banner, when interesting exercises took place. After the presentation speech and acceptance by the school, "My Georgia Land" was sung by the students. The banner is four by five feet in size, and was presented with the idea of having it displayed on public occasions, especially on Georgia day each year.

Eternal Righteousness Prevails.

God rules.
Not a sparrow falls without Him.
And, therefore, as Providence unrolls the will of God for us, the true child is to accept and obey.
Now He brings an opportunity; now He lays a burden. Now He tries us with prosperity; now with sorrow. Now He sends us into battle and temptation; now He lays us on beds of pain and idleness. Now He wounds and now He heals; the way opens under His divine guidance.
It may lift us up; it may cast us down.
In all infinite wisdom the Father's goodness and eternal righteousness move.

Conferences of M. E. Church Come to Brilliant Close

Mrs. L. D. Jolly, Methodist editor, submits the first of the series of articles.

Georgia's two great Jubilee conferences of the M. E. church have closed and their proceedings become history. The last song has been sung, and the last prayer offered, but the world-spirit of enthusiasm expressed, the hopes raised, will go reverberating down the halls of time until they break on the limitless shores of eternity.

There is no doubt but that the Jubilee conference of the North Georgia conference was the greatest in the history of the organization. Many, if not most, of the states of effort it faces a future of unlimited opportunities, with the receding goal of perfection ever before it. The utmost in planning, foresight, organization, it moved forward with stately tread to a magnificent close.

The outstanding feature of the conference was the patriotic address which was delivered by President. It was really a great inaugural, summing up the labors of the pioneers whose harvest we are reaping, and sweeping forward to greater goals than those even dreamed of by our predecessors. "Greater things than these shall ye do" plus ultra.

President, for the first time over the annual conference, the president proved herself the perfect parliamentarian that she is. Keeping the goings of the Jubilee ever before her, she administered the affairs of the organization with efficiency and dispatch, her astute mind revealing itself in the expert handling of the intricate affairs of the convention. Powerful and efficient, but always suave and sweet. "Plus une faux pas. Absolument parfait."

The high watermark in spiritual attainment was reached in the retreat for which were held under the direction of Mrs. W. A. Albright, of the New Testament.

These silences with God proved veritable fountains of inspiration and refreshment, storehouses of divine power and strength, from which the members went forth to greater conquests in Christ's most holy name.

While it was not our opportunity to attend the South Georgia conference, still we are sure that the high goals were attained by that conference, and it is our fervent wish that the inspiration gained in these Jubilee conferences may be retained and go with the members throughout the year, and make of the Jubilee one of achievement that will set a standard for later years to follow.

North Georgia Conference.

One of the most distinctive features of the conference was the fraternal messages delivered by the young Brazilian national, Senorita Irany Andrade. Other interesting features were the addresses by a young Russian student at Emory university, Alexander Gavrilchuk, and Miss Lucy Jim Webb made talk on her work in China.

An impressive service was the honorary induction of the members who belonged to the society since its organization in 1878. Mrs. John Cunyus sang a solo of pioneer days in honor to these members.

An honored guest of the occasion was Mrs. J. W. Perry, vice president of the council, who conducted the periods of worship and meditation on Wednesday and Thursday.

At 8:15 A. M. Monday round table discussions were most interesting feature of Wednesday's program. Problems of concern to the missionary cause were discussed in an open forum.

The pageant presented by Mrs. M. E. Tiller, Wednesday evening was a vivid picture of life in the pioneer days. Wearing the costumes of an earlier period, the participants made the pioneers of the cause live again.

Dr. Harvey Cox and Dr. W. A. Shelton made addresses at the evening services.

Committee reports closed the services Friday. Every phase of missionary work was touched upon at this conference, and the recommendations of the committees give the promise of making the next fifty years greater in every department.

Writes Play for Baptist Meet

Mrs. W. C. Little, of Tennille, who has written a playlet entitled "The Bride's Vision," to be used for a "Ruby Anniversary" program in celebration of the 40 years of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of the Southern Baptist convention. Mrs. Little has also written several W. M. U. songs which have been sung at state and district conventions. Her poems have received favorable comment from the secular press.

which a fine pageant was presented. The scene brought together all of the old and new friends of the church and sang together some of the beloved old songs and hymns. Another scene was given by the little children, the camping church.

For sometime one Sunday night in the month of April was set aside to make and appropriate a few slides depicting the work in one of the many fields of our church have brought information and understanding concerning conditions and problems in these fields. These programs have, when properly advanced, been most helpful in awakening especially of young people. We feel that they are very helpful in awakening interest in missions. These slides, with the lectures to explain them, are furnished by the United Christian Missionary society, the only cost being the return postage.

The following officers were elected: President, Miss Thelma Miller; vice president, Miss Roswell Reeves; secretary, Miss Marjory Chappell; treasurer, Miss Cornelie Griffin; superintendent of Bible and mission study, Miss Elizabeth Colquitt; membership chairman, Miss Annie Pullen.

The Business Young People's department of literature and publicity, Miss Elton Richardson; superintendent of social service, Miss Susie Dozier; superintendent of supplies, Miss Elizabeth Colquitt; membership chairman, Miss Annie Pullen.

Miss Griffin Young People, a group of young business women, with Miss May Bell Littleton, superintendent of Young People's Missionary society as chairman, met in Atlanta, April 8, and organized a missionary society which will be known as Business Young People's Missionary society. Meetings will be held every first Tuesday evening with study at 6 o'clock, followed by committee work.

The following officers were elected:

It is the one known solution for the universal problem of leadership in our churches.

Baptist News Is of Interest Throughout State of Georgia

The Woman's Missionary Union of the Southern Baptist convention is 40 years old. Organized in 1888, it has experienced 40 years of sacrifice and service. When men and women have given to make 40 years of the celebration their ruby anniversary, so W. M. S. of S. B. C. is celebrating ruby anniversary this year. The price of one carat ruby is $1,000, so societies are asked to pledge at least one ruby as their gift for the year.

All societies that increase their gifts to $1,000 will be "Ruby" societies. The W. M. S. at Millen, Ga., has pledged to increase its gifts by $1,000. W. M. S. Central Baptist, Americus, Ga., has set "One Perfect Ruby" as its goal. The W. M. S. of Cedarwood is working toward a perfect ruby.

St. Mark's Church.

The Woman's Missionary society of St. Mark's M. E. church met on Monday, April 2, with Mrs. John Stewart, president, presiding. Reports were called for from officers and circle leaders, and showed much progress along all lines for the three months just past. Mrs. Nichols gave a message on "The Reconsecration." Mrs. Duren gave a report of the annual conference.

Grant Park.

March 15 the Woman's Missionary society of Grant Park Baptist church met at the church in a farewell service. Mrs. Reeves, who is soon to go with her husband to their new home at Jonesboro, Ark. After a short program, Mrs. DuVall was assisted by Mrs. Samuel Wilkins, Mrs. H. B. Jones and Miss Jessie Ramsey.

Mrs. Carter Helm Jones was hostess at the dinner of the Second Baptist church Wednesday evening. Grady Lee, president southern division Atlanta, B. Y. P. U. association, was master of ceremonies. A gift was given to the church.

The Second Baptist B. Y. P. U. Miss Evelyn Mitchell and Mr. Cleon Smith, whose engagement was recently announced, were honor guests. A musical program was rendered.

"Home of the Elders" Department Mrs. Helm, the "Mother," will be the subject of an address by Mrs. John Spalding at the meeting of the Atlanta Elementary league in this church Tuesday evening April 17. A "Mother's Day" program will be rendered and Mrs. John Lewis, a young specialist, will lead the junior conference. Supper will be served at 6 o'clock. Interested workers are invited. Miss Rose May King is president.

Decorated envelopes containing packages of fine seeds were given the members of the beginning department by Miss King as an Easter gift. An Easter egg hunt was enjoyed by the cradle roll department.

The girls' auxiliary recently met for the monthly business session. Mrs. John Burress, leader, presided. A program was served by the circle No. 8. Mrs. W. B. DuVall, chairman, Mrs. DuVall was assisted by Mrs. Samuel Wilkins, Mrs. H. B. Jones and Miss Jessie Ramsey.

Moore was a charter member of the board, being instrumental in starting the movement for establishing the home, she had served as treasurer of the institution for 28 years, and was vice president of the board and also a trustee.

The annual meeting of the Washington association, Baptist, W. M. U., will be held April 10, at 7:30 o'clock, at the Gordon Street Baptist church. The women of the fourth district and executive board of Atlanta association are requested to be present.

The Easter prayer service held Friday morning by the women of the First Christian church was one of deep reconssecration and inspiration for the large number who attended. After the two-hour service of silent prayer and the singing of hymns much was served and the afternoon spent in evangelistic visiting.

China Island Missionaries

Will Speak Here April 18-19

Dr. and Mrs. F. C. H. Dreyer, of the China Island mission, now on a long tour in the United States, will visit Atlanta this week as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Latham, Brookhaven drive.

A cordial invitation is extended by the China Island mission to all who may be interested in hearing Dr. and Mrs. Dreyer tell of their work in spreading the Gospel to remote regions of the earth. No collection will be taken at either of these meetings.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Dreyer, by reason of their long and notable service on the mission field, are prepared to bring a message of unusual interest and they can also speak with authority concerning present conditions in China.

Dr. Dreyer, who has served as pres-tre Christian church held two prayer services of 30 minutes duration last week on Wednesday and Friday. A life-sized picture of Christ praying in the garden of Gethsemane, painted by Mrs. T. R. Coggins, was placed in front of the altar, so that all might see it during the meetings, which consisted of prayer and song.

Dr. L. O. Bricker led the services, and Frank M. Charlton and Miss Lillian Smith rendered special solos fitting to the occasion. At the conclusion of each one the women spent the rest of the afternoons in a Baptist publication.

The fourth district, Atlanta association, Baptist, W. M. U., Mrs. C.

H. Gibson, secretary, will hold a jubilee and ruby anniversary rally at the Gordon Street Baptist church.

The women of the fourth district and executive board of Atlanta association are requested to be present.

The Farm Problem

By WILLIAM M. JARDINE
United States Secretary of Agriculture

ARM RELIEF is not a war-cry. It is a national need.

Not for nothing has that need been widely studied and discussed during the last few years—so studied and discussed that it is everywhere awakening city people to an interest in what used to be thought only a farmer's problem. City people are beginning to understand that the "farm problem" is also their problem, to realize that efficient and prosperous agriculture is fundamental to general national prosperity. It is well that it is so.

For understanding and sympathetic interest of city people are necessary to secure legislation helpful to agriculture.

No one understands better than the farmer that national legislation is no panacea for all ills. Yet there is real opportunity for helpfulness by the enactment of carefully studied programs both by the national congress and by the legislatures of the separate states.

We easily get carried into two essential errors. The first is to regard all helpful legislation as necessarily national legislation. The second is to lump all farmers into one vast composite personage labeled "The Farmer," in capital letters. One is as bad as the other.

"The farmer" is twenty-seven or twenty-eight million beings, living on about six million farms, of a hundred kinds of characteristics and of every degree of prosperity. What is good for one may not turn out to be what his neighbor needs.

Farmers themselves recognize the variety of their own problems. By individual as well as cooperative effort, they have already made substantial progress in recuperating from the great financial losses they suffered a few years after the world war.

As nearly every one knows, our manufacturing industries have made great strides in efficiency and productivity. Not so well known is the fact that the transformation and improvement in farming America during the course of the last generation are equally interesting and remarkable.

As to the increase in farm efficiency, let me cite a few facts.

With a farm population 2,000,000 less in 1924 than in 1919, and using less land, the farmers of America in the five-year period centered on 1925 averaged a volume of production about one-seventh larger than in the five-year period centered on 1919. Comparing the same five-year-periods the productivity of the average farm worker increased about 17 per cent. Part of this increase in production per person engaged in farming resulted from greater use of machinery, but part was due to more productive crops and live stock.

In the five years from 1922 to 1926 about 20 per cent more milk was produced from only 4 per cent more dairy cows than in the preceding five years. Production of meat and other animal products increased 9 per cent more than feed consumption.

Use of tractors and other mechanical sources of power since the world war has released for other uses from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 acres of crop land formerly needed to feed horses and mules. Not only has the tractor increased the area of land available for the production of food and fibres, and increased, likewise, the efficiency of labor, but also it has increased the power available for a more intensive cultivation of the land. From 1920 to 1925 the increase in mechanical horsepower on farms was several times as great as the decrease in animal horsepower.

In 1850 each farm worker had the aid of about one and one-half horsepower. In 1925 he was using four and one-half horsepower; and he is probably using still more today. In 1880 each farm worker cultivated an average of less than twenty-two acres of crops. By 1900 he was cultivating about twenty-eight acres, and in 1925 about thirty acres. The increase between 1880 and 1900 was partly due to the expansion of farming into the semi-arid regions, where acreage per farm is normally larger. The smaller increase since 1900 is partly due to the relatively greater acreage of the more intensively cultivated crops, notably cotton and vegetables.

Between 1880 and 1925 the total population of the United States increased 130 per cent, but the number of farm workers increased only about 50 per cent, and most of this increase occurred before 1900. Yet the number of acres of crops under cultivation more than doubled—and we continued to have a surplus of food for export. But our agricultural exports in the last twenty-five years have been a declining part of our total exports and a diminishing per cent of domestic production in agriculture. Our agriculture is less dependent on foreign markets than formerly.

Between the five-year period 1885 to 1889 and the period from 1920 to 1924 the yields per acre of corn, oats, wheat and potatoes increased an average of 17 per cent. The increase in production per worker has been most rapid in recent years, and in the wheat regions. The farm worker in a Kansas wheat field last year could harvest as much as five or six men could a decade ago, and as much as thirty to forty men could harvest in 1845. The use of the new combine-machine reduces the amount of labor needed to harvest and thresh 400 acres of grain from 120 days of man labor to 30 days.

In Texas and Oklahoma, during 1926, one man using a sled or stripper for harvesting cotton could gather as much in a day as eight or ten men could pick by hand.

As a rule, our farmers are using not only their hands and their brains, but every mechanical aid they can afford. To say that their troubles are the result of inefficiency—and I have heard that charge made—is unjust.

There are, of course, some inefficient farmers; but the economic pressure of the last few years has eliminated many of them. However, it would be a mistake to assume that the farm depression has eliminated only the inefficient ones. The men engaged in American agriculture today are the world's most efficient farmers from the standpoint of output per worker, excepting, possibly, farmers of the British dominions.

What, then, are the problems of our farmers?

First of all, those who produce for export are under certain natural handicaps in competing in world markets with such countries as Canada, Argentina and Australia. Despite large output per worker, the American farmer finds foreign competition serious.

The wages of his hired labor have always been high, a reflection of the general wage scale. In the early days a vast quantity of free or very cheap land lured away the "hired man" and enabled him to become his own master. In late years the vast expansion of manufacturing industries, offering comparatively high wages to even unskilled or semi-skilled labor, has depleted the farm labor supply.

In the next place, as population has grown, nearly all the most desirable tillable land has been utilized, land values have risen, and we are in competition in foreign markets for agricultural products with the products of cheap lands in newer countries.

Likewise, we no longer possess large areas of rich, virgin soil, as do some of our competitors. There has been great depletion of the fertility of many of our farms, and to restore and maintain fertility involves costs not yet experienced by certain foreign producers of foodstuffs.

Distance of the agricultural regions of the interior from our own seacoasts, with consequent high transportation costs, is a disadvantage to farmers in these sections. The Pacific and Atlantic coast areas have the benefit of low freight rates, because of water competition with the railroads. The result is that rates from our great inland food-producing regions are relatively high on agricultural products. Canadian wheat growers, for instance, enjoy an advantage of several cents a bushel on wheat shipped for export.

Possibilities of improvement in the technique of many of our farmers are large, despite high average efficiency of farmers as a group. There are farmers who, a few years ago, produced pork at a cost of from $4 to $6 per hundred pounds, while their neighbors' costs were from $12 to $18. It would be difficult to draft a law to equalize this difference and make pork production profitable for the inefficient farmers.

An example of the difference in farmers is furnished by the actual case of a Missouri farmer who sold his seventeen-year-old apple orchard that never had produced $500 worth of fruit. The buyer, on the advice of the Missouri College of Agriculture, adopted a system of scientific pruning and spraying, as well as other measures, and the result was an average net income from the orchard of $2,000 a year.

Boys and girls in their teens, benefiting from the instruction of county agricultural agents and other men who know the science of agriculture, are producing much more per acre than their fathers who have been farming for twenty or thirty years. The latter, of course, did not have the same advantages of agricultural education in their youth—but many of the older farmers are eager to acquire knowledge of better agricultural methods and are as apt pupils as their children.

However up to date the majority of American farmers may be, there remains a serious problem which the individual farmer cannot meet—the problem of the "surplus."

Joseph faced it in the days of the pharaohs and met it by storing the surplus of the "fat" years and disposing of it in the "lean" years.

Instantly the idea occurs that if supply exceeds demand the simplest thing is to cut down supply. But the answer is not so easy. Production cannot be arbitrarily limited, because weather conditions, for one thing, cause wide fluctuations in total yields.

Yet it should be possible to prevent the surplus of good crop years from depressing prices to such an extent that farmers may then receive much less in the aggregate for their crops than in years of low yield. The benefits of the higher prices of the poor-crop years are necessarily confined to particular districts and isolated groups of farmers, while other large numbers of farmers suffer losses.

The cost of necessary credit is also a source of worry to many of our farmers. Land banks and intermediate credit banks (comprising the federal farm loan system) enable farmers to borrow money on mortgage security for considerable periods at low rates. This enables them to finance land purchases satisfactorily.

But money needed for production purposes—for the purchase of equipment, seed, fertilizers, living expenses while crops are growing, or until the next year after there has been a crop failure—is often obtained only at ruinously high rates. Frequently the cotton farmer must pay as much as 12 per cent interest on money borrowed for production purposes, and merchant credit sometimes costs 40 per cent or more in various charges. This is one of the reasons why farmers often are forced to sell their crops as soon as they are harvested, glutting the market and depressing prices.

And after he has bought the best machinery he can afford, done his own job to the best of his ability, met the competing foreign farmer as best he could, made what terms were possible for his necessary credits, battled with wind, hail, rain, drouth, insects and epidemics he then finds himself dependent for getting his product to the town consumers upon the "middlemen"—brokers, commission merchants and the like.

These "middlemen" undoubtedly render necessary and substantial service. But the wide margin between producer and consumer suggests that we have much room for improvement in the merchandising of farm products.

Notwithstanding all these adverse factors, the outlook for American agriculture is not only far from hopeless—it is distinctly favorable. The farmers are helping themselves and being helped more than ever before. Progress is being made in working out the solutions of many agricultural problems.

I will mention briefly only the principal means of helping our farmers to attain that fair share of the general prosperity of America to which they are entitled.

Education of the farmer in the science of agriculture must be increased rather than diminished. Research work must be constantly extended, so that better seeds, better fungicides, better means of cultivation may be evolved. For some farmers and in some sections of the country diversification of crops is either not advisable or not practicable. But there are many other farmers still unduly dependent upon the success of one or two crops, farmers whose financial position would be bettered by diversification. Ways must be found to convince them of this fact and to help them adopt a diversified system of agriculture. This, like every other suggestion for improving agriculture, is no panacea. It must be applied only as conditions warrant.

Not all helpful legislation is necessarily national legislation. In matters of taxation, credits and crop selling, state and local agencies have a great duty as well as a great opportunity.

State governments can and should take a larger share of the responsibility for bettering the economic condition of their agricultural population. The general tendency at least in recent years, has been to place the emphasis on aid by the federal government. The states can do much to put farming on a stronger economic basis.

The surplus of farm products can and should be dealt with by strong cooperative associations acting through a stabilization corporation, or some other appropriate central agency, for each principal crop. Such machinery—big business controlled by producers—would minimize price fluctuations by several means: by a voluntary local regulation, to some extent, of production, based on studies of world conditions of supply and demand; by preventing the forced "dumping" on the market of vast quantities of grain or other commodities within a limited period, and by storing, buying, selling and loaning money on the products of their members.

An example of what can be done by voluntary cooperation of producers is found in Canada, where the wheat pool, composed of 142,000 farmers, handles about 200,000,000 bushels in a business-like, intelligent way. More than 50 per cent of the grain growers in three provinces are members.

Generally, our government should aid in every practical way in the organization and proper maintenance of cooperative agricultural associations, of which there are now nearly 11,000 in existence, with a membership of 650,000 and a volume of business aggregating $2,500,000,000. These are the "infant industries" of agriculture. By helping to bring about centralization of the local cooperatives more effectiveness can be given to their work.

Through cooperation between producers and consumers the present enormous costs of distribution can be lessened materially, with benefit alike to both. Continued study by qualified men will eventually produce practicable methods.

Means must be found to lower transportation costs on farm produce. Further development of inland waterways will undoubtedly be of some benefit to the inland agricultural producing region.

Taxes constitute a serious problem for many of our farmers, particularly in years of crop failure or when prices are depressed. Between 1914 and 1926 the average contributions of farmers to the financial support of government—federal, state and local—increased more than 150 per cent. This increase is due mainly to rising state and local taxation.

Federal taxes have been so revised in recent years that few farmers pay direct taxes to the national government. By this very revision of federal taxes, many income receivers, who have little or no taxable property, escape direct taxation for the support of state and local government. The farmer's land and other property cannot escape the assessor and must bear the mounting levies. This, however, is mainly a state problem.

Local banking is another field for state legislation affecting agriculture. Much improvement has been made in recent years in the federal system of farm credit. Comparable progress has not been made in state banking.

Perishable Goods

INSTALLMENT I.

FIRST BLOOD.

Twas in October, 1926, that George Hanbury and I first set up house in Wiltshire; and, since for the next six months we hunted four days a week, yet would commit to no one the pleasant task of setting our homes in order, I do not think we slept out of Maintenance—for from time immemorial that has been the name of the place—more than seven times. But two of the visits I paid stand out of my memory, and, as they bear upon the matters which I am to tell, I will set them down.

In the first week of December the wedding of one of my cousins took me to town.

Now neither Hanbury nor I would have dreamed of visiting London without calling on Jonathan Mansel, whose flat was in Cleveland row; for we three had made our fortune together and together had proved the stuff of which friendship is made. That apart, Mansel was the very finest gentleman that ever I knew; his ways were quiet, and his address was simple; but there was a natural royalty about him such as, I think, few monarchs have been able to boast.

I started betimes and traveled to London by road, and the clock of St. James' palace was striking nine as I turned out of Marlborough gate into Cleveland row. Except for my servant, Bell, I was alone.

Here let me say that it was Mansel who had taught me the virtue of being early abroad and, particularly, of taking a journey before the world was awake; "for," said he, "the dawn you may nearly always have to yourself, and, since it is the fairest of the hours, that a free man should lose it is more than lamentable."

I had no need to ring, for, when I had mounted the stairs, I found Mansel's hall door open and his body servant, Carson, watching two workmen who were busy about its lock. He took me directly to the study, where Mansel was standing before a cheerful fire.

"Ah, William," says he, "I'm glad to see you. How was it you didn't ring?"

I told him.

"That's right," said he. "Those fellows are changing the lock. Yesterday this flat was entered—by some person or persons unknown."

"Thieves?" said I.

"Thieves," said Mansel.

At once I looked at the wall, where I knew there had hung a monstrance. This was golden and jeweled, and, though there was plateglass about it, I could have forced the case in two minutes of time. But the monstrance was there.

"And they missed that?" said I, pointing.

"They didn't come for that," said Mansel.

For a moment we looked at each other; then I sat down in a chair and took out a cigarette.

"They came for my papers," said Mansel. "And got them." He pointed to his writing table. "In the right hand pedestal of that little safe. They cut it open and took my papers away.

There were 50 sovereigns there and five hundred pounds in notes; but they didn't take them; so it looks as though they meant me to understand that they came for my papers alone."

"Were there papers of value?" said I.

Mansel frowned. Then he moved swiftly to a window and stood, looking down upon the street. So he stayed for some moments, because, I am sure, he would not trust his voice.

Presently, "They were of interest," he said, "to no one but me." I was concerned, for Mansel was plainly moved, and, though I knew no more than the man in the moon the nature of the stolen papers, I had never before seen him betray himself.

At length, "What's to be done?" said I.

"Nothing," said Mansel, turning. "But, as you know, Chandos, I have a dangerous enemy, and, if he should study those papers, he might see a in whom there was no pity at all. I do not say that he had second sight; but his instinct was supernatural, and I do not think that any living being could deceive this terrible man.

Now, had we not made our fortune, "Rose" Noble would have made his; and, since nine hundred thousand pounds is a huge sum of money to forego, I was not greatly surprised that he was, so to speak, returning to the charge, and, as it was Mansel that had captained our enterprise, it was, I suppose, natural that "Rose" Noble should pitch upon him. How he would use the papers which he had stolen I could not think, but Mansel had said plainly that they could be turned to his hurt, and his demeanor had shown me that this hurt might be very sore.

On my return to Maintenance I told George Hanbury my news, to find that he shared my concern; but, since Mansel had promised to apprise us that she was an interloper and the only one of them whose ancestors had not known White Ladies, there was an amicable uproar, and Major Pleydell said gravely, "that I regard as one of the misfortunes of our house."

She was a tall, slim girl, very graceful and wonderfully and beautifully made. Her face was lovely; her thick, dark hair, lustrous; the light in her fine, brown eyes, a glorious thing. She was quiet, yet tireless and seemed to do all things well; she could drive a car and could ride with any man; yet she was always maidenly and looked as delicate acock-horse as when, in silk and satin, she sat to a piano and lifted her exquisite voice. She was naturally eager and responsive, and I shall always see her, as did Sargent—with her beautiful lips parted and her soft, brown eyes alight.

If the others were less attractive, that was no fault of theirs; for I think Adele Pleydell would have diminished anyone. She was plainly their darling; yet did not seem to know this; and, since she was very quick witted, this one simplicity made her the more worshipful.

Hanbury and I, as was natural, fell down at her feet, and I am proud to remember that she made us free of her friendship, before we had known her an hour.

So, indeed, did they all; and I do not think I ever paid a visit one-half so agreeable.

Much was made of the adventure to which I have already referred, and, when Major Pleydell proposed that we should go fishing in Carinthia later that year and then explore the very scenes of our endeavor, the tea was heartily received.

"And you'll come and stay with us," said Daphne Pleydell, addressing Hanbury and me. "If they will let us the farm we rented before, we shall have plenty of room, and Jonah's a poor showman when it comes to talking of himself."

That this was so I proved the very next day, for I rode with Adele in the morning at 6 o'clock and found she knew next to nothing of what Mansel had done. Be sure I enlightened her, if only for justice's sake.

When I had finished, she set her chin in the air.

"Tell me," she said. "Is 'Rose' Noble the man to take this lying down? I mean, nine hundred thousand is a bag of money to lose."

I suppose I hesitated, for her head was round in an instant, and her steady, brown eyes were on mine.

"Didn't you know," I said, "that Mansel was lately robbed?"

She let out a cry of excitement and checked her horse.

"I never knew," she said. And presently, "Go on."

I shook my head.

"It's not my secret," I said. "As it is, I've said too much."

With that, I would have gone forward, but she leaned down and caught my rein.

"Tell me," she pleaded, "tell me. I swear I'll not breathe a word."

In the end I yielded, and, before we were back at White Ladies, she

"Yes, I suppose you might call Adele—in 'Rose' Noble's hands—perishable goods."

line of attack which would hit me hard, hard."

"Us," I said quickly.

"Us," said Mansel, and smiled.

And there we left the business, for that was clearly his will; but, though we spoke of it no more, I could not get it out of my mind, for I knew as well as did Mansel that the theft was the work of "Rose" Noble and that it was not to be thought of that he would fail to perceive the significance of his spoil.

"Rose" Noble was a sinister man, and, though he came but seldom into the light, was undoubtedly concerned in some of the greatest robberies of his time. He was never taken, and the police of more than one country feared his name, for he had a reputation so evil as to be almost fabulous and was commonly believed by those who knew him to be gifted with second sight. That he deserved this fame I can testify, for Mansel, Hanbury and I had made our fortune in his teeth; we had more than one brush with him and found him a monster of iniquity, bold, swift and strong.

if trouble came, yet week after week went by and brought no message, we began to believe our apprehension baseless and the robbery nothing more signal than a flash in the pan.

It was early in the following April that Hanbury and I spent three fine days at White Ladies in the new forest, that is to say, at Mansel's country home. This he shared with his cousins, whose name was Pleydell. It was not our first visit, but the Pleydells were absent when we had been there before, and, though the four Sargents in the gallery had told us what to expect, I do not think that either of us believed that all five members of one family could prove so charming.

Adele Pleydell was the youngest and had married Captain Pleydell five years before; I learned later that she was American by birth. She and her husband seemed very young for their age. Major and Daphne Pleydell were clearly older and were by one consent treated as the heads of the house. Yet all were equal; and, when once Adele Pleydell affirmed knew as much as I about the robbery. When I said I was concerned, she laughed.

"I snuff a romance," she cried. "Jonah, the celibate, has had some passionate affair, and he's frightened to death that 'Rose' Noble will bring it out. But he never will. You can't blackmail a man for playing the game; and Jonathan Mansel's never done anything else."

"That I believe," said I. "But why was he troubled?"

The lady shrugged her shoulders. "A celibate sees a scandal in every bow. The memory of the most harmless flirtation is a millstone round Jonah's neck."

Her interpretation relieved me, for I was sure she was wise; but, though I was greatly tempted to share it with George, I did not care to admit that I, and not Mansel, had told Adele of the theft. So I held my peace.

The next day we left for Wiltshire, promising to return. Yet we did not, though our homes were but fifty miles apart; for with the coming of summer there was much to be done at Maintenance, and, though the hunting was over, we had our hands full.

The Pleydells and Jonathan Mansel left for Carinthia in July.

Mansel was soon to come back, for he had business at home; and then, on the first of September, he and George Hanbury and I were to go out together by road.

And so it fell out—though not as we had expected; for, though Mansel came leisurely to England, he took the road back to Carinthia, like a man possessed. And Hanbury and I with him.

On the thirtieth day of August we dined in Cleveland row, to settle the hour of departure and other things.

Our plans were simple and soon laid.

We were to meet at Folkstone and cross by the morning boat; and, since it seemed idle to take two cars, yet send three servants by train, we arranged to keep two with us and to send the third to Salzburg in charge of our heavier stuff. As luck would have it, all three had done this journey before—for Rowley, Hanbury's old servant, had lately reentered his service—and, since they were all efficient, any one of the three could be trusted to shift for himself; but as Carson and Bell were accustomed to handling a car, but Rowley was not, the latter was chosen to take our baggage by train.

Not until the cloth had been drawn did Mansel tell us that he had some unfortunate news.

"Boy Pleydell," he said, "Adele's husband, has broken his leg. I heard this morning. Years ago, not twenty-five miles from the scene of his accident, he broke a couple of ribs; so it looks as though Carinthia was bad for his health. However, there's nothing to be done. He's under a Salzburg surgeon, and I'm taking out thirty novels to help him to pass the time."

Here the door was opened, and Carson came in with a note. This was addressed to Mansel and marked "immediate."

"Who brought this?" said Mansel, taking it up.

The porter found it on the steps, sir, one minute ago.

Mansel asked us to excuse him and broke the seal.

After a little he gave me the letter to read.

The stolen goods will be returned on the receipt by the manager of the —— bank, Zurich, of your check for five hundred thousand pounds. This sum you can raise if you please

No time should be wasted, for the goods are perishable.

August 30th.

The body of the letter was written in clerky hand, but the date had been rudely added, I suppose, that day.

I passed the letter to George and turned to Mansel.

"'Perishable?'" said I. "'Perishable?' What does he mean?"

"I can't think," said Mansel, slowly, knitting his brows. "And why has he waited nine months?"

"It must be 'Rose' Noble," said Hanbury, looking up from the sheet; "for nobody else would know you could raise such a sum. Otherwise, I should say that the writer was out of his mind. I mean, half a million for some papers. . . ."

"I agree," said Mansel. "It's fantastic. I value them, certainly; but I wouldn't give more than a hundred to get them back. If as much. I can't understand it," he continued, taking the letter again; "for 'Rose' Noble must know what they're worth rather than I."

For a while we sat silent, for there was nothing to say; but I could not help wondering what was the nature of the papers which "Rose" Noble held and reflecting that, until we knew that, neither George nor I could make any useful remark.

Mansel was speaking in a quiet, even tone.

"The papers are the letters of a girl—occasional letters and notes—in all, I suppose, ten or twelve. Their matter is so casual and ordinary that I feared that 'Rose' Noble would wonder why I had kept them safe. They were in order of date, with her photograph. I feared he would think that she meant something to me. I mean, that was the only explanation of my keeping so carefully such artless documents."

There was a long silence, and all that Adele had said came to my mind with a rush. And I could have laughed for relief but that, I knew that "Rose" Noble was no fool.

At length, "I still see no daylight," said Hanbury. "He offers you these letters back. When you ignore his offer, what will he do?"

Mansel shrugged his shoulders.

"He may send them to her husband," he said. "I would very much rather he didn't, but that's as far as I go."

Again I took the letter and read it though.

"The goods are perishable," I said. "That's a curious way of saying I'm going to send them to him."

"I agree," said Hanbury. "And it's not at all like 'Rose' Noble. He always made himself clear.

"Painfully clear," said I, and could have bitten out my tongue.

But Mansel gave no sign of having heard what I said.

Then a bell was rung, and, sitting in breathless silence, heard a servant pass to the flat's front door.

The next moment Carson entered bearing a telegram.

Mansel ripped open the envelope, glanced at the sheet, and clapped his hands to his face.

The three of us stared at him.

Presently, "Tell the man to wait," he said, quietly. "He shall have an answer in five minutes' time."

Carson withdrew.

Mansel rose to his feet and handed the telegram to me.

Return Adele disappeared shall I call in police. PLEYDELL.

"Good God!" I cried, rising.

Hanbury snatched the form from my hand.

"You were quite right, Chandos," said Mansel. "'Rose' Noble has a way of making himself painfully clear."

I could only stare and Mansel gave a short laugh.

"Let me do the same," he said. "The letters he took had been written to me by Adele."

"O, my God!" said Hanbury.

"And when he says 'stolen goods' he's not referring to the letters, but to something more—more valuable, something which disappeared a few hours ago."

Not until then did the scales fall from my eyes; but though I would have spoken, I could not utter a word.

I watched Mansel pick up the letter and read it through.

"'Perishable goods,' he said quietly, speaking as though he were alone. "Yes, I suppose you might call Adele—in 'Rose' Noble's hands—perishable goods."

There was champagne on ice on a sideboard, and Mansel opened a bottle and poured the wine.

When he had drunk he sat down and wrote his reply.

Pleydell Poganec St. Martin Carinthia

On no account. MANSEL.

And when this had been dispatched he picked up "Rose" Noble's letter and lighted a cigarette.

His agitation could not have been over, but all signs of it was gone; and from this time on, until the end, he was, as always, the coolest and most patient of us all. Few men, I think, could have maintained such mastery of themselves; but Mansel's self-control was absolute, and, though it was now to be proved as surely no man's had ever been proved before, it never failed and seldom enough gave any sign of strain. Indeed, I often think that the flash of feeling he showed when the telegram was brought in was because when he read it he knew that his secret was ours.

Had "Rose" Noble's letter followed instead of preceding the telegram, he never would have told us the nature of the papers which had lain in his safe, and I am sure that neither George Hanbury nor I would ever have suspected the truth. Yet I am glad we knew it, and I think that, now it had been done, Mansel was glad, also; for, be a man ever so reserve, there is a pitch of trouble which he is thankful to share.

After a little Mansel folded the letter and held it up.

"I am not going to act," said he, "upon the suggestion here made because, for one thing, such a sum is ruinous and, for another, I do not trust 'Rose' Noble."

I got to my feet.

"We're all three in this," I said. "That's abundantly clear. If he'd drawn blank in this flat, he'd have started on George or me. But, whichever of us he'd attack, his price would have been the same."

"That's beyond doubt," said Hanbury. "He's out to recover the fortune; and, not knowing how much it came to, he's put it as high as he dares."

"Exactly," said I. "Very well. My share was two hundred thousand; in two days' time you shall have three-fourths of that back."

"Same here," said Hanbury.

"I know that," said Mansel. "Thank you. But it would break her heart. Sooner or later she would most surely find out, and then—well, you can't lay any one under a debt like that. It's not to be thought of. And since, as I say, I do not trust 'Rose' Noble, I think it will be convenient to count this document out."

With that he put the letter toward a candle's flame, but after a moment withdrew it and put it away in his case.

"So all that we know," he continued, "is that Adele has disappeared; and, since my cousin, her husband, is out of action and we three know Carinthia as the palm of our hand, we are naturally going to seek her with all our might. Of course we suspect abduction; I think any one would. But that is all. Have I made myself clear?"

"Yes," said I.

"Good," said Mansel. "And now please don't talk for a minute. I want to think."

I was glad to sit still, with my head in my hands, for the turn of events had shocked me, and I felt as though I were dreaming some disagreeable dream.

The disclosure of Mansel's secret, the unconscionable daring of "Rose" Noble, the horror of the plight of Adele had dealt me three swinging blows; but what had hit me still harder was the sudden appreciation that, thanks to our talk in the forest, Adele herself must now know that she was the very lady that Mansel loved.

What Mansel would have said, had he known this, I dared not think; but I was quite certain that, when he found it out as he most surely would, he would be most particular never to see her again.

This was no conjecture, for I knew the man.

Full measure he gave in all things, though it were to his own beggary; and that he would falter where a girl's heart was concerned was unimaginable.

Adele was his cousin's wife, at once his liege lady and his familiar friend; that much I had seen with my eyes; there never was, I believe, so gentle a relation. That the one valued this was patent; it was, I suppose, the light of the other's life. And now it was soon to founder, sunk by Mansel's own hand, rather than let come into the shallows of embarrassment.

The thought that my tongue would be to blame for this most bitter upset haunted me for days, although, as I shall show, I need have had no concern. Indeed, throughout our venture Mansel bore himself with such exalted gallantry that I have often thought since that, though he could not have known of the speech I had had with Adele, yet he knew in his heart that she would know why she had been taken and that he was carrying her colors for the first and last time.

My mind being so exercised, I do not find it surprising that I cannot clearly remember all that was said that evening, but I know that Mansel determined to sail the next night, but not before then, because he must have a day in which to prepare for the battle to which we were now to go.

Rowley was to leave with our baggage by an earlier train and Hanbury was to change the arrangements for shipping the cars.

Mansel's car was furnished with secret lockers and trays, but ours had no such fittings, and, since we must now carry arms, he gave me a note to his coach builder and bade me seek him the next morning at 8 o'clock. While he and his men were at work, fitting a hidden coffer, Carson and I together were to test and prepare the two cars, so that, with luck, if need be, they could run for a month on end without attention.

Bell was to cross to France by a morning boat, there to buy food and petrol against our coming and to promise ten thousand francs to the officials concerned if we were clear of the customs in half an hour.

From the port we should drive to Salzburg as hard and as straight as

Leave It to Spring

Romance, as Well as Sickness, Can Stalk a Hospital's Corridors and When It Does the Result Is Often a "Case With Complications."

In New York city it was spring. Even St. Martha's hospital sensed the magic, and upon Shirley Wayne in common with the rest it worked its spell.

Since her graduation from the training school the year before she had been in charge of the operating room and had come in that time to look upon the outside world with the detached indulgence of one who has taken the veil. It was her idea that she would continue to be head nurse there until she was an old, gray-haired woman.

So now she had been in the operating room twelve months; and one day, all in a moment, in a breath, she found that she was violently, irretrievably tired of her job. Not that she did not love her profession.

But outside in the beautiful world everything was coming to life. While here she was in this bleak, rigorous frost bitten operating room—alone.

Or, as good as alone. Dr. Ampere was there, of course, attending strictly to the business of ignoring her, it being his prudent practice to shut his eyes to physical attractiveness whenever such appeared behind hospital walls. Miss Wayne had rather annoyed him from the first—why had she come here to vex the decent whiteness with her superfluous vividness? Let her go to the "Follies" where she belonged!

He was drastic, but then he was a man bowed down by sorrow, to whom nothing remained but the river. This morning his fiancee had returned his ring, refusing longer to wait while he completed an internship that she felt to be, in a man of his background and prospects, foolish and unnecessary.

"It isn't as though you were an outsider, Watts!" he had been christened Richard, but with the surname of Ampere he was obviously predestined to be known to Harvard, Southampton and Park avenue as Watts. It was clear that she had his career mapped out on her mind's fashion chart and he shuddered.

A chap born an Ampere, who, poor now, might in some distant day inherit millions, need not bury himself in hospital wards. "If only you were more like Teddy Prince," she mused.

He gazed at her in horror. "Prince Charming!" he cried. "Help!"

To Watts that drawing room favorite, that boudoir snake, was something worse than the flu. Nor was he alone in this. It was unanimously agreed in the medical circles that had given him his scurrilous title that Theodore Prince was a rotter, a stuffed shirt.

Becoming every second less well disposed to Prince, who up to then had been merely a general annoyance, he mentioned this passionately and Evelyn replied that it was dreadful the jealousy there was among doctors.

And here, this morning, was his discharge, his official notice that he was now on the fiancee's retired list. This letter. He felt it crinkling in his linen pocket crisply as she herself was crisp.

And across the table from him stood Shirley Wayne, also waiting, and with that vision of the spring still in her eyes. And she knew now that it was the fact that he would soon be leaving the surgical service that had rendered her future suddenly intolerable.

And outside all the spring went on without them.

"Here they come!" she said at last in her clear, steady voice, addressing Watts with the professional courtesy of a nurse who is used to being treated as if she were a dangerous explosive and doesn't care a hoot. Hearts were not being worn on the sleeve of Miss Wayne's uniform this season.

The steps came nearer, a hush descended as though a bell had rung for the raising of a theater curtain and the operator appeared in the doorway and halted a moment as if to make his bow. One wondered that applause did not break forth from the audience of sheeted nurses.

Watts, the model of respectful in-terne, moved forward.

"Good morning, sir," said he, well behaved and modest. But he felt like an animal that bares its fangs.

"Ah, there, my dear chap!" returned Dr. Prince. For Prince Charming it was, indeed, Evelyn's criterion of worldly success. He advanced like a courtier in a play and turned upon only a fifty fifty chance. But without operative interference she had no chance whatever.

For the patient was a woman who had been a lively, smiling maid in the children's ward when he began his internship. A romance had sprung up between her and the policeman on the beat, which the whole hospital had watched with interest and had seen finally end in marriage. And now this thing had come like a bolt from the blue. Watts, looking down at her, remembered how Policeman Farrelly's face had gone white as he said good-bye to his wife.

"We'll do our best for her," Watts had told him quietly, shaking his hand, the man in him superseding the doctor.

Dr. Prince, with the bored air of a man to whom human lives are valued at a dollar ten a gross, looked down at the patient.

"Gentlemen," he said smoothly, "what Dr. Ampere tells us of the patient's history demonstrates that this is one of those occasions when it is the surgeon's duty to withhold the knife. To proceed would be folly."

"Banana Oil!" jeered Mr. Snivey them the expression of hushed sweetness that was so potent with the wives of millionaires. "Glorious weather," he announced, "glorious."

Dr. Prince scrubbed up, the patient was brought in, and the surgeon received the scalpel from the efficient hands of that Shirley who was now nothing on earth but a mechanical, capable nurse.

"A gastrectomy, gentlemen," announced Watts and proceeded to outline the patient's case history to the clinic that was crowding behind the operator's shoulders.

Dr. Prince looked down at the patient with an air of pained recognition. He belonged to that smaller division of the surgical world that feels all operations are performed in the interests of the surgeon. To his mind it was sheer insanity to work on a case that had only a bare chance of recovery. It was his habit to ship off such patients to Braylands, which was a municipal institution and had to take whatever came along.

So now Watts watched his superior with a critical and unfriendly eye. The case was a neglected one, with

He looked at Watts as though he should have had more sense than to admit such a case. "We shall proceed to the next subject," he went on. "This woman is inoperable."

So that was that. Watts' face hardened. Everything that had been said and that he had suspected about Prince was true.

But, "You don't think we might take a chance, sir?" he found himself asking, against all rules and regulations. He felt rather sick; things like this made one doubt one's vocation.

To Dr. Prince the implied criticism was the last word in impudence. Of all the young internes he liked this cool, imperturbable one the least.

"The case, I said, is inoperable," he repeated, the patrician master reprimanding his valet. While the clinic, knowing his reputation, looked at Watts with the warm eyes of brothers.

"Yes, sir," said Watts and made up his mind that he would send the patient down to Braylands at once and they would have her opened up before they day was over. There were men there, thank God, that knew their duty when they saw it.

By Teresa Hyde Phillips

But Shirley Wayne, glancing up at him quickly, met a pair of eyes so gray, so chill in a face so concentrated that she almost cried out to him not to look at her like that.

With a woman's instinct to cover up quickly a delicate situation between males she expedited the removal of the patient and the entry of the appendicitis that was next on their list.

Then the morning's work was over. The clinic melted away into the world. Dr. Prince, shedding his operating robe like a chrysalis, straightened a gardenia that strangely had not wilted and was off to Park avenue and environs, the finished product of countless laboring centuries. Watts accompanied him to the elevator.

Returning, he stopped in the doorway of the operating room, seeking vaguely, in man's immemorial fashion, for comfort from a woman who, he instinctively felt, had resources of comfort within her.

"Did you see how he passed up that laparotomy?" he demanded of Shirley, his voice harsh with contempt for Prince Charming.

She raised her eyebrows.

"The case was inoperable," she said primly. She had railed off all the hospital decorum, all the professional etiquette in the world, for her own exclusive use.

Watts stared at the girl.

"Inoperable your hat!" he then groaned rudely. He was profoundly indignant to find that this estimable young nurse did not see eye to eye with him on all such matters.

And she knew that in a moment she was going to disclose to him how thoroughly they were one in their estimate of Prince. She could feel her whole soul bend to the luxury of telling him; the words were rushing to her lips. And yet she was filled with a panic at the prospect of breaking down the barrier of hospital rules that kept them safely, decently apart.

And then, without her own volition, against every one of her four-year-old St. Martha's instincts, her lips opened.

"The case was inoperable," she said, mocking the liquid accents of Prince Charming, holding the phrase up before their eyes and surveying it as if it were a peculiarly loathsome type of poisonous bacillus.

"He makes me sick!" expounded Miss Wayne, as if she had been keeping those words back since infancy. "Perfectly, pricelessly sick!"

Her very hair seemed to emit fire and brimstone.

She had not until now had any idea that she felt like this about Dr. Prince. But she was thoroughly enjoying herself.

"Well, I'll be damned," breathed Dr. Ampere and looked at her with something more than warm approval. Now their relationship, he felt, was exactly right.

But it came to Shirley, hot off the griddle, that they were exactly wrong. She had overstepped the bounds of professional decorum. She had shown this smiling, engaging young man that she was on his side, against Dr. Prince, against all comers, forever. She had made herself cheap, she had offered him her—her friendship on a silver platter.

"I must finish my work," she said with great dignity, and found herself smiling unhappily with tears in her eyes. Really, she was getting to be the greatest fool, she felt. Then, true to the training that had molded her into a perfect pattern of hospital discipline, she withdrew in good order to the sterilizing room.

Dumfounded, Watts looked after her. His keen eyes that had spent so much time on Evelyn flickered over the bronze haired inexplicable woman that had so suddenly turned from a nurse into a person. He felt that he knew this person very well.

He went into the women's ward to see Policeman Farrelly's wife.

He moved toward her bed, putting on for the occasion that almost visible blandness that had carried him before through just such occasions.

"Out of the ether, all right, I see," he began cordially, fishing around in his mind for help.

And then he met Mrs. Farrelly's eyes, the eyes of that ward maid who had served at St. Martha's, who knew Dr. Prince's marvelous skill, and was also on to all his tricks.

"He was afraid to operate on me," said Mrs. Farrelly quietly. "He wouldn't give me a chance."

Afraid to operate? Why, of course not, Watts assured her, and in his dismay became for the moment almost incoherent. And yet, even while he was stumbling about inside himself trying to find some way to cover up for Prince Charming, he felt like kissing this pale woman with the haunted eyes. She was the second female he had seen in this one morning who was on to that bird.

But it was a bad quarter of an hour. Mrs. Farrelly declined to believe in any doctor. She was through with doctors for life. Watts, in his pleasant voice, with that sincerity and that desire for her recovery which showed in every word he spoke, must persuade her to go to Braylands without in any way seeming to criticize Prince Charming. Finally, he persuaded her. Mrs. Farrelly could not but have faith in this grave young man. She knew him to be a stronghold. He produced much the same effect on her, in fact, that he did to most people.

And events justified her faith. The next morning Policeman Farrelly, like the ghost of himself, stopped to thank the interne for his kindness, and the missus wanted him to know that she had come through the operation and was going to get well. And God bless him! He then allowed himself to express his honest opinion of Dr. Prince.

Watts listened for a few moments to these sentiments that were music to his ears and then he made his mind blank and with a grave face proceeded to defend Prince and refused in the end to discuss the matter any further. He firmly closed the door on Patrolman Farrelly, regretting in his heart that the officer's closing words could never bear fruit.

"If ever that party gets wise on my beat," said the policeman darkly, "just watch me give him the air!"

Impartially examining these threats and carefully considering the likelihood of Prince Charming some time falling into the toils of the law, Watts went to his quarters to dress for his afternoon off. Then he shook his head sadly. One could put all the trust one liked in Providence, but something told him that Prince and the law were never to meet.

His sister was coming later to motor him to Long Island. Last week Evelyn, too, had been a guest. But this time there would be no fourth at bridge.

He leaned from his window like the Blessed Damozel leaning from the gold bar of heaven, and above him the thin, transient clouds passed slowly in the misty blue.

When the man who supplied St. Martha's with those fresh vegetables that made its menu the wonder of all institutions drove up, singing loudly, Watts wondered bitterly what he found in this empty world to sing about. His heart seemed to contract and break out into demands, and yet it wasn't exactly Evelyn that it was shouting for.

He knew this vegetable man well, as did all of Thirty-fifth street, for he had been a landmark there for years. He was a huge man with only two moods—sunniness and fury. He was singing now, but he was quite as likely to be black with rage the next minute. As he drew up in front of St. Martha's basement door, Watts remembered a scene that had been enacted there last week. Silver—that was the vegetable man's name—had come out from a prolonged conference with the housekeeper to discover a box of oranges knocked down from his wagon and strewing the gutter. And what happened after that the crowd of children that had collected would never forget.

But no one knew how the fruit came to be on the ground. It was finally concluded that some one, driving a motor car up to St. Martha's door, had backed into Mr. Silver's wagon and knocked over the crate. And Mr. Silver had then pointed out that if he ever discovered who had done it there wouldn't be enough left of him to sweep up.

Idly, Watts watched him carry a bushel basket of apples into St. Martha's, leaving a crate of oranges resting on the lowered tailboard of his wagon. He did not return at once; evidently he was going over the list for the next day with the housekeeper.

While Watts was still thinking about the accident to the oranges, these vagrant musings were stifled by the approach of a town car that was far too conscious of its own magnificence and exclusiveness to shine. And at the sight Watts felt rising within him a terrible malignity. For the car was that of Prince Charming.

The latter drove up in front of the door and then, evidently remembering that some one else might want to use that space, backed his car carefully until it almost touched the rear of the vegetable wagon, slid his gears into neutral, shut off his power, and descended.

In fairness, it must be called to mind that this was spring. All up and down the land the virus was getting into the blood. And now, for a moment, Watts forgot that he was a serious young interne with a reputation to maintain on that effervescent April day. All the inhibitions of a well brought up youth fell from him like a garment. Suddenly, as one who has not a minute to lose he bounded from his seat and jumped down the stairs three steps at a time, avoiding the elevator, though he saw it descending from the floor above.

Reaching the ground floor, he passed hurriedly, without being observed, through the out patients' department into the street. A second later he reappeared and stole up the stairs again and approached his window from the side as if he did not want to be seen. Then, as if satisfied with what he saw, he sat down behind the curtains with the look on his face that painters give Joan of Arc as she hears the angel voices.

The sun went on shining brightly. The small breeze blew the white net back and forth against his blue serge waistcoat and finally the vegetable man, singing happily, came out from the areaway and turned toward his wagon.

"Holy cow!" roared Mr. Silver and his voice filled the street.

The crate that he had left on the end of his wagon was lying face down on the asphalt behind a black automobile that stood, sleek and wealthy, arrogantly superior to mere retail trade. Beneath its plutocratic bulk a gay trickle of oranges brightened the gutter.

There could be no question as to what had happened and as the realization came to him, the vegetable man looked as if he were about to have a stroke.

"A very unpleasant looking bird," was Watts' inward comment. "Some one's been feeding him meat."

He drew out a cigarette and lighted it joyfully. A sense of well being flooded him. His cares and troubles were rapidly disappearing dots on a blue horizon. The future looked bright.

But to Shirley Wayne, in the entrance hall below, there was no blue horizon, only grayness.

She realized that Dr. Prince was saying something and she smiled up at him automatically and it was this scene that Watts, blowing forth a cloud of cigarette smoke, regarded now with happy eyes.

Shirley and Dr. Prince continued down the steps and as they reached the bottom both halted in incredulous surprise. For Mr. Silver observing this exquisite specimen with the gardenia raise his hat to the pretty girl and move toward the motor, leaped forward, discarding his calm.

He looked ferocious, and Shirley, taken completely by surprise, stepped back, and cried "O," in a small frightened voice and stared at him with her hand to her mouth as if repressing a scream. She imagined he was crazy and thought desperately, "Now, if I only had learned how to deal with lunatics!" and tried to remember the correct procedure with delirious patients.

Prince Charming, on the other hand, moved by a primitive instinct to take cover, jumped behind Shirley, the only bit of protection at hand. He never quite understood how he came to do this and in after months it troubled him. But he saw Miss Wayne's clear eyes as she turned to where he had been at her side, fail to find him and then, filled with the most amazed contempt and abhorrence, come around to where he stood.

"O, you cad!" she said distinctively. "You miserable cad!"

And those were the divine words that floated up to Watts like a benediction.

Then there was no time for further action or reflection, for the madman, thrusting Shirley aside as if she were a rose in his path, thrust his face within an inch of Prince Charming's and proceeded to bawl forth his rage. The street seemed to echo and become one roar of investi-

The noise down below was really terrific and it was while it was at its height that another motor purred to the curb and two lovely women, looking out, stared at Prince Charming as if they could not believe their eyes. Watts could hardly believe his own, in fact, for while one of the women was, expectedly, his sister, Ann, the other, incredibly, was Evelyn. He could not, however, stop just now to try to figure it out—her presence.

"Good heavens!" said Evelyn. "It's Dr. Prince!"

The latter heard her, above the tempest.

Above, Watts looked down and felt that he would like to throw his arms about the vegetable man and kiss him on both cheeks like a French general. No use to remain at the window any longer, the drama had reached its height. Carelessly, lightly, a youth who has been anointed, he picked up his gloves and his soft hat and his stick and strolled happily to the elevator. The street was now completely full of the characters of the day's events, as if it were the last act of a musical comedy. In other words, Policeman Farrelly had made his entrance, and the cast was complete.

"What's all this?" he was roughly demanding, and he looked as if he meant to know the answer.

With no expression on his face but a sort of grim assurance that would later make his fortune as a doctor, Watts went down the steps and stood a little behind the group. Shirley turned and saw him and suddenly, swiftly, welcomingly, she smiled in a way that seemed to him more remarkable, more vivid, and more sweet than anything he had ever seen.

"He tried to hide behind me," she said in a muted voice, as if she could not believe such a thing. "He tried to hide behind me, when that man attacked him." She raised wide eyes to a man whose standards were her own.

Behind and above them in St. Martha's, windows had opened, heads were looking out. All the world of the hospital, nurses, internees, ward maids, probationers, up-patients, supervisors, was listening in, to hear the vegetable man broadcast his troubles.

But though Dr. Prince sensed that a hundred eyes were on him he suddenly did not care, for he had seen this figure that was demanding to be told what went on, and it was, thank God, a policeman. All his courage returned, all his customary sense that he was something very special. A policeman. Now he was saved.

"Ah, officer," he said, "your are welcome." And now with full confidence in his salvation he disclosed his identity to the avenging angel. I am Dr. Prince," he said, "arrest this man. Dr. Prince of St. Martha's hospital," he waved a proprietary hand at his kingdom.

"And what," thundered the policeman, "have YOU been up to?" And every button on his coat, each sepa-

WHEN JUSTICE TRIUMPHED

JUSTICE failed in the Remus case but not all murder trials are farces in Ohio. As a recent instance, there is the case of young Floyd Hewitt, who killed a faithful wife and her only child. And who died in the chair.

It happened, curiously enough, on the night of St. Valentine's day just a year ago. Months before, Mrs. Celia Brown, whose husband worked nights, had taken pity on the lonely-appearing Hewitt boy who lived across the road outside of the town of Conneaut, Ohio. She had invited him in to listen to the radio. Thereafter he came almost every night.

The climax came when Hewitt, whose mind had apparently become diseased by phantasms of sex, attempted to seduce the woman. It was probably the first time he had ever dared make such an attack upon a woman. Mrs. Brown hit him with a poker and ordered him from the house. Instead he killed her.

And then, because the child had seen it all, Hewitt pursued the youngster into the dark cellar with a baseball bat, while the radio played on.

* * *

Justice triumphed in Ohio when the law exacted the extreme penalty of death in the electric chair in the case of Floyd Hewitt, 17, the youngest person ever to be executed in that state. But it was an ironical sort of triumph, coming as soon after George Remus, the bootleg king, got away with murder in Cincinnati.

Young Hewitt's crime was a fiendish affair—he clubbed to death a woman who had repulsed his advances, then killed her 5-year-old child to cover up his tracks. Always interested and swayed by music, the youth had been stirred by a love song on the radio—the radio was still going when, having washed his hands, he left the house.

But as so often happens in murders of this sort, Hewitt left a tell-tale clew behind him at the scene—in this instance it was a button off his coat.

An overgrown boy with the mentality of a 10-year-old child, Floyd lived with his mother three miles outside the town of Conneaut, Ohio. His parents had long been divorced. He shunned other people, particularly women, and had no playmates in the neighborhood.

He was habitually sullen; the people of the town regarded him as "simple minded." In this respect he reminded one of young Harrison Noel, the New Jersey boy who kidnapped and killed a little girl and was ultimately adjudged insane, but Hewitt was hardly such a pronounced type as the Noel boy.

Alienists who examined Floyd after the murders stated that in their opinion he was not insane.

Furthermore his face bore some resemblance to that of Richard Loeb, of the famous Chicago case. Something about the sullen eyes, the full, weak mouth and the hang of the jaw, reminded one of the good-looking Loeb boy. Also,

Fear of Opposite Sex.

Not that phantasms of sex are unusual in a boy of sixteen, but in this instance they were exaggerated, largely because of the fear he had of the opposite sex. He actually trembled in their presence. Unquestionably he brooded for hours on end about girls and about sex, visioning himself in heroic roles and scenes wherein he would conquer and delight.

Fate willed that a faithful wife and mother, who lived in the house across the road from the Hewitt home, should be the victim of young Hewitt's visions of conquest.

Mrs. Celia Brown was a comely woman of 27, devoted to her husband and her son. Fred Brown had built the little brick and wood bungalow with his own hands and the family had moved in about three years before. Brown worked nights as a crew caller at a railroad engine house. He had installed a radio in the house so that his wife might not be too lonely evenings while he was away.

As it developed, this radio was to be, indirectly fate's instrument of destruction. And it was to provide weird orchestration for as horrible a scene of murder as one could imagine.

According to neighbors who testified at the trial, Floyd Hewitt had never appeared to be interested in anything very much except music. He had always exhibited a strange fondness for it, though he never sang or played any sort of instrument himself. He was fascinated, they said, as a child is fascinated.

One evening in the fall of 1926 Mrs. Brown noticed the Hewitt boy loitering outside her home. It was plain to her that he was listening to the strains of music from the radio as they floated through an open window. Having heard that the youth was considered simple-minded and generally shunned by other people, she was moved by sympathy at his apparent yearning for companionship. She went to the door.

"Hello, Floyd," she said. "Would you like to come in and listen to the radio?"

He was embarrassed and tongue-tied but he entered.

That was the beginning of what became an almost nightly occurrence. Hewitt would sit quietly, hour after hour, listening to the music, and he would generally leave when the young husband arrived home from work about midnight. He seldom spoke to the woman and child who were in the same room with him night after night. Brown and his wife spoke sympathetically to each other of the youth.

Little Fred, Jr., made numerous but futile attempts to engage Floyd in childish games. The gawky youth from across the street seemed interested only in music.

Songs of Love.

But as we now know, there was something else drawing him nightly to the Brown home—not at first perhaps, but later after the woman had begun to figure in the boy's thoughts. It is quite likely that he entertained thoughts of a conquest for many weeks before he finally summoned up the courage to make an attempt.

Curiously enough, the night when thought finally graduated into action, was the evening of St. Valentine's day, February 14, 1927—the day when normal boys and girls exchange missives of affection in honor of the patron saint of lovers.

According to his own confession, Hewitt had come as usual that evening. He and Mrs. Brown were sitting on the davenport; little Fred was playing on the floor at his mother's feet. They were listening to a St. Valentine's day program over the radio . . . songs of love and yearning . . .

Suddenly Hewitt threw his long arms around the woman and strained her to him in a crude and brutal attempt to kiss her. She slapped his face and broke away.

"Why, Floyd, I'm surprised at you!" she exclaimed.

Perhaps Mrs. Brown was secretly amused at the boy, but if she was her amusement soon changed to anger as Hewitt, turned now into a beast, again sought to overcome her. Like most murderers of this type, the very fear he had of the woman made him more ruthless.

He went after her again, as he had seen men go after women in the movies. Mrs. Brown seized a stove poker and hit him with it. She ordered him to leave the house. But he was deaf to everything save the voice of conquest within him. The voice had sung a siren song, urged him to this for weeks and weeks, and even now was telling him not to give up until he had triumphed.

The woman hit him again with the poker and the blow infuriated him. He

Nuremberg Honors I

The Prodigal Son

After 400 years the ancient Bavarian town of Nuremberg is trying to make amends for the shabby way it treated its most illustrious citizen. A quadricentennial celebration in honor of Albrecht Dürer, Germany's greatest painter and engraver, has just opened in his birthplace.

Nuremberg—the town that thought so little of its great master painter during his lifetime that it gave him less than 300 florins' worth of work; the town that sold to other cities the masterpieces which the painter had bequeathed to his birthplace—has at last discovered what the rest of the world already knew: that Dürer's fame has grown with the ages until now he is hailed as one of the greatest artists who ever lived.

And so Nuremberg is trying to make amends. From now until September the streets and squares of the quaint old city will relive on a grand and spectacular scale the life and scenes of Dürer's day.

The celebration was opened Easter week with a ceremony at Dürer's grave in the Johannis Cemetery and services at Town Hall. Formal exercises these. The real tribute was to come later—and from those most competent to praise Dürer's great contribution to art. Artists, come to Nuremberg from all parts of Germany, formed a monster torchlight procession and marched about the city in a spontaneous tribute—a tribute which did not end until they had sung their praise before his monument.

During the summer months performances will be given of "Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg," "The Nuremberg Egg" and "Veit Stoss," all of which are written against a background of the life and scenes of Dürer's time. And at intervals will be presented plays by a youth who was growing up in a cobbler's shop while Dürer was painting his most famous works—a youth who later gained renown as Hans Sachs, the greatest poet and mastersinger of Nuremberg. Carnival cavalcades, journeymen dances and serenades will add to the festivities.

But the most significant event of all will be the loan exhibition of the works of Albrecht Dürer. From all quarters of the world Nuremberg has gathered together the greatest collection of the artist's paintings, engravings, etchings and woodcuts ever assembled before, so that all who make the pilgrimage to his birthplace may see the broad scope of his art. Some of the works which will be shown are reproduced on these pages.

It is possible that in this exhibition will be included two recently discovered works of Dürer which have just been purchased by Americans. One of them is a portrait of the great artist painted by himself, probably between the years 1507 and 1510. It was discovered in Sweden some years ago by a Berlin art dealer. He took the canvas to Germany. News of its discovery leaked out and a lively international bidding was started which culminated in the sale of the portrait for 1,000,000 marks—about $250,000—to an American collector. Oddly enough, though Dürer students were certain that all of his works had long since been accounted for, "The Holy Family," another Dürer, was unearthed about the same time in Spain by a well known connoisseur, Dr. Schabach. This painting was recently sold to an American, for an unnamed price, though it may be assumed that the figure approached that given for the self-portrait.

Great as his paintings are, it is in his drawings, his engravings and his wood-cuts that his greatest genius is shown. For Durer was a master of line. And after four hundred years he remains perhaps one of the greatest masters of line the world has produced.

To-day his "study" of the two marvelous clasped hands is still a model for the art student to imitate—for in this simple drawing Durer has attained such perfection of line and lineament as to stir the imagination and the emotions. This work will be found in almost every Child's Primer in the Rudiments of Drawing. And it will usually be found in the studios of our greatest artists of to-day—an inspiration and a guide for their own masterpieces.

It is the simplicity of the drawing in the case of the clasped hands—the perfect art that conceals the perfect technique—which impresses the beholder. But one must turn to a complicated work like his "Melancholia" to study the diversity of his genius. Here is a picture filled with all the phantasmagoria of the beauty and pathos of life. The whole gamut of human emotion races across its multiplicity of lines in a composition that stirs the emotions and fires the imagination.

Durer was in his prime at the dawn of Protestantism in Bavaria, and with characteristic boldness he was one of the first to espouse the new cause. Martin Luther became one of his best friends. Thus we find in his best work a vivid explanation of Religion as it was interpreted by the great Reformer and his followers. In his masterpiece, variously called "The Four Temperaments," or "The Four Apostles," is to be found a revelation. These four figures are labeled as the four Apostles, St. Peter, St. John, St. Paul and St. Mark, but they are really representative of something infinitely broader and deeper than that. They are the four temperaments that have carried forward all the great movements of the world; they might as well have been called the Prophets of the Old Testament as the Apostles of the New; Popes or Martyrs of the Church of Rome or psalm-singing zealots of the Reform movement. When we have contemplated the depth of meaning in the picture, then we may pass on to the glories of its colors, seemingly as bright to-day as they were 400 years ago; to the draftsmanship, the composition, the light and shade; the depth, the tone, the poetry.

"The Four Temperaments" is the property of the Alte Pinakothek Museum in Munich, where is to be found the most impressive array of Durer's work in the world. His famous Self Portrait is there, with the portrait of his father which won him permission to study art.

The Kaiser Friederich Museum in Berlin, although one of the youngest European galleries, possesses what is perhaps the most popular of all of Durer's later works, the portrait of the Nuremberg patrician, Hieronymus Holzschuher.

It is these masterpieces and the others that are to be found in the other public galleries and museums of Germany—rate wrinkle of his uniform proclaimed to the universe that whatever was going on here was the fault of this doctor.

And at the sound of these dreadful words, Prince Charming looked as if he was going to die; as if, in fact, someone was walking over his grave. Paralysis fell on him for a second. There pressed on him the horrible realization that for the first time in his life he was being undervalued. He looked around the circle of faces for help, met the delighted amusement of Evelyn, the disdain of Miss Wayne, the blank facade of that detestable young Ampere, the devouring hatred of that lunatic orange man, and came back to the sure hatred of Policeman Farrelly.

"Was you hungry?" demanded Mr. Farrelly. "Or was you just amusin' yourself, rollin' them oranges around?"

"But, I say, officer," gulped Dr. Prince, "this is ridiculous. I haven't touched his oranges."

"Banana oil!" jeered Mr. Silver.

"Priceless," murmured Evelyn.

Shirley moved a half-inch closer to Watts.

"Well, don't stand argyryin' with me," snapped the policeman. "C'mon an' tell it to the judge." He took hold of Dr. Prince's elegant sleeve to intimate to him that the time had come to move on.

"Judge!" returned Prince Charming in a chill, desiccated voice. "Unhand me, for you do not understand, I am Dr. Theodore Prince."

"You should 'a' remembered 'at before yuh got so free about playin' with them oranges," remarked the officer.

"But you can't arrest me on such a charge!" cried Prince Charming, still sure that he was a person of value.

"Can't I?" growled the policeman, remembering the white face down at Braylands. He bent over Dr. Prince with a terrible countenance.

Dr. Richard Ampere seemed to come back from a distant land where he had been wandering during the discussion. He stepped forward now like an adult appearing in the presence of naughty children, whose affairs, however, were no personal concern of his.

"I think there has been a slight misunderstanding here," he said merrily, and, back to Prince Charming, he faced the belligerent policeman and definitely winked.

"Mis-what?" asked Mr. Farrelly and melted somewhat. This young pill thrower was a good guy, he'd say that for him.

"Of course, it is preposterous to imagine," Watts said evenly, "that Dr. Prince had anything to do with the accident to those oranges."

Mr. Farrelly winked back at him. There was more here, he felt, than met the eye. It seemed to mean that he had better, after all, let bygones be bygones.

"We can explain everything," said Dr. Ampere, and proceeded to explain completely nothing. But in some occult way it penetrated to Policeman Farrelly that his work for the day was finished.

He looked regretfully at Dr. Prince. It would warm his heart to take him to the police station, but there might be consequences for himself later.

"Doubtless," he said magnificently, "there is a satisfactory explanation of all this."

"Doubtless," said Watts, and drew a yellow-backed bill from his pocket and passed it to the orange man.

"Perhaps," he said, looking the latter straight in the eye, "perhaps you got off on the wrong foot."

Mr. Silver looked down at the bill, then up at Watts.

"Perhaps I did," he said and grinned. He was his sunny self once more.

He looked at Dr. Prince and visibly hesitated, then sighed.

"Don't hit my wagon again," he suggested, "unless you're found out by a patient and are trying to commit suicide," with which final thrust he burst happily into his song again and rattled away.

Policeman Farrelly looked after him with the look of one whom unkind fate has cheated of its prey. If there were to be no charges lodged against this guy, his own hands were tied. He studied with hopeless longing the crucified Dr. Prince and revolved in his mind the possibilities of taking him up as a disturber of the peace. At that moment he lifted his eyes and encountered Watts' honest, admiring, and respectful gaze.

"Sorry to have been so much trouble to you, officer," Watts said earnestly, smiling his disarming smile, "but I think everything is cleared up now."

Patrolman Farrelly, being quick-witted, understood that he was invited to seek pastures new.

"I still think I smell a long-tailed rat," he said slowly.

"Perhaps you do," said Watts cordially. "Well, good-by."

A silence followed in which Dr. Prince's fate seemed to hang in the balance. At last Policeman Farrelly, with another puzzled look at Watts, indicated that, as one friend to another, he was through.

"Watch your step next time," was his parting counsel to Prince Charming, "or it'll be thirty days at Blackwell's for yuh," and, touching his cap to Watts as though they had accepted each other on a plane of masculine equality, he directed one more scathing look at Dr. Prince, turned on his heel, and departed.

They all watched him as he retreated up the street.

Then, "Better get out here, sir," said Watts sweetly, for the crowd was still staring. It interested him to observe that over and above Dr. Prince's mortification and tortured vanity rode his stupendous amazement.

"But the creature attacked me absolutely without reason!" he kept saying. Which seemed to Watts to be beside the mark. To his way of thinking, the fact that the Attending still lived was proof that he bore a charmed life.

"A man like that takes things hard," he mused in his best interne voice, impenetrable and fathomless as when making his rounds. "Of course, the orange business was only an excuse."

Dr. Prince stared at him without understanding.

"I tried to persuade him," Watts went on, "that you were quite within your rights. I had no idea that he would become violent."

"You what?" The Attending wondered whether it was just he, himself, that had lost his mind or if they would all meet together later in the same padded cell—he and Ampere and the orange man.

Watts looked at him, eyes wide with astonishment. "You know who he is, of course."

Naturally, Dr. Prince did not know who he was, except that he owned oranges. Neither could he but guess it, did his senior interne. But small details like that meant but little in the latter's life.

"Surely," said Watts simply. "He's the husband of the gastrectomy you did not operate on."

There was the light, easy stroke of genius!

Dr. Prince cleared his throat with difficulty. It was obvious to him that this dizzy untruth was the only possible explanation for the late lunatic events. It did not occur to him to question it.

He looked around as if trying to adjust himself to a new view. And at his regaining consciousness the windows and streets cleared themselves quickly of all who belonged to St. Martha's. Watts observed regretfully that Miss Wayne was leaving, too, without so much as saying good-bye. He looked after her wistfully and with a certain desperation. After smiling like that, no one should go off in sudden flight.

While he continued to gaze after her, Dr. Prince entered his car. He had not stopped to speak to Evelyn, but appeared to be in a great hurry. His face was less pink than usual, his gardenia had at last faded, and his eyes seemed to peer into the future, where other hasty mates might lie in wait.

"It has all been a terrible misunderstanding," he gasped. And Watts, turning to him once more, knew that fewer patients would be sent to Braylands henceforth. Politely he said good-bye, his elation tinged with the awe that comes to one for whom Providence has especially interceded.

Mysteriously as it had appeared the crowd now faded. Only Ann and Evelyn were still there. In all her sharp, dignified beauty she sat waiting for him and only now when the excitement had died down did it occur to him how extremely odd it was that she should be present. Yesterday she had broken with him forever and yet here she was. His eyes hardened.

"Did you come to inquire for Prince?" he asked and looked at her with a level, sustained glance as if he were balancing a glass of ice water on it. "Don't worry about him," he added. "I think only one of his wounds will prove fatal."

Evelyn smiled. "How silly he looked," she said, and Dr. Prince, as a topic, was thrown into the discard.

Evelyn now leaned toward him, consciously arrogant.

"Your uncle died this morning," she said, and turned possessive eyes upon him. Ownership was in the very curve of her eyelashes, victory in her smile.

Watts, without speaking, looked back at her. His uncle's death could pain him little, for they were practically strangers. It had always been known that he would some day be that distant uncle's heir, but his relation had been one of those semi-invalids that live indefinitely. No one, he least of all, had expected this to happen for years.

"Ann has asked me to dine with you," Evelyn smiled. She had prepared an attitude and a set of feelings with which to meet him. She had, of course, unfortunately written him, breaking off everything. But that, naturally, was all over now. Finances had been the only bar between them, but now they could have their certain comforts and securities and Watt could indulge in his fantastic whim for medicine. His eyes left her and he glanced und.

"My word! What does he think he sees now?" thought Evelyn impatiently, who had no time for visions.

But she never discovered. For all of a sudden this unaccountable young man looked brightly at her and softly laughed.

This had been a day of revelations and the last one had just broken upon him. In its light it was clear that Evelyn had never come within a thousand miles of filling the vacant place that was in his heart. She was, he knew now beyond question, too formal an ornament to perform that office. Her mission had been to keep the hole open, to prevent its healing by first intention until its rightful occupant, molded to a shape that would fill that cavity, had come along.

And, with a kind of iciness creeping up his spine at the closeness of his escape, he realized that if he had not, in a moment's madness, knocked that orange crate off the wagon he would never have found this out.

He stood for a second longer without speaking and it seemed to him that he heard birds singing and trees budding in the park.

With a start he came to. "I'm sorry that I can't dine with you," he said in his polite way, and it occurred to Evelyn that his voice sounded like a baritone saxophone, "but the fact is, I have another engagement."

His sister leaned across the wheel. "Nonsense, Watts," she said, "we need you for a fourth—

But too late. Watts was gone.

He had seen a small, familiar, and yet thrilling strange figure standing at the corner as if waiting for a taxi. Perhaps, thought Watts, if he got there in time across those shining, spring-touched pavements where her feet had been, that slight person with the heart-shaped face would smile at him again.

tore the poker out of her hands, chased her about the room, and then, cornering her near the stairway leading to the second floor, killed her.

Little Fred, in the meanwhile, had been running after his mother, screaming. He had seen Hewitt rain blow after blow upon the woman's head. Then the little fellow ran into the cellar in terror.

And after him came this ogre, whose large smooth hands were dripping with blood. Hewitt had picked up the child's baseball bat. He cornered the child as he had cornered the mother.

Upstairs the radio played on . . . songs of love and yearning . . .

Hewitt came out of the cellar and went to the bathroom, where he washed his red hands. Then he went home, read a newspaper and went to bed.

When Brown came home at midnight the radio was still playing in the lighted living room. Shouting a greeting, he threw open the front door and at once saw a sight he will carry to his grave—the body of his wife, the head battered, lying at the foot of the stairs leading to the little bedroom where his son usually slept.

Staggered From House.

With a terrible cry the man staggered out of the house and into the home of a neighbor, to babble out the story of his gruesome find before he collapsed. Thereafter for two months Fred Brown hovered between life and death in a hospital. Even when Hewitt was tried Brown had hardly recovered enough to testify.

If he had seen the other body, lying in the cellar beside the furnace, it is very likely that he would have lost his reason completely that night.

Neighbors and police found the body of the child, slaughtered in the same manner as was Mrs. Brown. The baseball bat lay beside the body as the poker lay beside the other body upstairs. In the bathroom they saw bloodstained towels, which the murderer had used to clean his hands.

Nothing else except—

One of the detectives picked up a button on the first floor. He saw that it had apparently been ripped from the clothing of the wearer. He decided that he would have the murderer when he found the wearer.

The morning after the double killing the little town of Conneaut was in an uproar, and even metropolitan Cleveland, miles away, was stirred and shocked by the tragedy. Suspicion at first centered upon the grief-stricken young husband, who lay in the hospital, delirious with the horror of what he had seen. Whispers of lynching led to a special police guard being placed at the hospital.

But there was one who might have done it, said the neighbors—young Floyd Hewitt. He frequently came, they said, to listen to the Brown's radio. The radio, remember, had still been on when Brown came home.

And why hadn't Floyd visited the scene, as every one else had for miles around?

Sheriff Frank Sheldon, who, incidentally, was working on his first murder case since his election six weeks before, found Hewitt sitting in a vacant automobile. The youth had been motoring around with one of the townspeople. The sheriff knew Hewitt, as did most every one else in the village.

"Hello, Floyd," he said. "Where's your coat?"

Floyd pointed to the rear seat of the car. Sheldon examined it and remarked indifferently:

"See you've lost a button off it, Floyd."

With equal indifference Hewitt replied he guessed it must have been caught on the gate in front of his house.

While the youth watched him, the sheriff drew from his own pocket a button which corresponded with those on Hewitt's coat. "Kinda looks like that might be it, eh, Floyd?" he ventured. The boy agreed. Then Sheldon said quietly:

"Why did you kill Mrs. Brown and little Fred?"

Hewitt denied that he had killed them. The officer continued to question him. Floyd let me involved in contradictions. Finally—

"The radio made me crazy with love for her," he said. "She wouldn't let me kiss her. She fought me off, dread events were detailed to the jury. And across the room at the other counsel table Fred Brown, too, wept.

The defense, as was expected, paraded before the jury evidence of mental abnormalities, calling witness after witness to prove that Floyd had not been sane. But alienists overthrew this testimony—in their opinion, the accused youth had been sane at the time of the crime, though his mentality was that of a 10-year-old child.

There was no Clarence Darrow in this case, no "three wise men from the east," as State Prosecutor Crowe called the defense doctors in the Leopold-Loeb case. But then, there was no plea of guilty as there was in the Chicago case. If there had been, Floyd Hewitt might have won life imprisonment.

He was found guilty of murder in the first degree. The jury could have recommended mercy but declined. Judge Charles Sargent immediately their way out of the death house due to the fact that there is no active enemy in the field against them. In this case there was one person fighting tooth and nail against any form of clemency. That person was Fred Brown.

Brown through it all was Vengeance personified.

And now, while Hewitt awaited Justice in the death house, another slayer strode on the stage in Ohio—George Remus, the bootleg king, the one-time Chicago lawyer who had amassed millions in his vast business. And in this case Justice didn't do so well.

Farcical Trial.

Deliberately he went forth to kill his wife and he killed her. He claimed that she had squandered and stolen his fortune while he served time in Atlanta federal penitentiary, and that she had given herself to another man in his absence. She had, in fact, driven him crazy, he said.

Justice agreed with Remus. Justice allowed him to make a farce of his trial. He took an active and theatrical part in his own defense, summoned all sorts of witnesses to say that he had at various times behaved like a crazy man, and in the end won a verdict of acquittal because of insanity.

It is said that it is only a question of months before Remus will win his way out of the asylum.

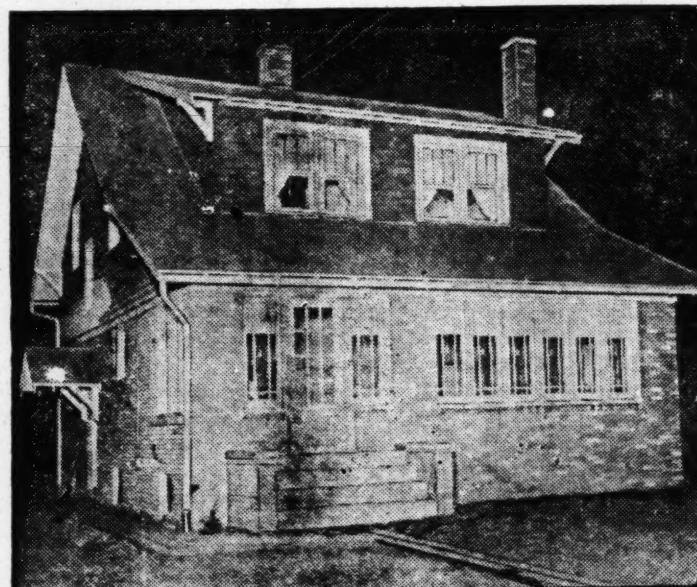

In the meanwhile the fight went on in behalf of Floyd Hewitt. Two days after the sentimental Remus jury ended its brief deliberations with a Christmas present to its idol in the dock, the state supreme court refused to review the Hewitt case and set January 6 for the execution.

Final appeals to the governor failed. As the hour approached, Brown pleaded with the governor to be allowed to throw the switch in the death house of the state penitentiary at Columbus. When that was denied, he asked to be allowed to witness the execution, so that he might go to the graves of his wife and child and say that he had seen Justice avenge their murders.

When this plea, too, was denied, Brown got as close to the scene as possible, outside the prison walls.

Shortly after 7 o'clock on the evening of January 6, Hewitt, still emotionless and silent, was led to the death chamber. He gave a startled look at the witnesses but still said nothing. And so he died.

The house in which the murder occurred. Fred Brown built it himself.

hit me with a poker, and it made me mad. I killed her. . . ."

Sheriff Frank Sheldon had solved his first murder case.

Hewitt willingly went over the scene and reenacted the double killing. Then he was locked up in the jail at Jefferson, the county seat. He appeared to have little interest in what was happening.

Early in April the trial started in Jefferson. Hewitt in the meantime had repudiated his confession. He sat stolidly in court, still exhibiting little interest in what was going on. Fred Brown, on the other hand, displayed deep emotion at mention of his murdered son's name.

The accused boy was tried for the murder of little Fred, not for the other killing, the state feeling there was more of a chance of gaining a first degree conviction in the second of the two crimes. Whatever the defense might argue in respect to the killing of Mrs. Brown as to provocation, could not be argued in respect to the killing of the child. That had been cold-blooded and deliberate.

On the opening day of the trial the divorced parents of Floyd both appeared in court to do what they might for the child they had borne. The mother sobbed frequently as the trial went on.

So young Hewitt went into the death house and the fight to save him went on.

In cases involving youthful murderers, Justice is usually embarrassed by sentimentalists. But for Hewitt there was but little sympathy. Every effort to save him from the chair was bitterly contested. Indeed, Governor Vic Donahey was swamped with petitions to hold firm and see that justice was done.

Apart from these petitions, there was another force at work. It frequently happens that murderers win we could and thence direct to St. Martin, for that was the name of the village which served the Pleydells' farm.

That Adele was in Austria seemed certain, for without her passport and against her will she could hardly be taken out; moreover, the countryside lent itself to violence, for much of it was most solitary, and the lives of its inhabitants were too strait for them to intrude upon matters with which they had no concern. I suppose there were constables of sorts, though I never saw one, except, of course, in the towns; and they would have shrugged their shoulders upon any business less homely than a breach of the local peace. For this, indeed, we were thankful, for official notice of the matter was the last thing we desired; this for more than one reason, but most of all because, so far from aiding, it would have put our enterprise in deadly peril.

I have no doubt at all that, had the police been called in, Adele would have paid with her life for their assistance. The fight was between us and "Rose" Noble, and the bare threat of an ally to whom, if he lost, "Rose" Noble would have to answer, would have been instantly silenced in the most dreadful and effective of ways. Another man might have balked at so detestable a crime, but "Rose" Noble was ruthless and would, I think, have slain ten pawns, had they stood in the way of his safety or revenge.

I verily believe it was this terrible quality, if, indeed, it can be so called, to which he owned his immunity, for, while "dead men tell no tales," it has but to be known that a man keeps that for his motto and those who have to do with him will tell none either.

It was midnight before we parted, and at 3 o'clock of the morning before I fell asleep but six hours later the coach builder was urging his men, and Carson and I were at work. Except that we drove to St. James' and back again, we labored incessantly till four, but, when I reported to Mansel at 5 o'clock, the cars were as ready for the road as the wit of man could make them and both were at hand in his garage by Stable Yard. There they were packed and loaded by Carson alone, and at half past six they were standing in Cleveland row.

Rowley and Bell were gone, so we were but four to travel as far as Dieppe; yet in a way we were five, for Tester, Mansel's sealyham, went with us, and, if he was but a dog, he was even better company than many a man.

He was fine to look at, strong and healthy, intelligent beyond belief. Given an order that he could appreciate, he would obey it to the death. He knew no fear, was quick and cheerful, would countenance no one but those his master had commended and worshipped Mansel himself with the most lively devotion that I have ever seen.

At a quarter to seven we passed out of Cleveland row.

We made no secret of our going, simply because it was a movement we could not hide: "All the same," said Mansel, "it doesn't much matter if they do send 'Rose' Noble a wire. He never expected that I should pay out of hand; but he means me to find it hopeless and then to put on the screw."

We dined at Newhaven and saw the cars taken on board; then we turned into our cabins to take what rest we could, for, though Mansel had not said so, we all four knew well that, until we were come to Carinthia, we should none of us sleep again.

* * *

The steward roused me by order half hour before we were due, and I came on deck to find a clear morning and two or three lights marking the coast of France.

Mansel had told me to breakfast before I left the boat, so after a turn or two, I went below, there to find him and Hanbury making a wretched meal.

Whilst I was waiting to join them, he gave me a map.

"We must keep together," he said; "but, as we can't see ahead, this is in case we part. Don't use it at all until then. I've marked the route in blue pencil, so that you can't go wrong. I'd better take the lead. I shall go pretty fast, but please try to keep me in sight. If I lose you, I shall slow up, but I don't want to have to do that. If you want to attract my attention, use your horn. I'll take Carson, to start with; but later we might make a change, and you or Hanbury drive for a while with me."

"First stop, Carinthia," said George.

We had already decided that, though we might rest at Paganec after our run, we should leave our baggage at Villach, at an inn which we knew; for not only was this town more central, but to have to "report progress," as we should if we stayed with the Pleydells, whenever we came or went would be intolerable.

This may seem a harsh decision, as they were so deeply concerned, but we should be dealing, we knew, with life and death, and that we should be hampered by any sort of obligation was not to be thought of. We did not expect, however, to have much use for a base, but to be constantly moving in search or pursuit of Adele; and this was why Mansel had been insistent that the cars should demand no attention, yet withstand incessant use.

As the boat entered the harbor we came on deck and presently made out Bell, who was standing with three officials on the edge of the quay. So soon as he saw us he pointed us out to his companions, one of whom boarded the steamer before she was fairly at rest. I met him with our papers, and, since they were what he came for, he took them without a word.

This was well enough, but the cars had to be unshipped, and, since the boat train was waiting, the ordinary registered baggage must, as always, be taken off first. That this would be a long business seemed very probable, for there was but one crane manned, and, as luck would have it, there were many passengers.

As the man who had taken our papers regained the quay the main gangways were run inboard, and I saw for the first time that Bell had a watch in his hand. A little way off was a lad in charge of a basket and a small stack of petrol cans.

"Full marks to Bell," said Mansel. "They're going to take the cars first.

And so, indeed, they did—such is the power of money.

Mansel's car was ashore before any of us, and, at a sign from Bell, the lad with the basket began to fill her tank. As the second car was landed the man who had taken our papers came running out some office with the documents stamped and signed, and, after a glance at our number plates, handed me back the wallet and raised his hat. Then our baggage was hastily chalked, and, as Mansel started his engine, Bell put away his watch.

"We're free to proceed, sir," he said, touching his hat. "By your leave, I'll pay them the money and find you outside."

"Well done, indeed," said Mansel. "How long have we been?"

"Just under a quarter of an hour, sir. I promised them five thousand if they did it in half an hour, and I said I'd double the money if they did it in half the time."

With that he disappeared and Hanbury started our engine; as Mansel, with Carson and Tester, drove off to quay.

The lad charged to fill our tank was a clumsy workman, so I told him to stand aside and did it myself, and George descended and helped me by taking the caps from the cans.

"You drive first," he said. "It won't be light for some time, and your eyes are keener than mine."

"Very well," said I.

The landing of the registered baggage was now in full swing, and the quay was alive with porters, bustling to and fro in the lamplight and making less progress than noise, and, since the baggage, itself was being swung over our heads, I was glad to screw its cap to the tank and to take my seat in the car.

Hanbury picked up the basket and followed me in.

The eastern sky was pale, but it was yet very dark.

Now as we were moving slowly towards the street I became aware of some paper upon which I seemed to have sat down. So soon as I had a free hand I plucked this from under my legs to find it a dirty envelope, bearing no superscription, but sealed.

"What's that?" said George, peering in.

"It must have fallen from the baggage," I said. "The nets passed over the car. See what it is. If it's a bill of lading we'd better give it back."

As Hanbury ripped open the envelope Bell stepped out of the shadows onto the running board.

"Captain Mansel's fifty yards on, sir; on the right of the street."

"Very good," said I, turning across the lines.

"It's not a bill of lading," said George sharply.

"What then?" said I setting a foot on the brake.

By way of answer he held it to the light of a lamp which illuminated the instrument board.

It was a half sheet of notepaper on which were printed four words.

The goods are perishable.

A New Serial About The Conquerors Club

By W. BOYCE MORGAN

"Positive," replied Bill emphatically.

INSTALMENT I.

The crack of the ash upon horsehide echoed across the Ferriston High school athletic field. Now and then the cry of a player or the sharp voice of Coach Edwards came to the ears of Bill Jenkins and Ruth Sauer as they sat in a window of the school building and watched one of the season's first practice sessions on the diamond.

The field was close enough that they could make out the forms of Bob Miller and Red Hopkins, the only two members of the Conquerors' club who were out for the baseball team. Bob and Red were the naturally athletic boys in the club. However Bill had proved a fine quarterback in football the fall before, and had shone as the brightest star of the sophomore class basketball team, while Porky Jones, the fourth member of the club, had made his mark in football also, in spite of his fat and his tendency to laziness.

Ruth put her hand on Bill's arm. "Bill," she said soberly, "are you sure you don't want to go out for baseball this spring?"

"Positive," replied Bill emphatically. "I've done enough in the sport line for one year. I'm no good at baseball anyway."

"But you didn't know you were any good at football either until Bob made you go out. Nor for basketball."

"I know. But baseball is different. I just wouldn't be any good at it, that's all."

"Well," said Ruth satisfied, "I just wanted you to be sure. I didn't want to think that I had kept you off the team."

Bill grinned. "Don't worry about that!" he said. "You know Bob wouldn't let you do it. He thinks a lot of you, Ruth, but he's unmerciful when it comes to making a fellow take part in school affairs. He's a great class president—and a great Conquerors' club president, too."

Bob Miller didn't know so many nice things were being said about him, for at that moment he was very busy on the baseball field. In fact, at that very instant Coach Edwards was saying to him, none too gently, "Don't be so anxious, Bob. Remember it's early in the season. You'll never be a good pitcher if you don't learn to save your arm. Now toss a few more down to Whistler, and toss them slowly."

"Sorry, Coach," said Bob, grinning good humoredly at the young man. "I just can't help wanting to burn them over."

"Well, you've got lots of speed, but you'll have plenty of chance to use it before the season is over. Remember that I have only one pitcher this year, and you've got to develop into my other one. Ed Sand is good, but a team can't play a season with only one pitcher."

"I know," said Bob. "I'll take it easy."

Coach Edwards moved over to another part of the diamond, where other members of the squad were having batting practice. At the moment Red Hopkins was standing in front of the screen while Ed Sand, pitcher and captain of the team, was tossing the ball up to him.

The coach watched Red catch a pitch at shoulder height and drive it far out into the field.

"Good boy, Red," he said. "If you can field as well as you can hit we'll find a place for you on this team."

A few minutes later practice was finished for the day, and Red and Bob trotted toward the school side by side. Suddenly they heard a great puffing behind them. They turned around to find Porky beckoning to them wearily. They stopped to wait for him.

"For cat's sake," gasped the fat boy as he finally caught up to them. "Where's the fire? I've been trying to catch you ever since you left the field."

"Where were you?" inquired Red.

"Up in the stands watching you future big leaguers paste the pill about the pasture," said Porky, recovering his breath somewhat. "Do you think that you'll ever amount to anything?"

"We'll amount to more than you unless they figure success by so many tons on the hoof," replied Red sarcastically.

Bob grinned. "You'll never get that fat off again until football season, I guess, Porky."

"I guess not," said Porky complacently. "But why worry? Nobody loves a fat man, so I'm not learnable by girls chasing me."

They had reached the school building, and now entered the locker room. "Speaking of girls," said Red. "It looks to me as though our Bill and his Ruth would have the leading parts in the class play. The tryouts are going on this afternoon, you know."

"No fooling?" said Bob. "What say we hurry and get dressed and go up and watch them?"

The boys agreed, and a few minutes later they entered the auditorium, where all the members of the sophomore class who were interested in the stage were gathered for the tryouts. Bill, seated near the stage, saw them as they entered, and motioned them forward. They quickly joined him and Ruth.

"What's the matter?" asked Bob. "Is it all over?"

"Yes, everybody has tried out," said Bill. "We're just waiting now for Miss Haines to announce who gets the parts."

"I guess there's not much doubt about the leading lady," said Porky. "They'll naturally give it to Ruth, the best looking girl in the class. But if they choose a ham like you as leading man, I ought to be in the movies."

"That's an idea," said Bill quickly. "You'd make a perfect target for a custard pie."

Further banter was cut short by the appearance of Miss Haines, sophomore English instructor. Sudden silence fell among the chattering students in the auditorium.

"I will now announce the parts," said the English teacher. "Miss Louise Fabian, the leading lady, will be played by Ruth Sauer. James Wentworth, the leading man, will be played by William Jenkins."

"William Jenkins," snorted Porky. "Oh I'll bet she means Bill here."

Then while Miss Haines continued to read the cast, they congratulated Bill and Ruth in whispers. However, their attention was finally caught by the teacher when she announced that nobody had been found suitable for the part of Byron Farmer, the villain in the piece to be put on as the class play.

"If anybody who didn't try out for that part cares to do so now, I'll be glad to consider him," finished Miss Haines. Two or three boys stepped forward.

"Why don't you try out, Bob?" said Ruth with a smile. "You'd make a handsome villain."

"No, thanks, I'm no actor," declined Bob, grinning. "Porky here might do it if he weren't so rolypoly, but who ever saw a fat villain?"

"How about you, Red?" said Bill. "You'd make a good villain, with your red hair and deep voice."

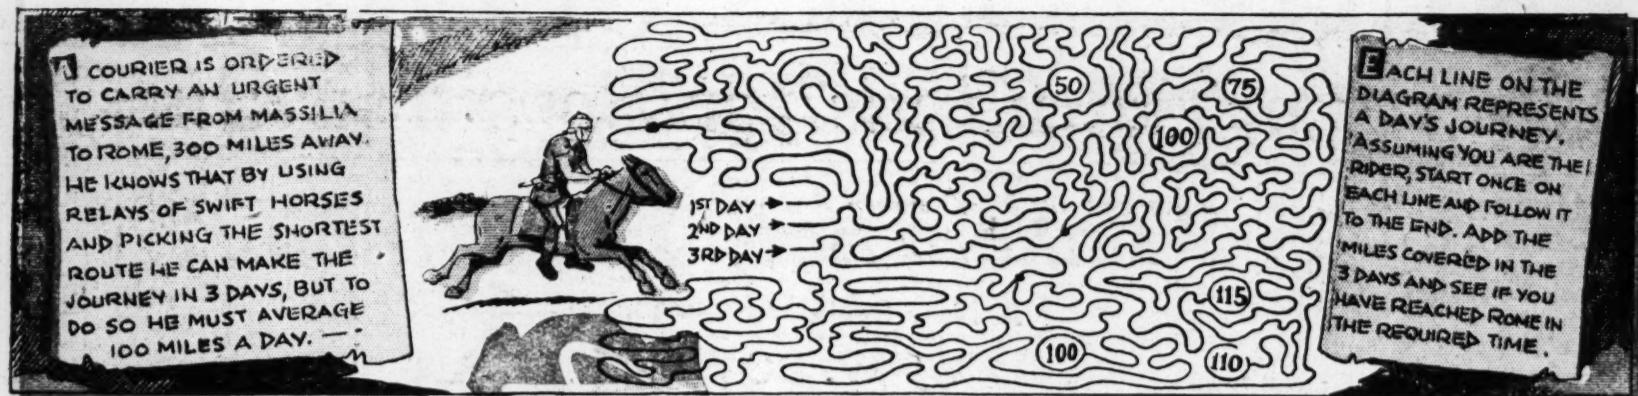

The others immediately took up the idea. "Go ahead, Red," they urged. "It would be great." "You can handle it and baseball, too." "Go on up and try it out, anyway." "Dare you to. Bet you're afraid."

The last challenge was from Porky. Good humoredly Red jumped to his feet. "Oh, all right," he said. "I'll try it."

Ten minutes later Miss Haines again demanded silence. Then, as she announced that Red had been chosen as the villain, Ruth and the three Conquerors shouted with glee.

"Hooray!" yelled Red, clapping the astonished boy on the back. "Here's where I get my long-wanted chance to hit you with an ancient egg!"

WATCH YOUR STEP

We all like to be out of doors in spring. It's great to be able to run about and play, with the sun shining and the air balmy. And we rather resent it when somebody keeps saying to us "Be Careful!"

Nevertheless, we need to be told to be careful. Every year thousands of boys and girls in America are killed and injured by automobiles. It is not safe to play in the streets these days, nor to run across them carelessly.

Boys and girls have to be eternally watchful, just as men and women do. That's the price of living in this day of wonderful inventions. If we wish to live to enjoy the wonders of the Twentieth Century, we simply must "play safe" with its dangers.

Learn to look before crossing the street. Don't play ball where autos are traveling. The minute of caution may save you years of misery.

American Woman Honored.

The University of Berlin recently honored Mrs. Shepard Morgan, formerly Barbara Spofford, of New York, by conferring on her the degree of doctor of philosophy. This is the first time a woman has ever received this distinction. Mrs. Morgan is a graduate of Bryn Mawr college, and the wife of an economic statistician in the office of the reparations agent.

WATCH FOR THEM!

Do You Know What Happens in Sleep?

When we are asleep we are perfectly unconscious and cannot keep track of the passage of time, so that when we wake up it seems to us that we have been asleep only a minute. All the time that one is awake and expending energy, little germs are being sent to the brain which are recorded or collected until enough are there to give us the signal that it is time to sleep. Then, as we sleep and get rested, the little germs are scattered, and when we have had sufficient rest, we wake up naturally.

Brain Originates Dreams.

The dreams we have when we are asleep are a wise provision of nature to keep us from waking. Usually when we dream it means something is touching us or pressing us. We may dream of skating or snowstorms if we have become uncovered in the night and the brain realizes the sensation of cold.

Dreams originate in the brain. When only part of the brain is awake, we dream but vaguely, and the next morning we are not likely to remember that we have dreamed at all, but when we remember our dream, it means that a large part of our brain was awake. You are very likely to dream just before you wake in the morning, as your brain gradually comes to consciousness after hours of rest.

Disturbances Causes Nightmares.

Indigestion acts the same toward producing dreams as an outward discomfort, such as a cramped arm or a lumpy mattress. But often such dreams are more violent than ordinary ones, and are called nightmares. Then the brain is unnaturally roused and the visions become so distorted as to frighten us and make us cry and scream with terror.

INCONVENIENT.

"Too bad Shakespeare wasn't born in London."

"Why so?"

"I said he was, on that exam."

Don't criticize the lowly black sheep. He is only a poor fellow of the flock who doesn't know any way to go but wrong.

The Society for the Prevention of Useless Christmas Gifts must have failed terribly last year. Just look at the crime wave!

AROUND THE WORLD

THE MOUNTAINS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

While it is true that Asia and Europe have higher mountains than we have in America, the western hemisphere is rich in mountain peaks and mountain scenery, some of it as beautiful as one can find anywhere in the world.

In British Columbia, which is the extreme western province of Canada, there is an almost unbroken stretch of mountains from its eastern border, near the city of Calgary in Alberta, to the city of Vancouver on an arm of the Pacific. For seven hundred miles along the lines of railroad that traverse this region, the traveler is in the midst of gigantic peaks, glaciers, roaring rivers, waterfalls, inland lakes and the densest of forests.

Tourists visit this region in ever increasing numbers every year, even in winter time. In fact, many believe the winter to be the best time in which to view the glories of this mountain country. It is the time of

Something to Do

DALE R. VAN HORN

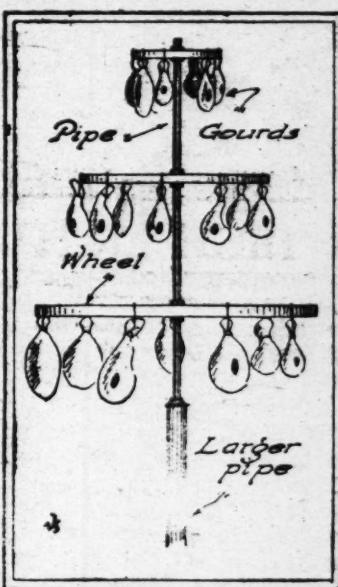

Cluster Bird Houses

Old gourds make ideal bird houses and when arranged on one, two or even three wheels which are, in turn, mounted on a vertical gas pipe, make the cluster of houses shown. One of these set up in your back yard will keep you in songsters all summer long. Those which are not inhabited by mid-summer can be taken down or exchanged for others which the birds seem to like.

The gourds should be thoroughly dry. Select those which are wholly sound and seem to have thick side walls. A little shaking will loosen most of the seeds inside. Cut a round hole, usually one and one-half inches in diameter. The hole can be cut with a keyhole saw. Remove the seeds, then punch a smaller hole through both sides near the top.

Set a gas pipe firmly in the ground. Then mount the wheels—of varying sizes—upon a smaller pipe and set a lower end of this pipe in the upper end of the larger one and pack with cement. A reduction nipple can be used if the pipe ends are threaded.

Small pins, driven through the smaller pipes under the wheel hubs, will hold them in place and will permit them to turn in the wind.

THE OLD TRAPPERS' LANGUAGE

By EL COMANCHO

IKPOOIE—Pronounce IK-POOH-EE. This word means to Shut, Close Up, Stop Up, and Obstruct, and is not often used. MAMOOK IKPOOIE YAHKA LAPOTE is "Make shut the door."

INAPOO—Pronounce IN-AY-POO, accenting the first syllable. This is the Chinook word for Louse or Tick, and with SOOPENA (jump) as a prefix, means Flea. Do not confuse it with ENAPOO, the word for Musk-

IPSOOT—Pronounce as spelled, drawing out the T. This means Hidden or Secret. Alone it stands for a secret, but combined with other words it may mean to Hide or to Keep Secret.

ITLWILLIE—Pronounce IT-TELL-WILLY, accenting IT. The word is used for meat and nothing else. MOOS-MOOS ITL-WILLIE is Cow-meat, or Beef, and MOWITCH ITLWILLIE is Deer-meat, or Venison.

ITSWOOT—Pronounce as though spelled ITS-WOO-TT, holding the final T but accenting the first syllable. This is the Chinook word for the Black Bear, and stands for it and nothing else.

ICTAS—Pronounce the I as in It, and the A as in Ha, saying IK-TAHS-S8, with a hissing sound at the end. The word means Things, Property, Possessions, Belongings, etc., used mainly to mean Personal Property. Thus KAH NIKA ICTAS is "Where are my things?" and KAH NIKA TIKA OKEOKE ICTAS is "Where shall I put these things?"

Do not confuse this word with ICTA, which means What.

ICT—Pronounce as spelled. This word is the number One in Chinook, and means nothing else. ICT CANOE CHACO is "One canoe comes."

ILLAHEE—Pronounce the A as in Ape and accent the first syllable. This is the word for earth, land, or ground, with qualifying words often used to determine the kind of earth meant. Thus OKEOKE NIKA ILLAHEE means "This is my home land," and COPO POLALIE ILLAHEE means "In the sand." Literally POLALIE ILLAHEE is Powder Ground, and is used to mean sand, dust, powdered rock, etc. MOOS-MOOS MUCKAMUCK ILLAHEE is Cow Pasture, (literally, "Cow, where she eats, land.")

SEASON OF MELODY ONLY ONE WEEK OFF

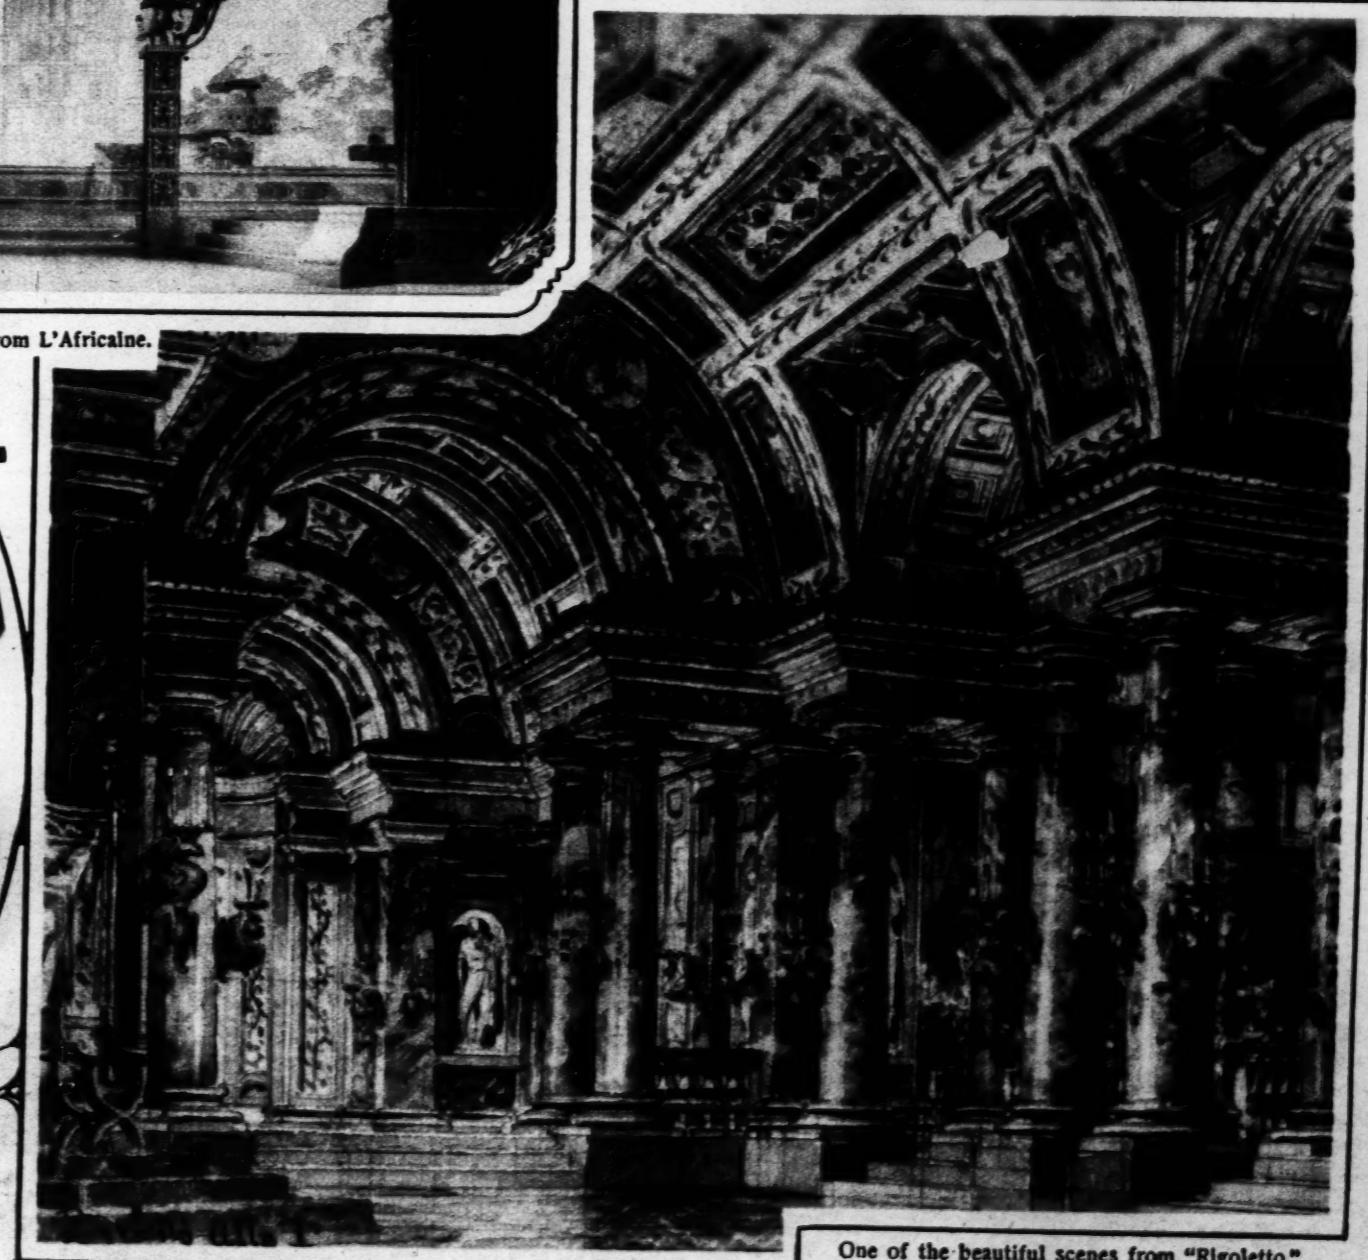

Next Sunday will witness the arrival of the first songbirds of the Metropolitan Grand Opera company on their annual spring pilgrimage to Atlanta for a week of opera at the municipal auditorium. Interest in opera this year is reported at record height, due to the excellence of the program promised Atlanta and the many festive events planned in connection with the week. The accompanying group of stars will appear in the operas to be presented here.

What the---?

Don't be alarmed, gentle reader; there's nothing wrong with your eyesight. A photographer with a rare sense of humor merely set out to demonstrate the queer tricks that a camera lens can play when objects pictured are out of proper perspective. He certainly succeeded, as the accompanying group of pictures by Herbert shows.

"HOWDY DO," says this young lady, and in making her bow the camera caught her at an unusual angle. You see the result.

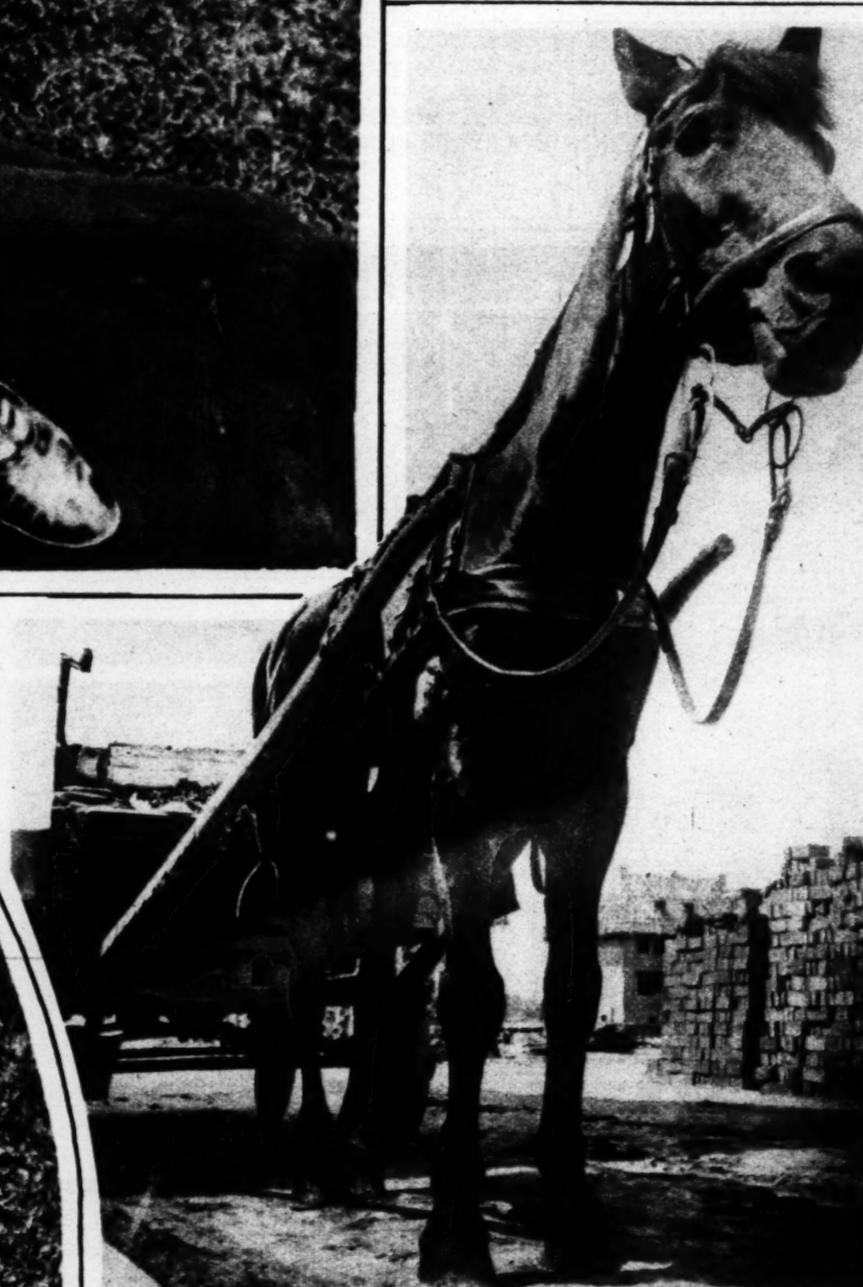

AMPLE UNDERSTANDING—That's what this gent appears to have, but in reality his feet are normal size. The camera merely makes them look this way.

BORN TO BE A TRAFFIC COP—Just another trick of the lens, the open hand being thrust far forward and its owner's true proportions distorted.

LOOK PLEASANT, PLEASE—Here's the freak cameraman himself, fallen victim to his own idea of "distorting the true facts."

JUST A TRICK OF THE TRADE enabled the photographer to give this lumber wagon nag mastodonic dimensions.

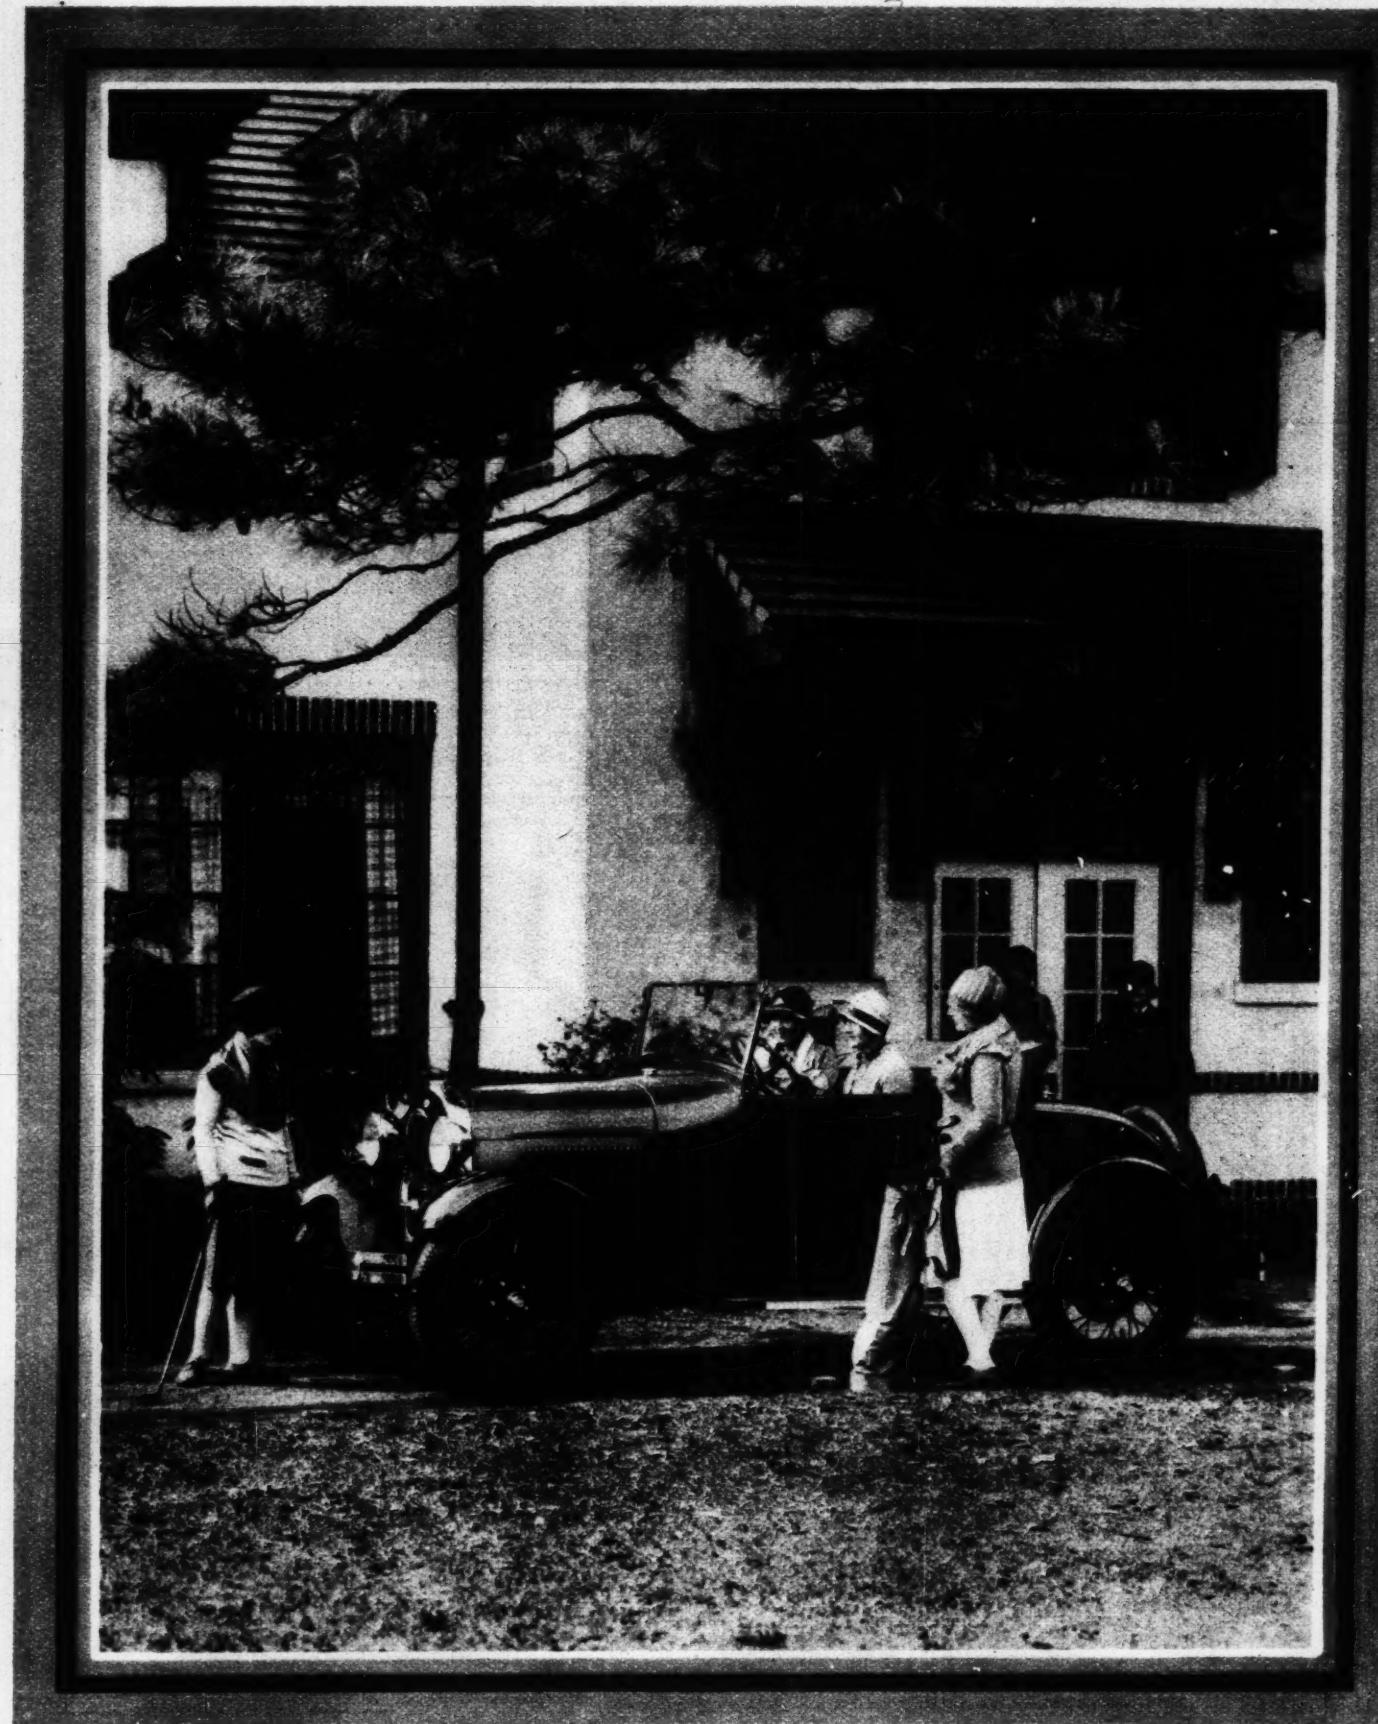

GULLIVER ON MAIN STREET?—No just a normal man pushing a normal wheelbarrow, with the camera at a freak angle.

NOW ON THE OTHER HAND—This gent has all the earmarks—or rather "handmarks"—of a professional public speaker or a street beggar. Again it's the camera kidding you.

TRY A LITTLE TEA?—The dish which this woman holds forth appears to be of monster size, but in reality it's just an ordinary one.

Forty different kinds of steel are used in the New Ford

THE new Ford is an unusually strong and sturdy car because of the enduring quality that has been built into every part. Of especial interest and importance to every motorist is the extensive use of fine steel in the new Ford.

The story of Ford steel dates back to 1905, when the Ford Motor Company developed the use of a new alloy which raised the tensile strength of steel from 60,000 to 170,000 pounds per inch.

This was the beginning of the Ford idea of using specific steels for specific parts—an idea which has perhaps its highest expression in the new car.

In the past twenty-three years the Ford Motor Company has developed many new uses for steel and has greatly reduced its cost by purchasing its own ore mines and by designing new machines and finding new ways to produce steel at low cost. The Ford open hearth furnaces have a yearly capacity of 420,000 tons of steel. The quality and uniformity of this steel are held to even closer limits than those specified by the Society of Automotive Engineers and the American Society for Testing Materials.

The new Ford Tudor Sedan is an especially good family car because of its speed, safety, reliability, economy, easy-riding comfort, and the generous room provided for all five passengers.

Today, more than forty different kinds of steel are used in the new Ford—each particular kind being selected and perfected to fit the particular needs of each part.

Seven kinds of steel are used in the gears alone in the new Ford because research and experience have proved that seven kinds of steel mean greater efficiency and reliability than one or two. Two kinds of steel are used in the multiple dry-disc clutch, although it could very easily be made with one. One kind of steel is also used for the ring gear and another for the driving pinion. Though these two parts meet, each does a different kind of work. In common practice, the same kind of steel would be used for each part. But Ford uses different kinds of steel—each steel being specially made for the special work it has to do.

There is no limit to selection—no thought that any certain steel must be made to do for many parts to save expense. The Ford policy has always been to use the best possible material for each part, and then through large production, to give it to the public at low cost.

As important as the steel itself is the Ford method of heat-treating steel by automatic control so that the same piece of steel will have different qualities at different points.

The rear axle shaft in the new Ford is especially strong and reliable for this reason. Being complete in one piece, it is naturally stronger than if the parts were made separately. This same one-piece principle is carried out also in the steering gear sector, which is integral with the steering shaft—in the bolts on the connecting rod which are made in the same piece with the rod itself—and in many other parts of the new Ford car.

Throughout the new Ford you will find that steel forgings are used instead of malleable castings and steel stampings. They are used everywhere in the chassis except, of course, for the engine castings. More steel forgings are used in the new Ford, in fact, than in almost any other car, regardless of price. They are naturally of greater strength than malleable castings and steel

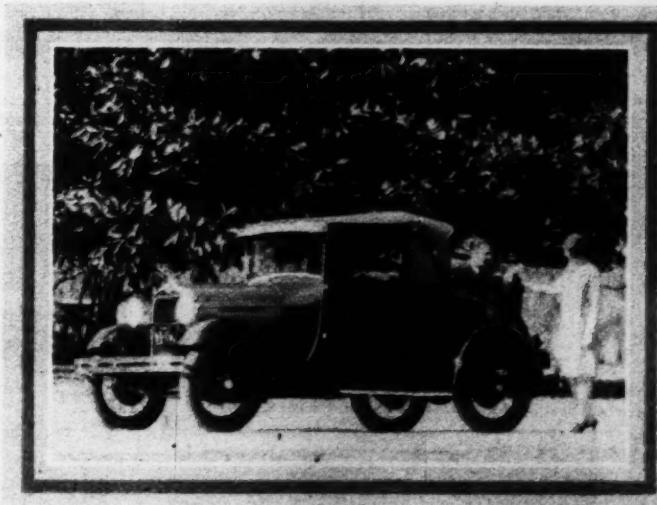

The new Ford Roadster is an especially alert and capable car. Quick as a flash in traffic and at home in any company because of its beautiful low lines and attractive colors. Like all the new Ford cars, it has a Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield—an important safety feature.

stampings of equal size. The use of steel forgings explains why the new Ford is such a strong and sturdy car, yet comparatively light in weight.

Such high quality of material has a direct bearing on the performance of the new Ford car and is the reason it will give you thousands upon thousands of miles of faithful, uninterrupted service.

When you sit behind the wheel and know the joy of driving the new Ford, you will realize that it is not just a new automobile—not just a new model—but the advanced expression of a wholly new idea in modern, economical transportation.

The Roadster sells for $385; the Phaeton for $395; the Coupe for $495; the Tudor Sedan for $495; and the Sport Coupe, with rumble seat, for $550. (F. O. B. Detroit.)

A new kind of motor car beauty is revealed in this new Ford Sport Coupe. Distinguished by the quiet simplicity of its lines and rich appointments. Body is steel. Furnished in a choice of two-tone color harmonies.

to Bring Back Color to

FREE—One Complete Restoration

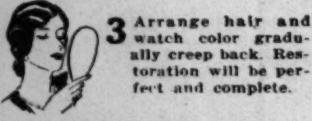

HERE IS SAFE WAY

1 You try it first on a single lock of hair to see what it does. Thus have no fear of results.

2 Then simply comb this water-like liquid through your hair. Clean...safe. Takes only 7 or 8 minutes.

3 Apply hair and watch color gradually come back. Restoration will be perfect and complete.

INSTEAD of dangerous "crude dyes" that do not fool anyone, you now call back the original girlhood color to your hair. Simply comb in a clear, water-like liquid that gives natural shade.

This scientific way, called Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer, defies detection. 3,000,000 women have used it. Makes hair live looking and lustrous. Will not wash off. May be applied only to gray parts. Keeps hair easy to curl.

Test free by sending coupon—or go to nearest drug store. Few cents' worth restores color perfectly. Money returned if not amazed.

When Fat Departs new beauty comes, new youth, new health

Excess fat is a bane to beauty, to health, to longevity and youth. Any man or woman who fails to correct it limits the joys of life. But get the results in the right way. Not by abnormal exercise or diet, for such extremes are dangerous. Combat the "gang"! Modern science has found that it often lies in a gland deficiency—in a gland which assists nutrition. And physicians the world over now treat obesity by supplying that lack.

When this discovery was made, a great American laboratory embodied that help in Marmola prescription tablets. They have now been used for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. Users have told others, until the use has grown to nearly 5,000,000 tablets a month.

All can see the results in every circle. Excess fat is disappearing fast. Almost until weight comes down to normal. The way is easy, pleasant, scientific, real.

Start today, for your own sake, and watch the results. Learn what others have learned in the 20 years of Marmola. Your whole life may be changed by this test.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1.00 a box. Any druggist who is out will order from his distributor.

COLOR, particularly in the summer, is essential to the truly modern home. The sombre hue and sombre mien of former days are gone—and in their place come sunshine, light and laughter.

These beautiful new Valway Sun-tones and Colorsports Rugs abound in color. There are exquisite harmonies of pastel greens and rose; Persian yellows of striking appeal; Chinese and Mediterranean blues.

And you find them in designs that reveal the new creative art of home decoration at its best. Patterns of flowers in the modern formal panels, over fishnet designs, formal panels, elaborate medallions, and restful "cottage" types. Gay patterns for the nursery, the sun-porch, the cordial entrance-hall. And others more restrained for those rooms where formality may be desired.
